

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. PREFACE

THIS series of "Lessons in English" comprises two books. BOOK I, intended to be used within the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth grades, covers either two or three years, according to the amount of time allowed for language work, the age of the pupils, and their previous training.

BOOK II contains a systematic course in grammar and a series of lessons in composition. It amply provides for the English work of the three higher grammar grades.

In the preparation of BOOK I the design has been —

(1) To create a liking for good literature by presenting worthy selections to be read, studied, copied, and learned.

(2) To help children to talk and write more freely about the many things that they see or know. Suggestive questions have been asked, in order to stimulate thought, to develop clear ideas, and to enable the learner to report more readily, both orally and in writing, what he has discovered. Provision has been made for a great amount of practice in talking and writing. Pains have been taken also to give life, point, and interest to the exercises in composition by varying the method of presentation, and particularly by providing a definite reader or hearer to whom the pupil may address himself.

(3) To make children more and more observing — especially in the field of natural science — adding to their knowledge, and leading them to find out for themselves. Many illustrations are set before the children for descriptive and imaginative writing, and help is given in the form of leading questions.

(4) To make correct expression habitual, by calling for frequent repetition of the right forms, and by constantly suppressing the wrong.

(5) To secure the use of correct written forms by giving models for imitation, and by leading up to simple rules for the use of capitals, punctuation-marks, and word-forms, with examples and much work for practice.

(6) To give some acquaintance with the elementary principles of grammar.

In BOOK II the aim has been —

(1) To place before the student an orderly and intelligible statement of the principles that determine the structure of words and sentences, and at the same time to furnish exercises for practice in the application of those principles.

(2) To continue upon a higher plane the work in composition pursued in the lower grades.

Part I deals somewhat at length with the sentence as the structural unit in the use of language, because a knowledge of its elements and their relation one to another must logically precede any detailed study of words and their forms. The parts of speech are briefly treated in this connection to give an intelligent idea of the composition and character of the elements of sentences, as well as to show that classification and inflection depend upon use.

Part II presents the parts of speech with considerable fullness of detail in their classes, inflection, and syntax. Teachers will, of course, discriminate between what is to be learned and what is given only for reference. Attention is called to the treatment of case; to the unusually full presentation of infinitives and participles; to the tabulated summaries at the close of chapters for purposes of review; and to standard literary selections for study.

Throughout the grammar, sentences for illustration and study are given in abundance. That the student may learn that the rules that govern form, structure, and good usage are general in their application, they have been intentionally drawn both from literature and from the language of ordinary intercourse.

Part III is a systematic course in composition. It is not intended to be merely an addendum to the grammar, nor a series of talks about rhetoric. It provides for continuous and progressive practice in those kinds of writing and speaking which are most suitable for children at this stage of their school life.

Though both composition and grammar contribute in greater or less degree to the same end — the ability to use language intelligently and efficiently — yet they differ essentially in their character and method of treatment. For this reason, in the arrangement of the book no attempt has been made to intermingle exercises in composition with work in grammar. The lessons have been so framed, however, that they may either be assigned in connection with Parts I and II or may be used as an independent course.

In both composition and grammar special emphasis has been laid on the choice of the proper word. The tendency towards freedom, if not looseness, in the use of forms, and the disposition to ignore certain well-established rules on the part of latter-day writers and speakers, have been discouraged by pretty close adherence to the usage of those who are striving to maintain the highest standards.

Although these books contain much that is new and un-hackneyed, they are not untried. The material which they contain has been tested in many schools under widely different conditions, and has been found workable. These "Lessons in English" do not come before the school public, therefore, as strangers knocking at the door and waiting to be introduced; they appear rather as familiar friends renewing old acquaintance and seeking a wider recognition in a circle where they have already made their standing good.

The authors are indebted to the following publishers and authors for permission to use copyrighted material: To Miss Margaret Lee Ashley, and Harper and Brothers for the poem "The Wind," which originally appeared in Harper's Magazine; to Harper and Brothers for the illustration Weapons and Utensils of the Cliff Men; to Charles Scribner's Sons for the excerpt from J. G. Holland's "Babyhood"; to the Cyrus T. Clark Co., Decorators, for the illustration An Interesting Subject; to Houghton, Mifflin & Co. for selections from J. T. Trowbridge's "Midsummer" and "Midwinter"; to the Whitaker & Ray Company for Joaquin Miller's "Columbus"; to Mr. James Whitcomb Riley and the Bobbs-Merrill Company for "The Prayer Perfect"; to the Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co. and William H. Hayne for a selection from Paul Hamilton Hayne's "Will and I"; to Mr. A. W. Munford for permission to reproduce the picture of the Baltimore Oriole's Nest; to the Youth's Companion for the illustration The Pony. The authors are also under obligation to many teachers and school officials who have kindly read the proofs and made valuable suggestions.

TO TEACHERS

THESE books presuppose a wise and capable teacher who will use them with the attainments and needs of her pupils in mind, omitting here and supplementing there according to varying conditions.

Too many teachers think of a text-book as a kind of machine-gun, built to fire with deadly precision so many loads a minute. This is a vicious error. A text-book should be the teacher's friend, guide, and helper. It may be a powerful aid and resource; it can never take the place of the teacher's personal enthusiasm, sympathy, and stimulus.

In these books teachers will find a great variety of material which they can use in accordance with their best judgment. Exercises are given for copying, for dictation, for reproduction of what has been learned, or read, or heard; for picture study and description; for letter-writing; for recording the results of observation and experience; for the use of words and their synonyms; for practice in the use of correct forms. Selections from the best literature are given to be studied and learned, and to furnish suggestions for kindred work from the school readers; ample provision is made for the correlation of nature work with language; and the elements of grammar are inductively presented.

The lessons are not of uniform length; they are graded, and those of a kind are arranged accordingly; but, in general, they are not dependent consecutively one upon another. The order of them, therefore, may often be changed at discretion; some may be omitted, some divided; others may be amplified and dwelt upon.

The inductive method has been followed throughout. A right use of the suggestive questions will lead to habits of thought, observation, and investigation along given lines. Other questions may be added, but the direct imparting of information will not often be necessary.

Oral lessons should precede and outnumber written lessons. Each exercise should be the subject of conversation and study before any attempt is made to write it.

An especial effort should be made by the teacher to see that the child's thought is clear and distinct in his own mind. The first thoughts of children are, and perhaps ought to be, more or less hazy. It is the business of the teacher in English to dissipate the fog, to disentangle confused ideas, to induce habits of clear and orderly thinking. Much can be accomplished toward this end by training the child from the start to grasp firmly the units of discourse, — the sentence, the paragraph, and the whole composition. This does not mean that children are to learn to talk about these things, but that they must somehow gradually acquire a sense for them.

A final word of caution may not be out of place. Teachers of English are apt to attach much importance to the formal side of their instruction and to assume that a pupil's facility in reciting rules and detecting errors of speech is a sure sign of progress. The formal side must not, of course, be overlooked, but it should never be forgotten that the end of all instruction in English is growth in power of expression and appreciation. Drill which contributes to this end is good. Drill which, falling short of this end, merely fills the child's mind with rules and symbols, is a grievous waste of time.

BOOK TWO

PART ONE

SENTENCE-STRUCTURE

CHAPTER I

THE SENTENCE: KINDS

1. When we converse with one another or write letters to our friends, the words that belong together fall into groups, each group expressing a single complete thought.

2. If we were to go into the woods together, we might say —

1. I should like to come here every day.
2. Are there any flowers there?
3. Listen to the brook.

Writing to a friend, we might say —

4. I am coming home tomorrow.
5. Will you meet me at the station?
6. Please show this letter to mother.

Such groups of words are called sentences.

3. A sentence is a group of words expressing a single complete thought.

4. Let us see for what purpose each of these sentences is used.

Read sentences 1 and 4. In these we say what we know or believe.

Read sentences 2 and 5. In these we do not say that anything does or is so and so, we only ask about it; and in sentences 3 and 6 we request or order something to be done. Can you express a thought clearly without a sentence?

Exercise 1.—1. Write two questions that might be asked after a great fire. Two commands that might be given. Two statements that might be made.

2. Write two sentences of each kind as if you were on a railway train.

Any other sentences we could make would do one of these three things — assert, ask, or order. Hence we say that —

5. Sentences are complete assertions, questions, or commands.

Exercise 2. — 1. What is the meaning of “assert”?

2. Make assertions in answer to the two questions in § 2.

3. Make replies to the two requests.

4. Change the two assertions to questions.

Exercise 3.—1. Think about each of these groups of words, and then tell whether it is a complete sentence or only part of one. Give your reason thus:

“Green with leaves” is not a sentence, because it does not form a statement, question, or command.

- | | |
|------------------------------------|--|
| 1. A fine October morning. | 10. We set them on fire. |
| 2. The leaves are red and green. | 11. O such a blaze! |
| 3. And some yellow. | 12. The smoke filled the air. |
| 4. Here are some purplish ones. | 13. A strong wind from the north-west. |
| 5. None are brown. | 14. Let us try to find some nuts. |
| 6. The trees in the swamps. | 15. If it rains. |
| 7. Very few flowers remain. | 16. Three gray squirrels in a hollow tree. |
| 8. All along the road to the pond. | |
| 9. Found twenty dead trees. | |

2. Change those of the preceding groups that are only parts of sentences, into complete sentences by using additional words.

3. Tell in your own words what they are all about, as if you were telling a story.

6. We have seen that every sentence either asserts or asks or orders. Hence we say that —

There are three kinds of sentences. We call them assertive, interrogative, and imperative.

We shall learn later that sentences are also classified according to their forms.

7. An Assertive Sentence states a fact or an opinion.

As—The old cat is washing her face. It will rain tomorrow.

8. An Interrogative Sentence asks a question.

As—Will it rain tomorrow?

9. An Imperative Sentence gives a command, makes a request, or expresses a wish.

As—Rain, rain, go away. Please pass me the sugar. May you live long and be happy.

Exercise 4. — 1. After reading each of these sentences, tell whether it is assertive, interrogative, or imperative. Give your reason thus:

“Cheer up” is an imperative sentence, because it gives a command.

- | | |
|---|----------------------------------|
| 1. Have you ever heard of Australia? | 7. Do you really mean it? |
| 2. That's a strange question. Of course I have. | 8. Tell me. |
| 3. Do not be provoked. | 9. How long should we stay? |
| 4. I am going there next month. | 10. Think how I should enjoy it. |
| 5. Should you like to be my companion? | 11. You will take me. |
| 6. Indeed I should. | 12. Won't you say yes? |
| | 13. O I must go! |
| | 14. Stop! |
| | 15. Remember how far it is. |

2. Listen to the reading of sentences by your teacher, and tell the kind of each as you hear it.

3. Classify the sentences in any of the subsequent exercises in this book.

4. What does “interrogative” mean?

10. Exclamations. Sentences of any of these three classes may also be exclamatory; that is, they may also express excitement, surprise, impatience, etc. For example:

ASSERTIVE: 'Tis false! There he goes!

INTERROGATIVE: Who would be afraid!

IMPERATIVE: Come on! Keep your courage up!

Exercise 5. — Which of the sentences in Ex. 4 are also exclamatory? What kind of sentence is each of these?

- | | |
|--------------------------|---------------------------------|
| 1. Hark! | 5. Rouse, ye Romans! |
| 2. Who cares! | 6. May Heaven bless you! |
| 3. Do come here! | 7. What do you say, you rascal! |
| 4. We shall be so happy! | 8. Who would have believed it! |

11. If there are any purely exclamatory sentences, they are such as begin with how or what, like —

How many colors the sunset shows!

What a long ride it would be to the moon!

but in many cases they are really shortened forms of command sentences — See how many colors, etc. Think what a long ride, etc.

CHAPTER II

SUBJECT AND PREDICATE

A. THE SUBJECT

12. Every assertive sentence must of course be an assertion about something. Whenever we make a statement, we say that something is or does so and so.

Exercise 6. — Read each sentence, and tell what the statement is about.

- | | | |
|----------------------|-----------------------|-----------------------|
| 1. Embers glow. | 5. Dewdrops glisten. | 9. Candles flicker. |
| 2. Opals gleam. | 6. Sunsets flame. | 10. Torches blaze. |
| 3. Fire-flies glint. | 7. Lamps flare. | 11. Diamonds sparkle. |
| 4. Gold glitters. | 8. Lightning flashes. | 12. Stars twinkle. |

13. The part of the sentence that names what we speak of is called the subject. Thus, in the sentence, Bees hum, we speak of bees, and the word bees is the subject.

Exercise 7. — What is the subject in the following sentences? Give your reason thus :

“Horses neigh.” In this sentence the word “horses” is the subject, because it names what we speak of.

- | | | |
|--------------------|------------------|------------------|
| 1. Sparrows chirp. | 4. Owls screech. | 7. Doves coo. |
| 2. Chickens peep. | 5. Crows caw. | 8. Geese cackle. |
| 3. Cocks crow. | 6. Larks sing. | 9. Hens cluck. |

14. In the following sentences the same statement is made about four different things:

Butterflies find honey in flowers.

Honey-bees find honey in flowers.

Swift humming-birds find honey in flowers.

Great burly bumble-bees find honey in flowers.

Read the subject of each one, and tell how many words are used in forming it.

Exercise 8. — What is the subject in each sentence? Give your reason thus :

"The deep blue sea flows round the world." In this sentence the words "The deep blue sea" are the subject, for they name that which we speak of.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. The ocean is bitter and salt. | 7. A polar bear could be seen amidst the ice and snow. |
| 2. The wind was dying away. | 8. The strongest ships are often crushed in the ice-floes. |
| 3. Large and small fishes came to the surface to breathe. | 9. Whale-fishing is a dangerous occupation. |
| 4. Several whales were spouting. | 10. D is the first letter of danger and of death. |
| 5. Seven icebergs were drifting past. | |
| 6. What sign of life was there? | |

15. The Subject of a sentence names that about which something is said.

B. THE PREDICATE

16. In every assertive sentence something is said about one thing or another.

Exercise 9. — What is said of the things named in each of these sentences?

- | | | |
|------------------|--------------------|-------------------|
| 1. Clouds float. | 5. Hail rattles. | 9. Breakers roar. |
| 2. Rain falls. | 6. Water splashes. | 10. Billows roll. |
| 3. Sleet drives. | 7. Winds blow. | 11. Oceans surge. |
| 4. Snow drifts. | 8. Waves break. | 12. Tides flow. |

17. This part that states, declares, or asserts, is called the predicate. Thus, in the sentence, Frogs croak, the word croak is the predicate, because it asserts something about frogs.

Exercise 10. — What is the predicate in these sentences? Give your reasons thus :

“Lions roar.” In this sentence “roar” is the predicate, because it asserts something about lions.

- | | | |
|------------------|---------------------|------------------------|
| 1. Donkeys bray. | 4. Dogs bark. | 7. The sea is rough. |
| 2. Bears growl. | 5. Lambs bleat. | 8. The sails are rent. |
| 3. Wolves howl. | 6. Monkeys chatter. | 9. We drop anchor. |

18. In the following sentences four different statements are made about the same thing:

- Icebergs melt slowly.
Icebergs come from the polar regions.
Icebergs drift with the polar currents.
Icebergs are very dangerous to commerce.

Melt slowly in the first is the predicate, because it tells what is asserted of icebergs.

Observe that the predicate of each of the other three sentences consists of several words.

Exercise 11. — 1. What is the predicate in each sentence? Give your reason thus:

“The night was nearly spent.” Here “was nearly spent” is the predicate, because it is what is said about “the night.”

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1. All nature was asleep. | 7. The stage-horn sounded in the distance. |
| 2. Every leaf was still. | 8. A dusty drover was hurrying some sheep along the road. |
| 3. The dew was sparkling. | 9. Everything seemed to catch the spirit of the morning. |
| 4. The sun had just appeared. | |
| 5. Robins and bluebirds began to flutter about. | |
| 6. Gray smoke curled up from the chimneys. | |

2. Copy the sentences in Exercise 8, and draw a vertical line between the subject and the predicate, thus:

The earth | moves round the sun.

19. The Predicate of a sentence tells what is said about the subject.

C. SUBJECT AND PREDICATE COMBINED

20. We have found that every assertive sentence has two necessary parts — the subject, or that about which the assertion is made, and the predicate, or that which is asserted of the subject.

Two words therefore may make a sentence.

In commands, as — Come, the subject “you” or “thou” is usually understood.

Exercise 12. — Find in the following list the words that seem to belong together. Combine these words in sentences using one word as subject and one as predicate:

fishes	frogs	men	girls	monkeys
crawl	walk	trot	leap	chatter
worms	birds	boys	horses	ships
fly	float	swim	run	dance

21. We generally require more than one word to show what we wish to speak of. Thus, we may wish to say that Trees grow, meaning trees in general; but if we wish to speak more definitely, we say —

Those trees | grow, or
 Those tall trees | grow, or
 Those tall trees with arching branches | grow.

So, too, generally more than one word is needed to express what we wish to say about anything. Thus, we may say —

The trees | grow, or
 The trees | grow rapidly, or
 The trees | grow rapidly this year, or
 The trees | grow rapidly this year without care.

Hence the subject and the predicate may each consist of several words.

Exercise 13. — Write predicates of more than one word for these subjects; that is, say something so as to make an assertive sentence:

- | | | |
|---------------------|--------------------|-----------------------|
| 1. Stars | 7. Honesty | 13. Peacocks |
| 2. The sun | 8. Kindness | 14. Squirrels |
| 3. The moon | 9. The Philippines | 15. The phonograph |
| 4. Humming-birds | 10. Electricity | 16. Anger |
| 5. Victoria | 11. My photograph | 17. The United States |
| 6. Alfred the Great | 12. Oil-paintings | 18. The Chinese |

Exercise 14. — Write subjects of more than one word for these predicates:

- | | |
|---|------------------------------|
| 1. are chirping. | 8. built the house. |
| 2. are buzzing. | 9. made the furniture. |
| 3. are croaking. | 10. are found in the woods. |
| 4. is the President of the United States. | 11. live upon flesh. |
| 5. was a great general. | 12. are all used for food. |
| 6. shade the streets. | 13. are found in menageries. |
| 7. laid the wall. | 14. is a beautiful poem. |

D. SIMPLE SUBJECT AND PREDICATE

22. If we think about the sentences we use, we see that the subject part is very different from the predicate part.

Exercise 15. — Which of these expressions might be used as predicates?

- | | | |
|--------------------|----------------------|-----------------------|
| 1. the smoke | 5. covers the ground | 9. a delicate perfume |
| 2. over the valley | 6. morning mists | 10. will evaporate |
| 3. disappeared | 7. may settle | 11. smells very sweet |
| 4. poisonous gases | 8. was scattered | 12. of a furnace |

23. Some of our words, as —

John, eagles, dewdrops, courage, childhood, are names of things, and, like him, I, you, etc., they cannot be used to state or assert. But we see at once that asserting words, like — catches, soar, glisten, strengthens, hastens, are very different, and that we do not use them as subjects.

24. The subject of a simple sentence must always contain one word or group of words that serves as a name for what we speak of. The most of such words are called nouns. The predicate must always contain an assertive word called a verb.

These are the necessary or essential parts of every subject and predicate, no matter how long it happens to be.

Thus in the sentence —

Those tall elm trees grow rapidly this year, the complete subject is Those tall elm trees; but of these four words the necessary or essential one is trees, for it names what we speak of. We call it the essential or simple subject.

So in the complete predicate, grow rapidly this year, the essential word is grow; for it is the word that makes the assertion. We call it the simple predicate.

The words those and tall are used with trees to show that only a limited number of trees is meant. Rapidly and this year are used with grow to add to its meaning by showing how and when.

25. Words used in this way with the simple subject and simple predicate of a sentence are called modifiers, because they modify or change the application or meaning of the words with which they are used.

Exercise 16. — Which of these words is a modifier of the other. Try to tell how it affects its application or meaning.

speaks distinctly very true

high chimneys

comes quickly

every person

some stars

walks carefully

somewhat better

faint sounds writes to-day

never despairs

Use each of these expressions in a sentence.

26. A Modifier is a word or group of words used with another word to change its meaning or application.

Exercise 17. — Read carefully the following sentences. Notice what ideas or pictures they suggest to you. Then lengthen each sentence by adding modifiers to the simple subject and to the simple predicate, so as to make a fuller and more definite statement. Thus:

“Trouble | arises.” Serious trouble among friends | often arises from trifling causes.

- | | | |
|------------------|--------------------|-------------------|
| 1. ivies grew | 4. carpenter built | 7. walls fell |
| 2. ships sail | 5. house stood | 8. windows looked |
| 3. pictures hang | 6. gale broke | 9. room contained |

Exercise 18. — 1. In the following sentences what is the whole or complete subject?

2. Find the simple subject; that is, the one word that names what the assertion is about.

- | | |
|--------------------------------------|---|
| 1. Our journey soon begins. | 5. A cold, bleak wind is blowing. |
| 2. The last day has come. | 6. Traveling by night seems dreary. |
| 3. Many years of happiness are gone. | 7. The road to town is rough and steep. |
| 4. All the future is uncertain. | 8. For a week no friends will greet us. |

27. The Complete Subject of a sentence is the simple subject and its modifiers.

28. The Simple Subject of a sentence is the subject without modifiers.

Exercise 19. — 1. In these sentences what is the complete predicate?

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1. The storm passed this side of the mountains. | 5. Something always happens unexpectedly. |
| 2. Our prospects brightened at once. | 6. The surprise gives us courage. |
| 3. We hoped for the best. | 7. The morning finds our journey ended. |
| 4. Time decides all questions. | 8. Who cares for wintry storms? |

2. Find the simple predicate; that is, find the asserting word.

29. The Complete Predicate of a sentence is the simple predicate and its modifiers.

30. The Simple Predicate of a sentence is the predicate without modifiers.

Exercise 20. — Write these sentences; separate the principal parts by a vertical line; draw a wavy line under the simple subject, and a straight line under the verb, or simple predicate, thus:

The leaves of this tree | fall every autumn.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. The southern forest yields the largest timber. | 7. The sturdy oak stands for stability and strength. |
| 2. The trunks of some trees measure several feet in diameter. | 8. The wood of this tree serves many useful purposes. |
| 3. The elms resemble human beings. | 9. The lifetime of a tree depends in part on its surroundings. |
| 4. Their arching tops almost speak to us. | 10. A century in the forest makes a venerable giant. |
| 5. Whispers come from groves of pine. | 11. The groves were God's first temples. |
| 6. Their needle-like leaves make a luxurious carpet. | |

31. Inverted Order. In simple assertive sentences the subject usually comes before the predicate. Sometimes, however, this order is changed or inverted for the sake of emphasis or clearness, or in poetry for other reasons.

Exercise 21. — 1. Arrange each of these sentences in the usual order. Is there a change of meaning? A loss of force?

|---|---|
| 1. Dark was the night. | 7. Blessed are the merciful. |
| 2. Flashed all their sabers bare. | 8. Faithful are the wounds of a friend. |
| 3. Down the hillside ran a small brook. | 9. Then, if ever, come perfect days. |
| 4. Vain were all their efforts. | 10. On sky and mountain wall,
Are God's great pictures hung. |
| 5. Into each life some rain must fall. | 11. That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me. |
| 6. Around this valley rise
The purple hills of Paradise. | |
2. Point out subject and predicate, both simple and complete.

32. When the subject follows the verb the sentence is said to be in inverted order.

Many inverted sentences are introduced by there. As —

There is nothing new under the sun.

33. Interrogative Sentences. The subject of an interrogative sentence generally follows the verb or some part of it. Often an interrogative word introduces the sentence. As —

Have you heard the news? When shall you come?

Exercise 22. — Indicate the complete and the simple subject and predicate.

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1. When was Rome founded? | 7. Is it a time to be sad? |
| 2. What is the price of wisdom? | 8. Can you count the stars? |
| 3. Where is ivory found? | 9. Whither shall I flee from thy presence? |
| 4. Shall we give up in despair? | 10. Is there no hope of peace? |
| 5. Come ye in peace, or come ye in war? | 11. There will be no night there. |
| 6. Why do birds sing? | |

34. Imperative Sentences. The subject of an imperative sentence represents the person to whom the command is given and is generally omitted. It is understood to be you (thou or ye in solemn or Biblical language) and when expressed commonly follows the verb. As —

Stand (you) firm. Sit (thou) here.

Exercise 23. — Find the complete and the simple subject and predicate.

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1. Save in youth to spend in age. | 4. Praise God from whom all blessings flow. |
| 2. Bring ye the tribute money. | 5. Keep thy tongue from evil. |
| 3. Neither a borrower nor a lender be. | 6. May happiness attend you. |

7. Announced by all the trumpets of the sky
Arrives the snow.
8. April cold with dropping rain
Willows and lilacs brings again.
9. Learn the sweet magic of a cheerful face.
10. The ploughman homeward plods his weary way,
11. An honest man's the noblest work of God.
12. The spacious firmament on high,
With all the blue ethereal sky,
And spangled heavens, a shining frame,
Their great Original proclaim.
13. Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear.
14. Lead thou me on.

CHAPTER III

KINDS OF WORDS

35. We have studied in Chapter II the two most important ways of using words, and therefore know what the two principal kinds are.

Words used to assert, even if they have very different meanings, are all classed together as verbs; and when we speak of nouns we always mean words that are used as names.

So, too, all other words are divided into classes according to the way we use them in making sentences. Hence we say that —

36. Words are divided into kinds or classes according to their use in sentences.

We shall find that there are eight of these classes, and we call them the Parts of Speech.

37. In order that we may the better understand the structure of sentences, let us examine briefly the various kinds of words as determined by their use.

I. NOUNS

Exercise 24. — 1. Mention five kinds of birds; of fur-bearing animals.
2. Name five things you have seen in a store; at a fair.
3. Name five things to be seen at the seaside, or by a river. Name five to be seen —

On a ship. In a park. Among mountains. On a farm. In a mill.
In a cotton field.

4. Name several things to be heard —

On the street. When traveling. In church. In the night.

5. What are four things that make —

A good scholar? A good soldier? A boy's character? A poor scholar?

38. About half the words in our language are alike in one respect; that is, they are names of things, and are therefore called Nouns.

Noun is derived from a Latin word meaning name.

Exercise 25. — Examine these sentences carefully, and mention every name or noun that you find:

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. The garden is brilliant with daffodils and tulips. | 6. A cry of joy rings through the land. |
| 2. Their beauty depends much upon their colors. | 7. How delicate the perfume is! |
| 3. This brook is full of fine trout. | 8. The merry shouts of children fill the air. |
| 4. "Poor Richard" was born in Boston. | 9. What report did the messenger bring? |
| 5. Hear the jingle of the sleigh-bells. | 10. The breeze brings the odor of the flowers. |

39. Some nouns stand for such things as can be seen, as, daffodils, beauty, Boston; others for what we hear, as, jingle, cry, shout; some for what we can only smell, as, fragrance, odor; others for what can be felt in some way, as, pain, fear; and when we come to think more about all such things we find use for many other nouns, as, innocence, charm, childhood.

- 40. A noun is a word used as the name of something.

41. An assertion may be made about anything we can name, and so any noun may be the subject of a sentence. But we often use the name of something about which we do not make any statement, and so we may have in one sentence many nouns besides the subject. Thus:

This steamship | has two red paddle-wheels, a black stack for the smoke, and three tall masts without sails.

Here steamship is the subject, and the complete predicate is a long one, containing five nouns. What are they?

Exercise 26. — 1. Which of the nouns in Exercise 25 do not belong to the subject?

2. These nouns will suggest a story. Write five sentences such as might be used in this story, employing at least three of the nouns in each sentence:

flock	raven	fox	thief	wings
geese	piece	tail	home	flapping
trees	cheese	brush	dinner	noise

42. When the complete subject contains the names of several things, we must be careful to distinguish the one essential word, which if it stood alone, would still name the subject. Thus, in the sentence —

The famous palace of the kings of the Moors at Granada, in Spain, | was called the Alhambra — we have five nouns in the complete subject; but we see that it is the palace that was called the Alhambra. The other words are added to show which palace is meant.

We shall use the word "subject" hereafter to mean the simple subject.

Exercise 27. — Make a list of the twenty-five nouns in these sentences. Draw a wavy line under the eleven used as subjects.

1. The darkest clouds bring rain.
2. The leaves of the trees rustled in the wind.
3. Great clouds of smoke were floating in the air.
4. The rays of the sun were almost entirely obscured.
5. A dim light came in at the windows.
6. Our tasks were left undone.

7. At night the moon could not be seen.
8. The trees along the river were torn up by the roots.
9. The birds' feathers were wet and dripping.
10. The brooks on the mountains were swollen to torrents.
11. A wooden bridge near the town was carried away.

II. PRONOUNS

1. Read these sentences: Mr. Richardson was a wealthy man. He kept many horses. These were his favorites. They lived in a fine stable. It was like a dwelling-house.

2. Who is meant by he? What by these? By his? By they? To what does it refer?

3. Read the sentences, using these other words instead of he, they, etc., but without changing the meaning.

4. Which do you think is the better way to make these assertions? Give the reason.

43. Besides nouns, there are a few other words, almost meaningless in themselves, such as he, these, they, it, which often stand for something we have just mentioned, no matter what it is.

Thus, if any one said, The President has inspected the Navy, he might add, He found it in fair condition; but he would not repeat the nouns, and say that The President found the Navy in fair condition.

So when we point to a thing, instead of calling it by name, we generally use a word of this kind, like this or that, these or those.

44. Such words are called Pronouns because they take the place of nouns; and we always prefer to use them when we can be readily understood.

Exercise 28. — 1. Try to improve the following by using other words instead of repeating the nouns:

(a) The people were returning from work. The work was very hard. The work seemed to make the people weary.

(b) One woman was very ill. This woman was being carried by the woman's husband. The husband was the town-crier.

2. If Jane were speaking to John, would she say, "John surprised Jane," or, "You surprised me"? If Carl were greeting his friend William, what would he say instead of "Carl is glad to see William"?

45. When we speak or write to a person, we do not constantly refer to him by name; we say you, instead: and when we say anything about ourselves, we never think of using our names; for, no matter what they are, we almost always say, I, me, myself, we, us, and so on.

Thus, we should say, I wish you would come to see me; and the reply might be, We shall be glad to have you entertain us.

Exercise 29. — 1. Select the pronouns in these sentences; that is, the words used instead of nouns.

- | | |
|--|------------------------------------|
| 1. The doctor is coming. | 6. It was perfectly white. |
| 2. Call to him. | 7. They seemed to me to be frozen. |
| 3. Have you improved? | 8. The nurse was with us. |
| 4. Yes, I feel quite well. | 9. She warmed them by rubbing. |
| 5. Early this morning I could see your arms stretched out over the snow. | 10. You must thank her. |
| | 11. We are very glad. |

2. Which of these pronouns are used as subjects?

46. When we do not know the name of a person or a thing we use a pronoun to ask a question. Thus:

Who brought the news?

Which did you choose?

What caused the fire?

Whom shall we send?

Exercise 30. — 1. Write assertive sentences in answer to the preceding questions. 2. What words have you used in place of the pronouns? 3. Write a telegram containing imperative or interrogative sentences, using two of these pronouns in each one: I, myself; me, mine; we, ourselves; us, ours.

47. Every one of the thousands of nouns in our language, and every expression, however long, that is used like a noun to name a person or a thing, can be replaced at one time or another by a pronoun.

Exercise 31. — In these sentences give the whole expression that each pronoun takes the place of:

- | | |
|--|---|
| 1. The sail down the river was very pleasant. | 6. Two of them were exciting. |
| 2. It occupied about nine hours. | 7. His first vessel was a brigantine of six hundred tons. |
| 3. We met several fine yachts. | 8. She foundered off the coast of Jamaica. |
| 4. They seemed to be racing. | 9. He told us how he was forced to abandon her. |
| 5. The captain of the steamer told many of his adventures. | |

48. A Pronoun is a word that is used instead of a noun.

The word "pronoun" means for a noun.

49. The word for which a pronoun stands is called its Antecedent.

"Hardy spoke to his landlady as he went out, and told her he would not be back to dinner." In this sentence the antecedent of he is Hardy. the antecedent of her is landlady.

Exercise 32. — Point out the antecedent of the pronouns in Exercise 31.

III. VERBS

Exercise 33. — 1. What are assertive sentences? Give an example. 2. What are the other kinds? Make a sentence of each kind. 3. Explain the meaning of "assert." 4. Make assertions about five things that you see. 5. Are the following expressions sentences of any sort? Tell your reason.

Squirrels in hollow trees.

We chestnuts in October.

The sap in the spring.

The ice thick enough to bear.

6. Make assertive sentences of them by using live, flows, gather, is.

7. Change them to interrogative sentences.

50. Words used to assert are called verbs. They are not as numerous as nouns, but they form an equally important class, since complete sentences cannot be framed without them.

51. To make a complete sentence we need only give the name of something, and say or assert something about it. With a noun or a pronoun and a verb we can do just this. As —

Flowers fade. I command. Grass withers. They obey.

Without a verb there can be no assertion — no predicate — no sentence.

Exercise 34. — What kind of word will make sentences of the following? Supply what is needed.

1. Rubber — from South America.
2. The pure gum — very valuable.
3. Water — the wheels of the mill.
4. The cotton-plant — in the Gulf States.
5. A letter — three thousand miles for two cents.
6. The Gulf Stream — north-east.
7. Behring Strait — the Arctic and the Pacific Oceans.
8. The signal service — a fair day to-morrow.
9. The snow — ten feet deep in the woods last winter.
10. The boys all — hunting yesterday.
11. The fox — by hiding under a rock.
12. Trout-fishing — considerable skill.

52. Verb Phrases. The verb may be a single word that asserts; as when we say —

The tree | grows, meaning now, or

The tree | grew, meaning some time ago.

But if we wish to speak of time to come, we must say —

The tree | will grow;

and in all these sentences —

The tree | is growing.

The tree | has grown.

The tree | would have grown.

The tree | may be growing.

The tree | might have been growing.

we need the help of one, two, or three other words besides grown and growing, in order to assert what we wish about the growth of the tree. We see, then, that in these sentences we have two, three, or even four words grouped together to do the work of a single verb. Such word-groups are called phrases.

53. A Phrase is a group of related words used as some part of speech, but not containing a subject and predicate.

54. When, as here, such a group is equivalent to a verb, we call it a verb phrase.

The words that form a verb phrase are often separated by other words. As : Do not talk so fast. The train will not always be late. The work could not well have been more quickly done.

Exercise 35. — Select the expressions of more than one word that take the place of single verbs; that is to say, the verb phrases.

1. The message was brought an hour ago.
2. We had hoped for better news.
3. But we must lose no time.
4. The best horses have been sent over the turnpike.
5. They may overtake the party.
6. Otherwise nothing but failure awaits us.
7. We might have kept Nero.
8. It is too late now.
9. Perhaps we shall meet them all at Castleton.
10. Saddle your horses at once.
11. The back road will be safest.
12. I should inquire for them at Newbury.
13. They must have gone early.

55. A Verb is an asserting word or phrase.

The term "verb" means word.

56. A Verb phrase is a group of words used as a single verb.

Verb phrases are often called verbs.

We shall learn sometime that many other groups of words used like single words are also called phrases.

Exercise 36. — Select the single verbs and the verb phrases.

The air thickens. Familiar objects are hidden as by a mist. Paths disappear. Voices of teamsters are heard. Nothing can be seen in the road. Like a fog the snow hides all things. Not a breath of wind disturbs its descent. The branches of the trees are clothed as with wool. Still the noiseless flakes fill the sky. A change has taken place.

57. It very often happens, as in these sentences —

The man has a son, They man the boats, that there is no difference in the spelling of two words, one of which is a noun and the other a verb; and we must remember to decide about them by their use.

Exercise 37. — Distinguish between the nouns and the verbs that are spelled alike in these sentences. Thus:

"Pass" in the first sentence is a verb; "pass" in the seventh sentence is a noun.

- | | |
|------------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| 1. Pass through here. | 9. We demand your surrender. |
| 2. Order a load of stones. | 10. He drives without fear. |
| 3. Load them with care. | 11. He hands me a whip. |
| 4. They work with their hands. | 12. He gave his consent reluctantly. |
| 5. They care not for play. | 13. He dogs me while at my work. |
| 6. He stones the stray dogs. | 14. We whip them by your order. |
| 7. Fear not the pass. | 15. They play during my drives. |
| 8. Will you consent to the change? | 16. Surrender at our command. |

IV. ADJECTIVES

Exercise 38. — 1. What is a noun?

2. Point out the nouns in the following phrases:

- | | |
|------------------|--------------------|
| 1. Green leaves. | 5. Loud sounds. |
| 2. Strong men. | 6. Heavy blankets. |
| 3. Cold noses. | 7. Lame ducks. |
| 4. Some dogs. | 8. This house. |

3. Why say green leaves, strong men, some dogs, rather than simply leaves, men, dogs? 4. Is anything added to the idea of leaves by the the word green? If so, what is it? 5. What is the use of cold, loud, and this in the phrases where they are used?

58. By the use of a certain class of words we can add to the meaning of a noun. We can thus describe what it names or make it more definite. For example, if someone asks you, "Do you like apples?" you may reply, "I like some apples, but not others. What kind of apples do you mean — sour apples or sweet apples?" By the use of the words some, sour, and sweet you have added to the meaning of the word apples. Apples alone means all apples. Some apples means a smaller number. Sour apples means a particular kind or class of apples.

Words which add to the meaning of nouns are called adjectives.

Exercise 39. — Name the adjectives in Exercise 38.

59. Most adjectives are used to describe persons or things. They tell the kind or class to which the person or thing belongs.

Exercise 40. — 1. Name the adjectives in the following sentences and tell what they describe.

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1. Kind friends have come. | 9. He has eaten a small round hole in it. |
| 2. They brought us purple grapes. | 10. My tapping on the leafy bough stops his merry song. |
| 3. Black clouds turn to rain. | 11. Then a green locust begins with a loud buzz. |
| 4. Rolling stones gather no moss. | 12. The limp grass would be revived by a gentle rain or a heavy shower. |
| 5. Farmers gather golden grain. | |
| 6. It is a warm day in July. | |
| 7. White, fleecy clouds are in the blue sky. | |
| 8. I see a large grasshopper on a pointed leaf. | |

2. Copy eight of these sentences, underlining subject and verb. In- close the adjectives that modify the subject in curves. Thus :

(Kind) friends have come.

60. Other adjectives affect the meaning of a noun in a different way. Thus, if we say,

"The king lived a year and some months in this city," we show that we mean only a particular king, only one year, about how many months, and which city. These words, the, a, some, this, are adjectives, because they add something to our meaning that was not expressed by the noun alone; but they do not tell what kind of king, year, month, or city, as if we were to say, "A good king lived a dreary year and three tiresome months in a hostile city."

61. Words that refer to number are of this sort; as — one day	sixteen months	first minute

two weeks	tenth hour	half second

These show to how many or to which one the name applies; and there are about forty others, including — a or an, the,	every, few,	same, several,

many, any, all,	first, last,	this or these,
each, either,	much, no,	that or those.

62. Such adjectives, without describing, add to the meaning of the noun by showing which one, or how many. Since they determine or limit the application of the noun, they are called limiting adjectives.

Exercise 41. — Select the adjectives that do not describe, but only show to which ones, or to how many, the noun applies. Tell what each one limits.

1. Eight men were on that committee.
2. February has twenty-nine days every fourth year.

3. Much harm arises from imprudence.
4. No man knows all things.
5. Every flock contains some black sheep.
6. This park contains forty-four acres.
7. All the trees in yonder row have stood there many years.
8. Several English elms and some maples were blown down.
9. That pond down the slope is used for skating every year.
10. There are no shade trees on either side of that street.
11. Few persons take much interest in such matters.
12. Both rivers rise in the same plateau.

63. An Adjective is a word used to describe some person or thing, or to limit a noun.

The word "adjective" means that which is added.

64. Descriptive or qualifying adjectives describe what is mentioned.

Limiting adjectives show which ones, how many, and so on, without describing.

Exercise 42. — 1. Put all the adjectives into two lists — one for those that describe, and one for those that do not.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. We have caught a few speckled trout in that brook. | 7. Every blossom on that apple tree should have five petals. |
| 2. The new yacht Louette won the last race. | 8. The century-plant blossoms only once in its lifetime of seven to seventy years. |
| 3. Large quantities of cotton are exported from this country each year. | 9. Deciduous trees lose their foliage every autumn. |
| 4. Carnivorous animals eat animal food. | 10. Evergreen trees are covered with foliage all the year round. |
| 5. Herbivorous animals eat vegetable food. | 11. Galls are round bodies formed on some plants by the stings of insects. |
| 6. Omnivorous animals eat all kinds of food. | |

2. What does each adjective describe or limit?

Exercise 43. — Change the descriptive adjectives to others of similar meaning:

We saw many novel sights in this remote town. There was a remarkable clearness in the air, and there were lofty hills all about clothed with extensive forests. We were walking along a zigzag path towards a rather desolate spot where the yearly fair had once been held. The abandoned booths were vacant, but we met a numerous company of persons who had come a prolonged journey through these retired valleys on some charitable errand to the peasants. They had found the burning heat very disagreeable, and seemed to be tired and eager to rest.

V. ADVERBS

Exercise 44. — 1. Which words in these sentences show when the men are to work? 2. Which tell how, or in what manner, they ought to work? 3. Which show where? 4. Which show how much?

The men must work quietly.

The men must work well.

The men must work early.

The men must work now.

The men must work here.

The men must work outside.

The men must work less.

The men must work more.

5. Can you think of any other single words that would show how, or when, or where men must work?

65. If we should take away from the examples in Exercise 44 the words quietly, early, here, less, well, now, outside, more, the same action would still be asserted by the verb. But each one of the added words makes a little change in what the verb alone would mean; for they show how, when, where, and so on.

Exercise 45. — Which words are added to show how, when, where, and so on?

1. Wait patiently.
2. You must go now.
3. I shall visit Europe soon.
4. Have you ever been there?
5. The train runs regularly.
6. Snow sometimes delays it.
7. The plow soon scatters the snow.
8. It was scarcely needed.
9. The pendulum moves to and fro continually.
10. The day has almost ended.

66. Words of this sort are called Adverbs because they are added to verbs to make our meaning more definite, very much as adjectives are added to nouns.

Exercise 46. — Fill each blank with an adverb that will tell when, where, or how.

1. The girls write —.
2. We shall sing —.
3. Those yachts sail —.
4. They returned —.
5. We might go —.
6. Our hearts beat —.
7. The river flows —.
8. The fire burns —.
9. The messenger will return —.
10. Can you read music —?

Exercise 47. — Mention every verb, and the adverb that modifies it, telling whether it shows how, when, or where. Thus:

The verb "must go" is modified by the adverb "now," which shows when we must go.

1. We must go now.
2. Yonder comes my father.
3. I never called there again.
4. Water is found everywhere.
5. He bears trouble patiently.
6. They sometimes sing finely.
7. The best often fail.
8. Return quickly.
9. The procession moved slowly onward.
10. Our friends will probably come back to-morrow.
11. The rain fell heavily last Tuesday.
12. Lightning flashed vividly in the clouds.
13. The thunder rumbled everywhere.
14. People were running hither and thither.
15. Umbrellas were quickly raised.
16. Carriages dashed hurriedly along.

Exercise 48. — Copy some of the sentences in Exercise 47, marking subject and verb, and putting the adverbs in brackets. Thus:

The procession moved [onward] [slowly].

67. Some of these words have another use.

Thus, instead of, The hill is steep, This book is new, we should often wish to say how steep, how nearly new, and so on, as in —

The hill is very steep.

This book is almost new.

The hill is less steep.

This book is entirely new.

The hill is steep enough.

This book is new now.

But what kind of a word is steep, and what have we done to express our meaning more fully?

There are modifiers for adjectives, then, just as for nouns and verbs.

68. Such words we already know about: they are adverbs. The reason for using the same kind of words with both adjectives and verbs, is that both need to be modified in the same way; that is, by telling how, how often, when, where, how much, how little, and so on.

Exercise 49. — Select the adjectives in these sentences, and tell which of them are modified by adverbs :

1. The night was very dark. 2. Everybody was sleeping soundly.
3. The dim light of the new moon was almost entirely concealed. 4. I was rather late about my errand. 5. The somewhat steep path over the hill was little trodden. 6. It was very much too rocky for so dark a night. 7. Even the sky was nearly black. 8. I was wisely cautious. 9. Except for such great care I should have fallen repeatedly. 10. I finally reached my destination in a completely exhausted condition.

69. Sometimes, in order to show just what we mean, we need to modify an adverb.

Thus: He has come often may be changed to —
He has come very often, or rather often, and —
He spoke truly may become —
He spoke quite truly, or more truly, or less truly.

Exercise 50. — Which words in these sentences modify adverbs?

- | | |
|--------------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| 1. Speak very distinctly. | 5. Kind deeds are almost never |
| 2. James, you read too rapidly. | forgotten. |
| 3. How quietly that train runs! | 6. Have we gone far enough? |
| 4. Water is found almost everywhere. | |

70. In such sentences the words that modify adverbs are themselves adverbs, and could be used to modify adjectives or verbs. Adverbs, then, can be used in three different ways.

71. An Adverb is a word used to modify a verb, an adjective, or another adverb.

Exercise 51. — 1. Use these adverbs in sentences to modify verbs:

cautiously	seldom	often	formerly faithfully	always	again	late sometimes	forever	backward	never

2. Use these adverbs in sentences to modify adjectives:

almost	too	totally	quite nearly	so	entirely	how

3. Use adverbs — all different — to modify the following in sentences:

feebly; rapidly; much; greatly; well.

VI. PREPOSITIONS

Exercise 52. — 1. What is an adjective?

2. In the expressions in the first column, what words describe houses? What kind of words are they?

wooden houses	or	houses of wood .
empty houses	or	houses without occupants .
three-storied houses	or	houses with three stories .
public houses	or	houses for the public .
city houses	or	houses in the city .

3. What do the groups of words in the second column describe? What are they used like?

4. Use adjectives in place of the following italicized groups without much changing the meaning. Tell what each modifies:

Business of importance detained me.

Carpets from Persia are costly.

We found a wagon with two seats.

Men of wealth should be generous.

Exercise 53. — 1. What is an adverb?

2. What words in the first column tell how, when, or where the ship sails? What kind of words are they?

The ship sails rapidly	or	The ship sails with rapidity .
The ship sails safely	or	The ship sails without danger .
The ship sails afar	or	The ship sails to a distance .
The ship sails now	or	The ship sails at this time .
The ship sails there	or	The ship sails for that place .

3. What does each group in the second column tell about the sailing of the ship? What does each one mean? What are they used like?

4. Use adverbs in place of the italicized groups without much changing the meaning. What does each modify?

The Indians lived in this place. Be courteous at all times.

Never write without care. Do they deal upon honor?

72. The adjectives and adverbs that we have studied thus far are single words; but little groups of words may be used in about the same way.

Thus we may speak of — a thorny bush or a bush with thorns;

an English home or a home in England.

It is easy to see that with thorns and in England are much like adjectives in meaning, though they are put after the noun instead of before it. Again, in these sentences —

The letter was carefully written. It was sent promptly.

The letter was written with care. It was sent without delay — the word-groups with care and without delay seem to modify the verbs just as the adverbs carefully and promptly do. So, too —

The wind blew very furiously might be changed to —

The wind blew with great fury.

73. It very often happens that there is no adjective or adverb in our language that will serve as a modifier to express our meaning, and then we are forced to use such groups of words.

Here, for example, no single word would take the place of the groups:

The house by the river is a hotel. He came from the city.

Those on the shelf are sold. The bucket hung in the well.

The path of industry leads to success.

My friend was with his regiment.

All such groups of words are called phrases.

Exercise 54. — 1. Which phrases in these sentences are used like adjectives?

2. Do those that are used like adverbs tell how, when, where, or how often?

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1. He came in haste. | 5. My friend never comes behind time. |
| 2. We are in fear. | 6. He pays his rent by the month. |
| 3. People of intelligence live in this place. | 7. He finished his task with ease. |
| 4. Diamonds of great value are found in that field. | 8. Children like stories about fairies. |
| | 9. The plan was made in secret. |

3. Change the phrases to adjectives or adverbs, if you can think of any that will serve.

Exercise 55. — 1. Use a phrase instead of the adjective or adverb.

- | | | |
|-------------------|----------------------|----------------------|
| 1. Turkish rugs | 5. strong men | 9. go now |
| 2. juvenile books | 6. a marine disaster | 10. send it soon |
| 3. Java coffee | 7. spoke distinctly | 11. study diligently |
| 4. silver plates | 8. went homeward | 12. walk quietly |

2. Use an adjective or an adverb in place of the phrase.

- | | |
|---------------------------|--------------------------|
| 1. a road along the river | 6. a trip through Europe |
| 2. a path up the mountain | 7. women of fashion |
| 3. a man of strength | 8. women of sense |
| 4. a journey toward home | 9. lands beyond the seas |
| 5. a child at play | 10. jewelry from France |

74. All these phrases contain a noun or a pronoun with a word like of, with, from, in, at, or by, that connects it with what is modified. These words usually come first in the phrase, and they are called Prepositions.

Let us see what they do for our language that other words will not do.

75. If we wished to show that a clump of trees was the place where some boys were hiding, we might say —

The boys hid in the trees.	The boys hid among the trees.
The boys hid under the trees.	The boys hid behind the trees.
The boys hid beyond the trees.

The only difference is in the prepositions in, under, among, etc. Read the sentences without them, and you will see that nobody could tell what the trees had to do with the hiding; but with the prepositions we see that the word "trees" can be used to modify "hid" in various ways; for it is one thing to hide under the trees, another to hide in the trees, and so on.

Exercise 56. — Select the phrases, and tell what each one modifies. Thus:

"From Plymouth" is a phrase used like an adverb to modify the verb "sailed."

1. The Mayflower sailed from Plymouth.
2. Magellan's ship sailed around the globe.
3. Beautiful pearls are found in the sea.
4. The early settlers hunted for gold.
5. The star rested over Bethlehem.
6. The English settled along the coast.
7. We shall return through the valley.
8. My friends will come in the next train.
9. President McKinley lived in Ohio during his boyhood.
10. No one should be condemned without a trial.

76. Using a phrase as an adjective, we might say —

The land around the grove.	The shade of the grove.
The walk from the grove.	The road to the grove.
The path through the grove.

Here we modify or explain the meaning of the nouns walk, land, shade, etc., by referring to the grove; but in order to do this we have to use a different preposition in each phrase.

77. To show how one word can modify another, or what the meanings of two words have to do with each other, is to show the relation between them.

Exercise 57. — Select the phrases, and tell what each one modifies. Thus:

"Of Rome" is a phrase used as an adjective to modify the noun "city."

1. The city of Rome is the capital of Italy.
2. The road up the mountain is very rocky.
3. Goods for that firm were shipped yesterday.
4. The planet with the rings is Saturn.
5. Admission to college depends on attainments.
6. The town beyond Lexington is Concord.
7. Success without effort is impossible.
8. The fort near the city was captured first.
9. Icebergs from the Arctic Ocean melt in the Gulf Stream.
10. Journeys into the interior are rarely made.

78. The Object of a preposition is the noun or pronoun which is used with it to make a phrase.

79. A Preposition is a word that shows the relation of its object to some other word.

The word "preposition" means what is placed before.

80. A Prepositional Phrase is a phrase that contains a preposition and its object.

Exercise 58. — 1. Select the prepositions in Exercises 55 and 56 and tell between what each shows the relation. Thus :

“From” is a preposition, and shows the relation between its object “Plymouth” and the verb “sailed,” which the phrase modifies.

2. Mention the prepositions with the object of each, and tell whether the phrase is used as an adjective or an adverb.

1. Birds in great numbers fly over this grove. 2. Some with blue plumage have dropped a handful of feathers for me. 3. Quails from the north meet jays from the south. 4. There are eggs in the nest near the vine. 5. The mother bird is mottled at the throat and along the breast. 6. A bluebird nests under the eaves.

81. Since prepositional phrases can be used wherever an adverb can be, we find them modifying not only nouns, pronouns, and verbs, but adjectives and adverbs also. Thus:

He was happy to excess, or He was excessively happy.
They are ripe before the time, or They are prematurely ripe.

In other cases it is harder to find what will take the place of the phrase.
As—

This breeze is fresh from the ocean.
We are weary with working.

Here the four phrases modify adjectives as adverbs would.

Exercise 59. — Point out the prepositional phrases, and tell whether they modify adjectives or adverbs.

- | | |
|--|--|
| 1. Those trees are heavy with fruit. | 5. She is insane from anxiety. |
| 2. You are too cautious for me. | 6. Shall you be absent from home? |
| 3. The children were happy beyond measure. | 7. We found rosebuds pink at the tips. |
| 4. Always be polite to strangers. | 8. The grass was wet with dew. |

Exercise 60. — Here are the most common prepositions. Use each one in a sentence.

about	around	beyond	of	under above	at	by	on	unto across	before	down	over	up after	behind	for	through	upon against	below	from	till	with along	beneath	in	to	within among	between	into	toward	without

VII. CONJUNCTIONS

82. We have learned that a preposition connects two other words by showing what one of them has to do with the other. We come now to words that connect in a different way.

In the sentence, The sun sets and the moon appears, how many verbs are there? What is the subject of each? Read the sentence, omitting the word and.

Here, then, are two sentences joined or tied together as one sentence. They might have been printed thus:

The sun sets. The moon appears.

So we might unite three or more sentences into one, as —

The sun sets, (and) the moon appears, and the stars come out, or we might connect two sentences in different ways; as —

The sun has set,	and	the stars appear.
The sun has set,	for	the stars appear.
The sun has set,	but	the stars appear.
The sun has set,	therefore	the stars appear.

And seems to join the sentences together, as if they were about one subject; for shows that one statement gives a reason for making the other; and so on with other words of this sort, such as but, therefore, or, nor, hence, however.

83. Since these words all connect or join together what we say, they are called conjunctions.

They denote various relations between the expressions they connect, by showing what the connected parts have to do with each other. But, unlike prepositions, they always connect expressions of the same sort.

Exercise 61. — What sentences have been united to make the following?

1. The birds have come and the flowers appear.
2. The ocean is rough, for the breakers roar.
3. My pears are ripe and I am glad.
4. Some are very large, but they are not yellow.
5. You cannot have tried earnestly or you would have succeeded.
6. The sky seems clear, yet no stars are visible.
7. We cannot get money nor have we any food.
8. The king must win or he must forfeit his crown forever.

84. Such sentences as the preceding differ from those we have been studying; for they are made up of two or more simple sentences combined. Instead of one predicate and the subject of it, they have two or more predicates, each with a subject of its own.

Exercise 62. — Copy the sentences in the preceding exercise. Place vertical lines before and after each conjunction, and mark each subject and each verb. Inclose adjectives and phrases that modify the subject, in curves; inclose adverbs and phrases that modify the verb, in brackets. Insert the comma where it belongs. Thus:

(Kind) friends have left us, | but | they will return [soon].

85. Sentences made in this way, by uniting two or more simple sentences, are called compound.

86. A Simple Sentence is a sentence that contains only one subject and one predicate.

87. A Compound Sentence is one formed by uniting simple sentences.

The sentences united to form a compound sentence are called clauses.

88. Conjunctions are used to connect not only sentences, but also words or expressions in the same sentence when they are of the same kind and used in the same way.

1. Two or more nouns or pronouns may be connected in one sentence; as in —

Music and painting are fine arts.
Did you ask him or her or me?

2. Several verbs may be joined together in one sentence; as in —

Farmers raise and sell vegetables for the market.

3. So, too, we may wish to unite two or more adjectives or adverbs or phrases that modify the same word; as in —

The dead or dying soldiers were left behind.
She walks gracefully and firmly, but very slowly.
The volume is in the book-case, or on the table.

Exercise 63. — Select the conjunctions, telling which words they connect and what kind of words are connected. Thus:

“And” is a conjunction, and connects the two nouns “time” and “tide.”

1. Time and tide wait for no man.
2. Extreme poverty or great wealth may bring fame.
3. Some trees or shrubs would improve the place.
4. The days come and go in a ceaseless round.
5. Some people always promise, but never pay.
6. Who among you thinks or dreams of me?

7. All men live and die unknown by most of their fellows.
8. She plucked the daisies white and violets blue.
9. Michael Angelo was a painter and sculptor.
10. Now and then the whip-poor-will calls from the hill or the grove.
11. You and I are old and well-trying friends.
12. Shall we spend our time over worthless books and papers, or with the best authors?

89. A Conjunction is a word that connects sentences or parts of sentences.

The word "conjunction" means that which joins together.

VIII. INTERJECTIONS

90. The seven kinds of words that we have now learned to distinguish make up all our sentences: for every word that is really part of a sentence is either a noun, a pronoun, a verb, an adjective, an adverb, a preposition, or a conjunction.

There are other words, however, that we use with sentences, but not exactly as parts of them. They are a different kind of language.

Thus, if any one says, Oh! you hurt me, the word oh is apt to be very much like a groan. So in, Aha! I have found you! aha takes the place of a shout; and in the following sentences, Pshaw! what a silly reason! Poh! that's nothing; He came, alas! too late, the words pshaw, poh, alas are about as expressive as a hiss, a puff, and a sigh.

91. When we use these words we do not assert anything, and very much of our meaning comes from the tone in which we speak; but everybody understands at once that we are pained or pleased, and so on, just as we tell by a dog's whining whether he is grieved or delighted.

Exercise 64. — Which words would express feeling, even if used by themselves?

- | | |
|---------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| 1. Oh! I have ruined my friend! | 4. Ho ho! Ahoy! A sail! A sail! |
| 2. O that I were rich again! | 5. Hurrah! We've won a victory. |
| 3. Ha! Can you not hear it? | 6. Hist! The squirrel sees you. |

92. Such words are called Interjections because they are thrown into the midst of what we say without having much to do with other words.

93. A different sort of interjection is used in expressions like this: "Bang! There goes another gun!" where the word bang is used merely to imitate a noise. When we wish to represent these words by writing, we spell out the sounds as nearly as we can, just as we write bow-wow to represent the bark of a dog.

94. An Interjection is an exclamatory word or phrase used to express a feeling or to imitate some sound.

The word "interjection" means something that is thrown into the midst of what we say.

Exercise 65. — 1. Which of the following interjections can be used to express joy? Which to express disgust? Which imitate some natural sound?

alas	hurrah	bravo	fie	O dear
pshaw	ahoy	whoa	hello	ha ha ha

2. Use each of the above words in a sentence.

SUMMARY: THE PARTS OF SPEECH

95. All the words in our language can be divided into these eight classes called Parts of Speech.

- | | | | | |
|---------------------------|---|-----------------------------------|---|--|
| 1. Nouns | } | used to name persons or things | } | are always required to make a sentence. |
| and | | | | |
| 2. Pronouns | | | | |
| 3. Verbs — used to assert | | | | |

4. Adjectives and	}	used only to modify other words	}	may help to form sentences.
5. Adverbs
6. Prepositions and	}	used to show the connec- tion between other words
7. Conjunctions
8. Interjections	}	used to express feeling			} often stand by themselves.

96. The Parts of Speech are the classes into which words are divided according to their use in sentences.

THE BUILDERS

All are architects of fate,
Working in these walls of time;
Some with massive deeds and great,
Some with ornaments of rhyme.

Nothing useless is, or low;
Each thing in its place is best;
And what seems but idle show
Strengthens and supports the rest.

For the structure that we raise,
Time is with materials filled;
Our to-days and yesterdays
Are the blocks with which we build.

Truly shape and fashion these;
Leave no yawning gaps between;
Think not, because no man sees,
Such things will remain unseen.

In the elder days of art
Builders wrought with greatest care
Each minute and unseen part;
For the Gods see everywhere.

99. An Incomplete Verb is one that requires the addition of one or more words to give the sentence distinct meaning.

100. A Complement is what must be added to an incomplete verb to give distinct meaning to the sentence.

101. A Complete Verb is one that requires no complement.

Exercise 68. — Point out the verb, and show what completes the meaning.

- | | |
|-------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| 1. The game was shy. | 5. Our hotel was distant. |
| 2. Our powder was wet. | 6. Our lunch-boxes were empty. |
| 3. We were hungry. | 7. Matters might have been worse. |
| 4. The pond was frozen. | 8. We were not disheartened. |

I. COPULATIVE VERBS

102. Some incomplete verbs do little more than connect, or couple, the complement and the subject. In the sentences I am cold, She is happy, They have been kind, the verb am connects I and cold, the verb is connects she and happy, the verb-phrase have been connects they and kind. Such verbs are called copulative verbs.

Exercise 69. — Point out the copulative verbs in the following sentences:

- | | |
|---------------------------------------|---|
| 1. Talk is cheap. | 5. Bananas will be scarce this year. |
| 2. I am hungry. | 6. Mt. Shasta was once an active volcano. |
| 3. Tennyson was a poet. | 7. Boys may be heroes. |
| 4. The grasshoppers have been silent. | |

103. To the same class belong the verbs looks, seems, appears, becomes, feels, tastes, and the like. These verbs have a little more meaning than am, is, were, have been, etc., but their chief business is still to connect the complement with the subject. Thus in the sentences She seems happy, and She is happy, the verbs seems and is are used in much the same way. Both verbs serve to connect the subject she with the complement happy.

Exercise 70. — Point out the copulative verbs in the following sentences:

- | | |
|--|-----------------------------------|
| 1. Angels' visits are few and far between. | 5. Why were you tardy? |
| 2. The vacation seems short. | 6. Jack's old hat looked queer. |
| 3. Owls look wise. | 7. This plum pudding tastes good. |
| 4. All cats appear gray in the dark. | 8. My new tooth feels sharp. |
| | 9. The music sounds discordant. |

104. The complement of a copulative verb describes or explains the subject. In the sentences Lead is heavy, A dog's nose is cold, the complement heavy describes the subject lead, the complement cold describes the subject nose. In the sentence A trout is a fish, the complement fish explains the subject trout.

Exercise 71. — 1. (a) Select the verbs, and tell which of them are modified by adverbs or prepositional phrases. (b) Which are incomplete, and what complements are added to them to describe the subject?

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. Some grapes are sweet. | 8. Delays are often dangerous. |
| 2. They grow in the south. | 9. The crocus blooms in the spring. |
| 3. The wind will be cold. | 10. The early laws were severe. |
| 4. Celluloid is inflammable. | 11. My requests for dismissal have been useless. |
| 5. His remarks were instructive. | 12. The polar regions are uninhabitable. |
| 6. Not all birds are migratory. | |
| 7. The wind sighs plaintively around her grave. | |

2. Copy the preceding sentences, placing under the subject a wavy line, under the verb, a straight line, and under the complement a straight line over a wavy line. Thus:

Some grapes are sweet.

105. A Copulative Verb is one whose complement describes the subject.

The word "copulative" means coupling or connecting.

106. A Predicate Adjective is an adjective used as the complement of a copulative verb.

Exercise 72. — Write five sentences about sounds, using predicate adjectives with the following verbs:

seem, become, sound, appear, grow.

Exercise 73. — Write four sentences about things you have seen, using predicate adjectives with the following verbs:

looks, appears, grows, seems.

Exercise 74. — Write six sentences about the following things, using predicate adjectives with the verb tastes or feels:

An apple, a lemon, sandpaper, silk, ice, flint.

107. A noun may be used with the copulative verb as a sort of second name, to describe what the subject stands for, or to explain what is meant.

Exercise 75. — In the sentences —

Those men were soldiers.

Boys may be heroes.

Harrisburg is the capital.

Our guide will be an Indian — what kind of word is added to the verb to describe the subject? What two words in each sentence name the same person or thing?

108. A Predicate Noun is a noun used as the complement of a copulative verb.

109. Predicate adjectives and predicate nouns and their equivalents are called subjective complements.

110. A Subjective Complement is a complement that describes or explains the subject.

111. The verb is the necessary word in the predicate, but its complement is so important that the two together may be called the simple predicate.

Exercise 76. — 1. Point out the copulative verb with its subject and complement, telling whether the latter is a noun or an adjective. Thus:

In the second sentence "was" is the copulative verb, having the noun "trouble" for its subject, and the noun "poverty" for its complement.

1. The man was poor.
2. His trouble was poverty.
3. The water of the ocean is salt.
4. Yonder vessel must be a schooner.
5. Farmers are independent.
6. Every barrel seems full.
7. Diamonds are costly.
8. Pure air is exhilarating.
9. Quartz is a mineral.
10. Our friends look anxious.
11. The lecture to-morrow will be short.
12. The cat's claws were sharp.
13. Turtles are amphibious.
14. The ship of the desert is the camel.
15. Tigers are carnivorous.
16. Tigers are flesh-eaters.
17. Henrietta shall be queen.
18. The boy is the shoemaker's best friend.
19. Idle boys become poor men.
20. The sound of the evening bells was sweet.
21. The night grows dark.

2. Copy those of the preceding sentences that have nouns as complements. Underline subject and verb as heretofore, and under the noun complement place a wavy line over a straight line. Thus:

Yonder vessel is a schooner.

Exercise 77. — Read the following words and notice what they suggest. Then use them in sentences as complements of copulative verbs. Mark as in preceding exercises.

mineral	old-fashioned	fatigued	Frenchman combustible	mechanic	librarian	skillful liquid	ingenious	Japanese	patriot

II. TRANSITIVE VERBS

Exercise 78. — 1. Try to complete the sentences that seem unfinished, and explain why they seem so.

1. It is raining
 2. Who opened
 3. We can look for eggs
 4. Come to the barn
 5. I will bring
 6. We shall easily find
 7. The nests are in the hay
 8. Yesterday I had a fall
 9. Somebody fired
 10. I was frightened
 11. Of course I broke
 12. The fall almost killed
2. Do any of them lack the verb? What kind of word is needed?

Exercise 79. — 1. Give the complete predicate of each of these sentences.

- | | |
|--------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| 1. The bright sun rises. | 7. The trees shed their leaves. |
| 2. The March winds blow. | 8. Farmers sell butter. |
| 3. A robin sings on the bough. | 9. Hail destroys the crops. |
| 4. The lilacs blossom. | 10. The archer bends the bow. |
| 5. The weather was mild. | 11. The ground looks white. |
| 6. The skies are clear. | 12. A bee stung Mary. |

2. (a) Which of these verbs assert that what the subject names does something, or performs some action? (b) Which verb represents the actor as doing something to a person or to a thing? (c) What action is asserted of the winds? (d) What word in the ninth sentence tells what the hail does? (e) What does the hail act upon? (f) Who performs the action of bending? (g) What object receives the action? (h) What is the object of "shed"? (i) Of "sell"?

Exercise 80. — 1. Give the object of these verbs; that is, tell the word that shows what receives the action:

- | | |
|---|----------------------------------|
| 1. I have sold my yacht. | 5. They founded a new nation. |
| 2. He has bought a farm. | 6. The engine has broken a rail. |
| 3. Who wrote the prescription? | 7. Who will take the tickets? |
| 4. The Pilgrims left their native land. | 8. We cannot speak French. |
| | 9. Ask the meaning of the word. |

2. Copy some of these sentences, marking subject and verb as before. Place two lines under the object. Thus:

The choppers fell the trees.

112. In nearly all the sentences in Exercise 79, the verb alone gives considerable information about the subject; but yet it would seem very incomplete to say —

The trees shed. Farmers sell. Hail destroys — for any one would wait to hear what the trees shed, what the farmers sell, and so on. We see, then, that there are still other verbs, such as shed, sell, destroys, bends, that we must call incomplete, since they have need of an object to fill out the meaning.

113. These verbs assert that some action is performed that passes over to and affects something else. The complement shows who or what it is that receives this action. So they are called Transitive, which means "passing over." The word that shows the receiver of the action is called the object of the verb.

114. We cannot tell whether a verb is transitive or not except by its use, for sometimes the verb without an object expresses as much as we wish to say, or else it has a different meaning. Thus, we may say, The man stopped the runaway horse, or The runaway horse stopped at the foot of the hill. In the first sentence the action denoted by the verb passes over to the object "horse." In the second sentence the action does not pass over, and the verb "stopped" is said to be used intransitively.

Exercise 81. — Tell whether the verb is transitive or intransitive; i.e., whether it has an object or not.

- | | |
|--|---|
| 1. That blind man never saw. | 7. Our national flag flies from the mast-head. |
| 2. I saw my friend on his return. | 8. The schooner in the offing flies a signal of distress. |
| 3. The bells ring merrily over the snow. | 9. The farmer plows his fields. |
| 4. The sexton rings the bell. | 10. The ships plow through the waves. |
| 5. The trees sway in the wind. | |
| 6. How the wind sways the trees! | |

115. A Transitive verb is one that has a complement showing who or what receives the action expressed by the verb.

116. The Object of a transitive verb is the word that denotes the receiver of the action.

III. COMPLEMENTS.

117. We have already learned about two kinds of complements:

I. Subjective Complements. The complement of a copulative verb refers to the subject, and is called a Subjective Complement.

Any word or phrase that can modify a noun or a pronoun may be a subjective complement; as —

Some plants are poisonous .	(adjective)
Your friends are musicians .	(noun)
It cannot have been he .	(pronoun)
Time is of great value .	(phrase)

118. II. Objects. The complement of a transitive verb is the Object of it, and has nothing to do with the subject of the sentence, but only with the verb.

119. Any noun or pronoun, or any phrase or clause used like a noun, may be used with a transitive verb as the object of it; as —

The jury has found a verdict .	(noun)
We have proved him innocent.	(pronoun)
Fear to do wrong .	(phrase)
Tell only what is true .	(clause)

120. III. Objective Complements. There are some transitive verbs that must often have a second complement to complete their meaning. Thus:

Age makes a man feeble .	Ice keeps water cool .
Elizabeth made Raleigh a knight .	Call your dog Bruno .

121. In "Age makes a man feeble" the verb makes alone does not express the action performed on a man, for we need the adjective feeble to show what quality is produced in him. We mean not "Age makes a man," but "Age makes-feeble, or enfeebles, a man."

So, too, the meaning of made in the second sentence is completed by the noun knight, which shows that knighthood was conferred upon

Raleigh — as if we had said "Elizabeth made-knight, or knighted, Raleigh."

122. Words used to complete the meaning of a transitive verb, and at the same time to add some name or quality to the object of it, are called Objective Complements — "objective" because they refer to the object, and "complements" because they complete the predicate.

Exercise 82. — Select the objective complements, and tell how each is used. In marking the analysis, underline the objective complement to show its connection with the verb, and inclose it in angles as a modifier of the object. Thus: The snow paints the fields <white>.

1. Fear made the soldiers pale. 2. We shall tint our walls green. 3. The people made Roosevelt president. 4. Time makes the worst enemies friends. 5. The warm weather has made the ice thin. 6. The Turks call their ruler Sultan. 7. The people called Paul, Jupiter. 8. The President has appointed Mr. Clark postmaster. 9. Get the horses ready immediately. 10. The club has chosen Roy captain. 11. We have appointed Henry Wise our agent. 12. The merchant sold his stock short.

123. A word used as the second complement of a transitive verb, and referring to the object of it, is called an Objective Complement.

Exercise 83. — Use these verbs in sentences with objective complements:

struck; make; named; appoint; elect; swept; called; dyed; chose; colored.

Exercise 84. — Select the complements of the verbs, and tell whether they are objects or subjective complements; that is, whether they refer to the subject or only modify the verb. Which sentences contain objective complements?

- | | |
|-------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| 1. Rivers to the ocean run. | 5. I can find no fault with him. |
| 2. The reason is very plain. | 6. A long rain will be welcome. |
| 3. The stars look very small. | 7. No one is ever too old to learn. |
| 4. Our souls are immortal. | 8. Every day brings its own duties. |

9. Good habits are most easily formed in youth.
10. We are the heirs of past generations.
11. A man's actions show his character.
12. The greatest English poet is Shakespeare.
13. He made money his chief aim.
14. A rolling stone gathers no moss.
15. The betrayer of his country is a traitor.
16. Every man must educate himself.
17. Praising what is lost makes remembrance dear.
18. Agriculture is the parent of all industries.
19. Mountain chains rob the winds of their moisture.
20. Wisdom's ways are ways of pleasantness.
21. War makes men bold.
22. Money alone can never make a man happy.

B. COMPLETE VERBS

124. Copulative and transitive verbs are the only ones that always need complements. Most others are complete in themselves. If we say —

The sun rises, The lilacs blossom, the assertion is complete without adding anything, for nobody could ask what the sun rises, or what the lilacs blossom. The rising or the blossoming does not necessarily affect anything else. Such verbs are called verbs of complete predication, or briefly, Complete verbs.

Exercise 85. — 1. (a) In the following sentences, which verbs assert an action that is complete in itself? (b) Which assert actions performed on or received by some person or thing? Give their complements.

- | | |
|---------------------------------|------------------------------------|
| 1. The morning dawned. | 5. Perseverance brings success. |
| 2. The bridge fell at noon. | 6. Cotton grows in Louisiana. |
| 3. The choppers fell the trees. | 7. Old Ironsides at anchor lay. |
| 4. The hunter lost the trail. | 8. Many fruits ripen in September. |

9. Our expected friends have arrived.
10. The angry man should control his passion.
11. We should hide the faults of others.
12. The grass withers and the flowers fade.
13. Time and tide wait for no man.
14. The melancholy days have come.
15. The city of Florence contains many palaces.
16. The farmers sow their seed in the spring.
17. If you plant in youth, you will reap in age.
18. He will spend the winter in Spain.
19. The fire in the woods burned for several days.
20. A fearful gale blew the ship out of its course.

2. Copy some of the preceding sentences, marking the subject, the verb, and the complement as before.

Complete and copulative verbs are often called Intransitive; that is not transitive.

125. Some verbs that are generally copulative may be used as complete verbs. The very common verb be — am, is, are, was, were — sometimes means exist, as in —

The time never was when God was not.

Generally when this verb is used in this way the sentence is introduced by there. Can you tell why?

Thus we say — There is no hope, not, No hope is.
There has been a severe storm.
There will be a large crop of wheat.

Exercise 86. — Which of these verbs are complete and which are copulative?

- | | |
|--------------------------------------|---------------------------------------|
| 1. Delays are dangerous. | 8. Nothing will grow in this climate. |
| 2. Yes, but there will be no delays. | |
| 3. A cat may look at a king. | 9. There is a king all must obey. |
| 4. A fool may look wise. | His name is Death. |
| 5. What will become of the acorn? | 10. To the victors belong the spoils. |
| 6. It will become an oak. | |
| 7. We must grow old or die. | |

Exercise 87. — 1. Read the following, thinking of them first as complete verbs, and then as transitive verbs. Then use them in sentences.

write	set	reap	cheat	give rides	succeed	learns	lose	sail

2. Select the verbs in Exercises 56 and 59, and tell whether they are complete, copulative, or transitive, and why.

Exercise 88. — 1. Think of the following as subjects of complete verbs. Then write the sentences they suggest.

lightning	war	time	spiders
moon	smoke	clocks	petroleum

2. Think of the following as subjects of transitive verbs, and write the suggested sentences.

reporters	avalanche	artists	locomotives
electricity	physicians	bankers	earthquakes

3. Use the same words as objects of transitive verbs.

4. Think of five objects which you saw on your way to school. Then write five sentences containing copulative verbs with adjectives as complements.

5. Write five with noun complements.

C. THE ESSENTIALS OF A SENTENCE

126. The materials that we must have for making the shortest of sentences are — a subject with a noun or a pronoun in it; and a predicate with a verb in it.

(a) Two words are required — something talked about, and something said; as—

Night comes.	Hope departs.	Life ends.
Look you!	Who calls?

(b) But when the verb is incomplete — that is, when the sentence would be almost meaningless without some other word in the predicate, — then three words at least are required; as —

We are children. Youth is hopeful. Love makes friends.

(c) When we have a transitive verb that requires a second complement, four words are needed; as —

Love makes labor light.

(d) When instead of a verb we have a verb-phrase, the number of essential words may be still larger; as —

Accidents may have caused delay.

127. In every sentence, then, there are these two, three, or four essential elements, out of which the whole sentence is constructed.

128. The essentials of a sentence, or what it needs more than anything else to give it meaning, are shown below.

The Essentials of a Simple Sentence
Subject	Predicate
Subject	Complete Verb	_____	_____
Subject	Copulative Verb	Subjective Complement	_____
Subject	Transitive Verb	Object	_____
Subject	Transitive Verb	Object	Objective Complement

129. The Essentials of a Sentence are its Simple Subject, Verb, and Complement without their modifiers.

Exercise 89. — 1. Reduce each sentence to its simplest form or mark it by underlining its essentials in this way:

Under the subject draw a wavy line ~~~~~.

Under the verb draw a straight line _____.

Under the object draw two straight lines =====.

Under the subjective complement draw a straight line with a wavy line under it for adjectives ;

Over it for nouns or pronouns .

Under the objective complement draw a straight line and inclose it in angles. Thus:

The sun always shines somewhere.

Your favor will be very acceptable.

1900 was not a leap-year.

The sentinel stars set their watch in the sky.

Love makes labor (light).

1. Our good deeds live after us.
2. Seconds are the gold-dust of time.
3. The orbit of the earth is elliptical.
4. Most male citizens over twenty-one can vote.
5. At sea the distant clouds seem low.
6. They made him captain of the foot-ball eleven.
7. The old mayor climbed the belfry tower.
8. Joan of Arc perished at the stake.
9. Regret for a misspent past will be useless.
10. The miser willed his property to a college.
11. Stone walls do not a prison make.
12. Young hearts never grow old.
13. We have tinted our walls green.

2. Treat other exercises in the same way, until the essentials of a sentence can be recognized and described very readily.

D. MODIFIERS

Questions. — 1. What is a sentence? An assertion? What are the essential parts of one? 2. How many and what kinds of words must be used to make an assertion? 3. Illustrate from these sentences the meaning of "subject," "verb," "complement," "essentials," "modifier," and "adjective."

Cowardly men are generally poor soldiers.

These fine steamers now make regular trips.

4. What kind of steamers is meant? Which ones? 5. What words modify the verbs? What word describes the trips? 6. How would you say the subject and the object are modified?

130. Sometimes our sentences consist of only the two or three words that we have called the essentials; but generally we find it necessary to modify some part in order to express our meaning exactly.

Thus, instead of "Sheep furnish wool," or "They came," we might wish to say, "My son's sheep, a foreign breed, furnish wool of fine quality," or "They unexpectedly came yesterday | from town | to welcome us."

By adding modifiers, we construct fuller sentences, and it is about the construction or growth of sentences that we are to study now.

1. ADJECTIVES AS MODIFIERS

131. We know that the subject, the object, and sometimes the subjective complement, is a noun or a pronoun, and that adjectives may modify nouns wherever they occur; hence we conclude that Adjectives may be added to either the subject or the complement as modifiers. Thus:

Australian sheep furnish fine wool.

These | black sheep furnish some | valuable wool.

Glass is a brittle, transparent substance.

Adjectives thus added directly to a noun, i.e., without the intervention of a verb, are called Attributive Adjectives.

Exercise 90. — 1. (a) Classify each sentence; that is, tell its kind. (b) Read the essentials. (c) Point out the subject and its modifiers. (d) Point out the verb. (e) Point out the complement, tell its kind, and give its modifiers. Thus:

The first is a simple, assertive sentence. Its essentials are dogs re- spect masters. The subject dogs is modified by the adjective savage. The verb is respect. The object masters is modified by the adjective stern.

1. Savage dogs respect stern masters.
2. Coming events cast long shadows.
3. Has any man a heavy coat?
4. Take the broad, open path.
5. Such long journeys are tiresome.
6. A low barometer indicates stormy weather.
7. Hidden fire makes black smoke.
8. An uncontrolled appetite is a relentless master.
9. The Polish salt-mines seem inexhaustible.
10. The longest day has an end.
11. Your barking dogs are cowardly.
12. Destructive freshets have injured the late crops.
13. Is that snow-capped mountain an extinct volcano?

2. Copy the preceding sentences, and mark the essentials as before. Inclose each subject-modifier in curves (), and each complement-modifier in angles { }. Thus:

(These) sheep have {long} horns.

3. Write sentences to show the use of adjectives as one of the essentials of the sentence.

4. Write six sentences that illustrate their use as modifiers.

DIRECTIONS FOR MARKING SENTENCES

132. Every subject is to be marked with a wavy line, every verb with a straight line. The complement is always marked with two lines, — both also straight for the object, since that modifies only the verb; but one of them wavy for the subjective complement, since that is not only a part of the predicate, but is also related to the subject. The predicate noun is distinguished from the predicate adjective by placing the wavy line first.

The {objective complement} is underlined to show its relation to the verb, and inclosed in angles as a modifier of the complement.

Every (subject-modifier) of whatever kind is to be inclosed in curves, every [verb-modifier] in brackets, and every (complement-modifier) in angles.

Independent expressions are to be left unmarked.

2. ADVERBS AS MODIFIERS

133. Besides a noun or a pronoun, every sentence always, as we know, contains a verb, and it sometimes contains an adjective as the complement of the verb. We know, too, that if a verb or an adjective needs a modifier to finish the meaning, an Adverb may be used. For example:

The man approached cautiously. Children sometimes make mistakes — where the verbs are modified; and —

Some pine trees are perfectly straight. The old elm was almost dead — where the adjective complements are modified.

Exercise 91. — 1. Point out the principal parts of each sentence and their modifiers, as in the preceding exercise.

- | | |
|--|--|
| 1. All the bells ring mournfully. | 8. He probably came here lately. |
| 2. Some faces look very sad. | 9. Those stories are hardly credible. |
| 3. The whistle always shrieks wildly. | 10. The sun always shines brightly somewhere. |
| 4. The summons is quite welcome. | 11. Most early navigators were very venturesome. |
| 5. This spot is delightfully cool. | 12. I have been too idle heretofore. |
| 6. Such bright days rarely come. | |
| 7. The officers were criminally negligent. | |

2. Copy each sentence, underline the essentials, and mark the modifiers. Put verb-modifiers in brackets []. Thus:

(Those) ships [frequently] make (long) voyages.

We are [never] (entirely) alone.

3. Write four sentences illustrating the use of adverbs as modifiers.

3. ADJECTIVE AND ADVERB PHRASES

134. We have seen how the essentials of the sentence may be modified by the addition of adjectives and adverbs. The next step will be to give to these added words modifiers of their own.

Thus, instead of high, always, and many, in —

High winds always injure many trees, we may modify each with an adverb, and say:

Unusually high winds almost always destroy very many trees.

Here it is easy to see that “destroy,” for instance, is modified not by always alone, but by the phrase almost always, since the adverb almost is added to show that we do not mean quite always.

How is “winds” modified? “Trees”? Does very many take the place of an adjective or an adverb? What may adverbs modify?

(a) These little phrases (“unusually high,” etc.) are used as modifiers very much like single words; and when a noun or a verb has several modifiers, some of them may be words and some phrases. Thus:

Some | large | thrifty | rather graceful | trees.

They unexpectedly came slowly and very quietly.

Exercise 92. — 1. Give the essentials of each sentence and the modifiers. Select the modifiers that are phrases, and tell whether they are like adjectives or like adverbs.

1. Very few persons are perfectly happy.
2. We beheld the dark blue sky.
3. Will forgetful boys become good business men?
4. He displayed intensely disagreeable manners.
5. Hereafter I shall study more diligently.
6. Some rather dull boys have become very famous men.

2. Copy, and mark the essentials and the modifiers. Thus:

(This) (same) person [very recently] made (a) (rather tiresome) speech.

3. Write four sentences containing modified adjectives and modified adverbs.

135. An Adjective phrase consists of an adjective with its modifiers.

136. An Adverb phrase consists of an adverb with its modifiers.

When an adjective or an adverb takes a modifier of any sort, we have a phrase; as, beautiful in color, suitable for driving, where an adjective is modified by a prepositional phrase; a little cautiously, ten feet farther, where an adverb is modified by a noun phrase.

4. ADJECTIVE AND ADVERB CLAUSES

137. Adjective Clauses. We have seen that the essentials of a sentence may be modified by adjectives and adjective phrases. Let us study still another form of modifiers.

We need trustworthy boys.

We need boys that may be trusted.

1. Do these sentences differ in meaning? 2. How do they differ in form? 3. How are the boys described in each sentence? 4. What kind of modifier is trustworthy? 5. What kind of modifier must the equivalent expression that may be trusted be? 6. What does that stand for? 7. How many subjects and predicates in the second sentence? 8. What are they?

138. The second sentence contains two groups of words each having a subject and a predicate — we need boys, and that may be trusted. The first might be a complete sentence. The second group, however, depends for its meaning in part upon the first, and is used like an adjective to modify boys.

139. These parts of a sentence, each with a subject and a predicate, are called clauses. A clause that has meaning when used alone is an independent or principal clause. A clause whose meaning is incomplete when used alone, is a dependent or subordinate clause.

140. A clause is a part of a sentence containing a subject and a predicate.

141. An Independent or Principal Clause is one that is complete in meaning when used alone.

142. A Dependent or Subordinate Clause is one that is used as an adjective, adverb, or noun.

143. An Adjective Clause is one used like an adjective.

Exercise 93. — Point out the principal and the dependent clauses. What does each adjective clause modify?

1. Time that is once lost, is lost forever. 2. Ethan Allen was the officer who captured Ticonderoga. 3. Read the paragraph which describes the capture. 4. A house that is divided against itself cannot stand. 5. That life is long which answers life's great ends. 6. The Pyrenees are the mountains that separate France and Spain. 7. No man who needs a monument ever ought to have one. 8. 'Tis heaven alone that is given away. 9. The evil that men do lives after them.

144. Adverb Clauses. Just as some dependent clauses are used as adjectives, others are used as adverbs. Thus:

Come now. Come at once. Come when I call you.

Stand here. Stand in this place. Stand where you are.

1. In these imperative sentences how is come modified? 2. What expressions tell where one is to stand? 3. Which of the modifiers are words? Phrases? Clauses? 4. Give the subject and predicate of each clause. 5. Use these clauses in sentences as modifiers: — when the bell rings; — before the car started; — because it was closed.

145. An Adverb clause is one used like an adverb.

Exercise 94. — Select the adverb clauses, and tell what they modify.

1. The book was found where you put it.
2. They will do as they are bidden.
3. Come as the waves come when navies are stranded.
4. Think of the future when you spend money needlessly.
5. He whistled as he went for want of thought.
6. Scatter flowers where our heroes lie buried.

5. PREPOSITIONAL PHRASES

146. There are several other kinds of modifying expressions which have the meaning and use of adjectives and adverbs.

147. A Prepositional Phrase may always be used like an adjective or adverb. Thus:

As one of the essentials, like a predicate adjective:

Our utensils were of wood (= wooden).

These savages are from Africa (= African).

As a modifier:

The low mountains (of Vermont) contain marble.

The layers, or beds, extend [for miles].

They show great difference (in color).

I am happy (beyond measure).

Burns was a man (of genius).

What does each phrase modify? What modifiers are there besides the phrases?

Exercise 95. — 1. Copy, underline the essentials, and mark the modifiers, as in preceding exercises.

1. The path of industry is the path to success.
2. The needle of the compass may not always point toward the north.
3. The invention of letters was attributed to the Phoenicians.
4. The Queen of Sheba saw the wisdom of Solomon.
5. Twenty slaves were brought to Virginia in 1619.
6. The weight of evidence is against you.
7. A dull, heavy cloud of vapor hangs gloomily in the sky above our heads.

2. How many words are needed to make a prepositional phrase? Of what kind must they be? In the seventh sentence, how many modifiers has "cloud"? How many has "hangs"?

148. Modified Prepositional Phrases. The object of a preposition, like a noun in any other use, may be modified by one or more adjectives, or by phrases used as adjectives. Thus we may say:

The height of mountains.

The height of these mountains.

The height of these lofty mountains.

The height of mountains in Alaska.

In the first sentence the object of the preposition is unmodified, in the second it is modified by a limiting adjective, in the third by a limiting and a descriptive adjective, and in the fourth by a prepositional phrase used as an adjective.

Words which modify other modifying words, may be called secondary modifiers.

Exercise 96. — Find the nouns used in prepositional phrases and name the modifiers:

1. They marched to the sound of brazen trumpets. 2. The size of a man's head should determine the size of his hat. 3. In this small corner of the great Abbey lies the dust of many famous poets. 4. The paper in his nervous hand shook with a tremulous movement like that of an aspen leaf. 5. A dollar in the hand is worth ten dollars in some one else's pocket.

149. A Prepositional phrase consists of a preposition and its object with or without modifiers.

6. POSSESSIVES; MODIFIERS OF ANOTHER KIND

150. Sometimes a word is adjective by nature, like those we have been studying; but a word that seems to be something else may be also adjective by use. In these sentences —

Edward's bicycle has just broken down,
They heard the horse's hoofs,
Your yacht was in the race — can you find any words used like adjectives? Do they seem at all like nouns or verbs? To whom did the bicycle belong? What hoofs were heard? Who owned the yacht?

151. Such words as Edward's, horse's, your, are called Possessives, because, if the statements just made are true, we can say —

Edward had, or "possessed," a bicycle,
The horse had, or "possessed," hoofs,
You had, or "possessed," a yacht — and we see that they are really nouns or pronouns changed a little from the common form, and used like adjectives to describe the thing mentioned by showing to whom or to what it belongs.

Exercise 97. — 1. Mention all the possessives, and tell what nouns they modify:

1. England's navy is very powerful. 2. Men's good deeds may live forever. 3. Children's manners show their training. 4. Napoleon ended his days at St. Helena. 5. We decorate her grave with flowers. 6. Your money will be used for soldiers' monuments. 7. Is there a proverb about kings' daughters? 8. Greenland's warm climate is its greatest treasure. 9. Winter's rude tempests are gathering now. 10. Wisdom's ways are ways of pleasantness. 11. You'll find hornets' nests there. 12. Does Ecuador's largest coin equal our double eagle?

2. Change the possessive nouns to prepositional phrases, thus: "Greenland's climate" means "The climate of Greenland."

3. Analyze the sentences by marking the essentials and modifiers.

152. To make the possessive form, nouns commonly take an apostrophe and s ['s]; but if an s has already been added to make the word plural, they take only an apostrophe [']. [The pronouns are changed in various ways; you, your; they, their; he, his; I, my; she, her, etc.]

153. A Possessive is a special form of a noun or a pronoun used to show whose property is meant.

7. APPOSITIVES: NOUNS USED AS SECOND NAMES

154. Another sort of modifier appears in this example:

This man is James Hooper, treasurer.

The nouns James Hooper and treasurer evidently refer to the same person, and we understand that James Hooper is treasurer. So, speaking of two men who are machinists we might say:

Hardy and Greene, machinists, have just failed.

Exercise 98. — In the following sentences:

My brother Rudolphus is coming home,
I, William, am to be married,
William Shakespeare, poet, died in 1616,
William Shakespeare, confectioner, lives in D street,
We had reached that great wheat market, Chicago — what word shows which brother is meant? Which words show who is meant by "William Shakespeare"? By "I"? In the fifth find two names for one thing.

155. A noun is often added to another noun to describe or explain its meaning, when one name is not enough. The noun thus added is called an appositive, and is just as much a modifier as an adjective is, though, unlike an adjective, it almost always follows the word it modifies.

The word appositive means "put by the side of."

Exercise 99. — 1. Select the appositives, and tell to what words they refer.

1. The historian Macaulay wrote "The Lays of Ancient Rome."
2. The river Nile overflows its banks annually. 3. The seventh month, July, was named in honor of Julius Cæsar. 4. The children's favorite was Eugene Field, the poet. 5. The New England festival, Thanksgiving, comes in November. 6. The capital of New York, Albany, is on the Hudson. 7. We boys have neglected our lessons. 8. She advised us girls to be patient. 9. You carpenters have a busy life.

2. Make sentences, using the first five appositives as subjects modified by appositives.

156. An Appositive is a noun used with another noun or with a pronoun to explain its meaning.

8. POSSESSIVE AND APPOSITIVE PHRASES

157. Possessive and appositive phrases will be easy for us to understand because, like adjective and adverb phrases, they are only possessives and appositives, with their modifiers.

158. We must remember that possessives and appositives are only used like adjectives; they are not what we call adjectives, but are really nouns or pronouns. Hence they have the same modifiers that other nouns and pronouns have.

Thus, instead of girl's hair, we might wish to speak of

This young Japanese girl's hair, using a possessive phrase in which the adjectives this, young, and Japanese all modify the possessive girl's.

So with appositives:

My companion, an old friend from Ohio, was very entertaining.

Here an, old, and from Ohio are added to the appositive as secondary modifiers.

159. An Appositive phrase is an appositive with all its modifiers.

160. A Possessive phrase is a possessive with all its modifiers.

Exercise 100. — 1. Tell which phrases in the following are appositive and which possessive; and give the modifiers in each phrase.

1. Charles Dickens, the great English novelist, died in 1870. 2. The Moon, the satellite of the Earth, is about two thousand miles in diameter. 3. In 1807, Robert Fulton, an American engineer, sailed the first steamboat, the Clermont, on the Hudson. 4. Benjamin Franklin, a distinguished American statesman, was born in Boston in 1706. 5. Who would disregard a loving mother's counsel? 6. The brave colonel's reply was, "I'll try, sir." 7. Whittier, the Quaker poet, wrote "Snow Bound, A Winter Idyl." 8. Nathaniel Hawthorne, author of "The Marble Faun," was born in Salem, a city in Massachusetts. 9. Cortez, the conqueror of Mexico, was a Spaniard. 10. Remember your last year's experiences. 11. This is a debt of many years' standing. 12. Now comes the morning star, day's harbinger.

2. Analyze the preceding sentences by copying and marking.

Exercise 101. — Read these words and note the ideas they suggest to you. Then make sentences containing these words modified by appositive words or phrases.

Gen. Putnam	Harrisburg	author	Chicago
steamboat	David	inventor	Amazon
Edward VII.	student	Mt. Shasta	commander

9. APPOSITIVE CLAUSES

161. Some dependent clauses are used as appositive modifiers just as nouns are. Thus:

The fact that life is short should keep us busy.

The message, that peace was declared, flashed over the wires.

Harvey made the discovery that the blood circulates.

1. Point out the dependent clauses in these sentences. 2. Tell the subject and predicate of each. 3. Read each sentence omitting the clause. 4. What word does each one explain?

Appositives are generally nouns. A clause used as an appositive is a Noun Clause.

Exercise 102. — Select the noun clauses, and tell what each one modifies. Show the subject and the predicate. Read the principal clause.

1. The rumor that the steamer had been burnt was unfounded. 2. The statement that the earth is round is now undisputed. 3. The question whether I go or stay is still unanswered. 4. The wonder grew that one small head could carry all he knew. 5. Do not forget this — that the door to success is always marked "Push."

162. A Noun Clause is one used like a noun.

163. A Complex Sentence is one containing a principal clause and one or more subordinate clauses.

SUMMARY : MODIFIERS

164. We now understand how it is that a sentence may be very long; for it may contain several clauses, and we must often modify a word again and again before we can express exactly what we mean.

The simplest modifiers for each part of speech are given below. [See Chap. XV.]

Nouns and Pronouns may have for modifiers —

- | | | |
|-----------------------------------|---|---|
| 1. An Adjective | { | word: Kind hearts are more than coronets.
phrase: This is an extremely interesting book.
clause: Those that came remained. |
| 2. A Prepositional Phrase: | | The life of Livingstone was one of self-sacrifice. |
| 3. A Possessive | { | word: His energy was his only capital.
phrase: Every man's work shall be manifest. |
| 4. An Appositive | { | word: The poet Milton was blind.
phrase: Homer , the Greek poet, was blind.
clause: The fact that he is dead is proved. |

Verbs, Adjectives, and Adverbs may have for modifiers —

1. An Adverb { word: He gives twice who gives quickly.
 phrase: Shall we not strive more constantly?
 clause: Go when he calls you.
2. A Prepositional Phrase: Look not mournfully into the past.

The other parts of speech are very rarely modified.

KINDS OF SENTENCES : SUMMARY

165. We have learned that in their meaning or use sentences are of three kinds:

Assertive (or Declarative), containing statements.

Interrogative, asking questions.

Imperative, making commands or requests.

166. In form, sentences may be of four kinds —

Simple, having one independent clause.

Compound, having two or more independent clauses.

Complex, having one independent clause and at least one dependent clause.

Complex Compound, having at least two independent clauses and one or more dependent clauses.

167. The subject of a sentence may be —

Simple, A friend in need is a friend indeed.

Compound, Honor and fame from no condition rise.

The essential predicate of a sentence may be —

Simple, Slowly the mist o'er the meadow was creeping.

Compound, In Him we live and move and have our being.

The complement of a verb may be —

Simple, Honor the memory of our fallen comrades.

It seems but an idle tale.

Life is too short to be wasted.

Compound, Bring roses sweet and lilies fair.

Franklin was a philosopher and a statesman.

The traitor died unwept, unhonored, and unsung.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY

I passed some time in Poet's Corner, which occupies an end of one of the transepts or cross aisles of the abbey. The monuments are generally simple, for the lives of literary men afford no striking themes for the sculptor. Shakespeare and Addison have statues erected to their memories; but the greater part have busts, medallions, and sometimes mere inscriptions. Notwithstanding the simplicity of these memorials, I have always observed that the visitors to the abbey remained longest about them. A kinder and fonder feeling takes place of that cold curiosity or vague admiration with which they gaze on the splendid monuments of the great and the heroic. They linger about these as about the tombs of friends and companions; for indeed there is something of companionship between the author and the reader. Other men are known to posterity only through the medium of history, which is continually growing faint and obscure; but the intercourse between the author and his fellow-men is ever new, active, and immediate. He has lived for them more than for himself; he has sacrificed surrounding enjoyments, and shut himself up from the delights of social life, that he might the more intimately commune with distant minds and distant ages. Well may the world cherish his renown; for it has been purchased, not by deeds of violence and blood, but by the diligent dispensation of pleasure. Well may posterity be grateful to his memory; for he has left it an inheritance, not of empty names and sounding actions, but whole treasures of wisdom, bright gems of thought, and golden veins of language.

— Washington Irving.

Exercise 103. — 1. Select five words belonging to each part of speech. 2. Mention five transitive verbs with their objects. 3. Five copulative verbs and their complements. 4. Quote an adjective clause. 5. What appositive in the first sentence? 6. What indirect object in the last? 7. Select three complete verbs. 8. Write the essentials of the first ten clauses. 9. What series of adjectives do you notice? 10. For what are the semicolons used?

CHAPTER V

SENTENCE-ANALYSIS

Exercise 104. — 1. Mention the three classes into which sentences are divided according to meaning. 2. What is a simple sentence? 3. A compound sentence? 4. Into what may every compound sentence be separated? 5. Every simple sentence? 6. Into what may every enlarged subject be separated? 7. Every enlarged predicate? 8. Name the two essentials that are found in a sentence. 9. The three essentials. 10. What parts of speech may form a complement? 11. What is a modifier?

168. While studying the building up of sentences we have had some practice in Analysis, or the taking apart of sentences; for we have pointed out their principal parts, and have shown how each is modified.

169. Analysis is the process of separating a sentence into its parts, and of showing what they have to do with one another.

170. Method. — If, in analyzing a sentence, we treat modifying phrases or clauses as single words, the structure of it can be made clear, either orally or in writing, by telling in this order —

1. The kind of sentence.
2. The kind of clauses that form it.
3. The principal clause (or clauses).
 - a. The subject and its modifiers.
 - b. The verb and its modifiers.
 - c. The complement and its modifiers.
4. The subordinate clause (or clauses).
 - a. The subject and its modifiers.
 - b. The verb and its modifiers.
 - c. The complement and its modifiers.

5. The connectives.

6. The independent expressions.

Model for Analysis. — "A fool speaks all his mind, but a wise man reserves something for hereafter."

1. This is a compound assertive sentence.
2. Formed by uniting two simple assertions.
3. The essentials of the first assertion are fool speaks mind.
4. The subject fool is modified by the adjective a.
5. The verb speaks is completed by its object mind.
6. The object mind is modified by the adjective all, and by the possessive his.
7. The essentials of the second assertion are man reserves something.
8. The subject man is modified by the adjectives a and wise.
9. The verb reserves is modified by the prepositional phrase for hereafter.
10. The object something is unmodified.
11. The conjunction but unites the two assertions.

171. A phrase or a dependent clause may be analyzed by telling —

- | | |
|------------------------------|----------------------------|
| 1. Its kind . | 3. The essentials . |
| 2. What it modifies . | 4. The modifiers . |

Thus, in the sentence —

De Soto (the discoverer of the Mississippi) was buried [in its waters], — we may say that the discoverer of the Mississippi is —

1. An appositive phrase,
2. Modifying the noun De Soto.
- 3 and 4. The noun discoverer is modified by the adjective the and by the prepositional phrase of the Mississippi.

172. A simple form of written analysis is that already given on page 58. Thus:

(A) fool speaks {all} {his} mind, | but | (a) (wise) man reserves
something [for hereafter].

[⁺When] hope is lost] all is lost.

173. Secondary Modifiers may be joined to what they modify by lines straight or curved, an arrow-head showing the modified word. Thus:

[During the distress of-the-American-army], Richard Venable,
 (an army commissioner), took [from James Hook, a Scotchman],
 {two} steers [for the use of-the-troops].

174. When there is reason for the change, modifiers of almost every kind may be placed in inverted order, or they may be separated from that part of the sentence to which they belong; e.g.:

A maiden fair. And I the victor slew. Lean thou this staff upon. Slowly the day declines. For us the sun ne'er sets.

In oral analysis, we must be careful to transpose every part of the sentence to its more usual place.

When modified by a phrase, an adjective usually follows its noun. Thus, we say, "a man ready for work," not "a ready for work man."

Exercise 105. — 1. Read each of the following sentences, transpose into the usual order, and explain what changes you make.

2. Copy and analyze by marking thus:

[Up the hill] {his} horse he [hotly] urged.

1. Here ends the tale. 2. Many are our faults. 3. A mighty king was he. 4. Of years ago I'm dreaming. 5. The queen hath him offended. 6. Of many men the names he knew. 7. To pastures new press we now eagerly on. 8. Within my garden bloomed a lily tall. 9. Through the dark defile wound the long battalion slowly. 10. Here once the embattled farmers stood. 11. Lightly from bough to bough fluttered the birds in the tree-tops. 12. A vision bright at dead of night I saw. 13. Slowly and sadly we laid him down.

Exercise 106. — 1. Read and transpose as in Exercise 104.

2. Copy and make a written analysis, as in § 170.

1. Somewhere the birds are singing evermore.
2. Pleasantly rose the sun on the village of Grand Pré.
3. Under the spreading chestnut-tree
The village smithy stands.
4. Down the broad valley, fast and far,
The troubled army fled.
5. There wandered a noble Moslem boy
Through the scene of beauty in breathless joy.
6. Safely through another week
God has brought us on our way.
7. Softly now the light of day
Fades upon my sight away.

Exercise 107. — Analyze the following sentences in full, orally, in writing, or by marking:

1. What think ye of this? 2. How use doth breed a habit in a man! 3. Heaven helps those who help themselves. 4. All things come to him who will but wait. 5. Study wisdom, and you will reap pleasure. 6. These are the reasons that have been given. 7. Here rest the great and good in lowly graves. 8. Betwixt eyes and nose a strange contest arose. 9. He is the freeman whom the truth makes free. 10. The human body is a study for one's whole life. 11. Hypocrisy is the tribute that vice pays to virtue. 12. The streams of small pleasures fill the lake of happiness. 13. The fate of empires depends upon the education of youth. 14. Not every disappointment which a man meets is a misfortune. 15. In the market-place of Bruges stands the belfry, old and brown. 16. Strong is thy dwelling-place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rock. 17. The first and greatest end of education is the discipline of the mind. 18. Work while it is day; the night cometh in which no man can work. 19. Hands of angels, unseen by mortal eyes, shifted the scenery of the heavens; the glories of night dissolved into the glories of the dawn.

20. Among the pitfalls in our way.
The best of us walk blindly.
21. Duty points, with outstretched fingers,
Every soul to action high.
22. Oft on the trampling band, from crown
Of some tall cliff, the deer look down.
23. Silently, one by one, in the infinite meadows of heaven,
Blossomed the lovely stars, the forget-me-nots of the angels.
24. O softly on yon bank of haze
Her rosy face the summer lays.
25. They are slaves who fear to speak
For the fallen and the weak.
26. Through all the long midsummer day
The meadow sides are sweet with hay.
27. Lack of occupation is not rest;
A mind quite vacant is a mind distressed.
28. Still stands the forest primeval; but under the shade of its branches
Dwells another race, with other customs and language.
29. The master of the district school,
Brisk wielder of the birch and rule,
Held at the fire his favored place.
30. In the Acadian land, on the shores of the Basin of Minas,
Distant, secluded, still, the little village of Grand Pré
Lay in the fruitful valley.
31. Then came the laborers home from the field, and serenely the sun sank
Down to his rest, and twilight prevailed.
32. Somewhat apart from the village, and near the Basin of Minas,
Benedict Bellefontaine, the wealthiest farmer of Grand Pré,
Dwelt on his goodly acres; and with him, directing his household,
Gentle Evangeline lived, his child, and the pride of the village.
33. Thus, at peace with God and the world, the farmer of Grand Pré Lived on his sunny farm, and Evangeline governed his household.

GEN. WARREN'S ADDRESS AT THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL

Stand! the ground's your own, my braves!
Will ye give it up to slaves?
Will ye look for greener graves?
 Hope ye mercy still?
What's the mercy despots feel?
Hear it in that battle peal!
See it in yon bristling steel!
 Ask it, ye who will!

Fear ye foes who kill for hire?
Will ye to your homes retire?
Look behind you! — they're afire!
 And, before you, — see
Who have done it! From the vale
On they come! and will ye quail?
Leaden rain and iron hail
 Let their welcome be!

In the God of battles trust!
Die we may: and die we must:
But, oh! where can dust to dust
 Be consigned so well,
As where heaven its dews shall shed
On the martyred patriot's bed,
And the rocks shall raise their head,
 Of his deeds to tell?

— John Pierpont.

Questions. — 1. How many assertive, or declarative, sentences in this selection? 2. How many interrogative sentences? 3. How many imperative sentences? 4. What pronoun is omitted from the fifth line of the first stanza? 5. What adjective clause in the second stanza? 6. Make a list of the adverbs in the third stanza. 7. Explain the last two lines. 8. What are the modifiers of come in the second stanza? 9. What is the complement of be in the same stanza? 10. What transitive verbs in the last stanza? 11. How many sentences are used in an exclamative way? Why?

PART TWO

THE PARTS OF SPEECH

CHAPTER VI

NOUNS

Exercise 108. — 1. What is a noun? 2. If a word stands as subject of a sentence, to what parts of speech may it belong? 3. To what if it is the object of a verb or of a preposition? 4. What do you call a word that is modified by an adjective? 5. How do you tell whether a word is a noun or not? 6. What kinds of words or phrases may modify a noun? 7. Use "store" as the subject of a sentence, and give it two or three modifiers. 8. Use "president" as an object, and modify it by a prepositional phrase and an appositive.

A. KINDS

COMMON AND PROPER

175. Nouns may be divided into classes according to their meaning.

Exercise 109. — 1. (a) Does the name "gulf" always stand for the same body of water? (b) To how many parts of a year may the word "month" apply? (c) To how many does the word "April" apply?

2. About each of the following nouns say whether it may represent any one of several things, or is meant to be the special name of one individual.

river	Amazon	city	Berlin mountain	Vesuvius	ocean	Atlantic continent	Africa	dog	Bruno orator	Webster	month	August
holiday	Christmas	book	"Jo's Boys"

2. (a) Which word in each of the following groups applies to the greatest number? (b) Which to the least? (c) Which are names for every one of a certain class? (d) Which are "given names"? (e) Name another individual of each class.

man	ruler	vessel	gentleman author	sovereign	steamer	scholar poet	king	battle-ship	teacher
Longfellow	Edward VII.	Oregon	Dr. Arnold

176. Some nouns, such as "man" or "water," represent a thing as being of a certain kind or class, without showing which particular one or which part is meant. Other nouns are names given to designate a particular individual.

Thus the noun man may apply to any one of millions of persons, but the name John Milton applies to one person only. The name city is held in common by hundreds of places, because they are in some respects alike; but Philadelphia, Chicago, Omaha, are names given to certain cities, to be, as it were, their exclusive property.

177. A name held in common by all of a kind is called a Common Noun; and a special name given to one individual for its own is called a Proper Noun.

"Proper" is derived from a word meaning one's own.

178. Common Nouns, such as clock, kitchen, tree, glass, putty, oysters, weight, writing, mercy, have meanings that describe things and show what they are by nature.

Proper nouns, as we use them, have no longer much meaning in themselves, and like the word Dick, which may name a horse, a man, a boy, a dog, or a bird, they serve only to designate one person, place, or thing.

We can judge by looking at an object what common nouns to apply to it; but if it has a proper name that must be learned in some other way

Exercise 110. — 1. Tell which of these nouns are common and which proper:

King	Solomon	Temper	Music	Paris
Rome	Eagle	Shasta	Noise	Samuel
Ocean	Peru	Mitchell	Piano	Riches
War	Beauty	Warden	Mozart	Mercy

2. Does the last word in each column show what sort of person is meant? If so, these words are common nouns.

179. A Proper Noun is a special name meant for only one person or thing.

All other nouns are common nouns.

180. A Common Noun is a general name that applies to any part or to all of a kind or class of objects.

Proper nouns are sometimes used as class names, or common nouns. As — A Napoleon; The four Georges; A Daniel come to judgment!

Exercise 111. — 1. Write the special or proper names of several individuals in each of the following classes:

River; town; volcano; governor; king; author; country; planet; queen; dog; historian; state; yacht; month; painter; poet; capital; president; book; inventor.

2. What are the people called who live in the following places? Thus:

"Canada," Canadians; "Genoa," Genoese.

Canada; Genoa; Cuba; Spain; Venice; Italy; Europe; Mexico; Brazil; Burmah; China; Japan; Malta; Norway; Boston.

COLLECTIVE NOUNS

1. What is the difference between a soldier and an army? 2. A ship and a fleet? 3. A singer and a choir? 4. Of what is a jury made up? A flock? 6. A school?

181. Some nouns, even in the singular form, may be plural in meaning, and are called Collective Nouns, because they denote a collection of individuals.

Exercise 112. — Fill the blanks so as to show of what each collection is composed:

1. A regiment of —.
2. A crew of —.
3. A swarm of —.
4. A herd of —.
5. The Senate contains —.
6. A family of —.
7. A team of —.
8. A pair of —.
9. A club of —.
10. A troop of —.
11. — in the constellation.
12. — on the committee.
13. — in the tribe.
14. — in the pack.
15. — in Congress.

182. A Collective Noun is one that even in the singular form denotes a number of separate persons or things.

Exercise 113. — Define each word so as to show that it is a collective noun:

Group; class; council; hive; multitude; jury; fleet; flock; mob; society; band; drove; couple; bevy; gang; horde; corps; suite.

CONCRETE AND ABSTRACT NOUNS

183. The names of objects that are perceived by the senses, that is, which include all living things and whatever is like a solid, a liquid, or a vapor, are sometimes called Concrete nouns.

The names of the qualities, or attributes, or actions of such objects considered separately from the objects themselves are called Abstract nouns.

"Abstract" means drawn off, separated.

184. Nouns of this class apply to what cannot take up room, or be weighed, or touched, or moved. Thus:

Motion, movement, hurry, race, speed, distance, absence.

Beauty, color, freshness, brilliancy, gleam, warmth.

Harmony, music, tune, discord, sound, disturbance, war.

185. Kinds. Of the many kinds of abstract nouns, the most important are —

1. Nouns that name a quality or a condition; as — brightness, poverty, pride, weight, flexibility.
2. Verbal nouns, which name the action asserted by a verb; as — learning, rejoicing, loving, to swing, to skate.

Exercise 114. — 1. Select from this list five words that may be names of actions, ten names of qualities or conditions.

weakness	industry	hoping	speed	fear despair	temperance	heat	slumber	hunger
singing	haste	reading	dashing	coasting

2. Name four qualities or conditions of — wood	gold	an explorer	a good son

air	water	a gymnast	a great man
camels	music	a miser	an agreeable companion

186. An Abstract Noun is the name of a quality, a condition, or an action.

Exercise 115. — There are five nouns of a kind in the following list. Which of them are proper nouns? Which collective? Which abstract?

Maryland; Great Bear; legislature; Eliot; Frenchman; Englishman; skill; humility; audience; slavery; Quito; knowledge; brigade; bevy; suite; Thursday; marching.

B. INFLECTION

CHANGES IN FORM FOR DIFFERENT USES

187. Besides using adjectives or other modifiers to show just what a word represents, it is often necessary to change the form of the word according to its different uses or applications; i.e., to inflect it.

Thus: trees, tree's are inflected forms of the noun tree; sweeter and sweetest, of the adjective sweet; his and him of the pronoun he; and drove, driving, driven, drive, drivest, of the verb drive.

188. Inflection does not change the original meaning of a word, but rather extends or restricts its application, or adapts it to some particular use in the sentence.

Not all variations in form are inflections. Thus, adding er to quick to make quicker is an inflection. The word is still an adjective. Quicken, however, is a derivative rather than an inflected form, for the suffix en is added to make the word a verb and thus to change it from one part of speech to another.

As compared with other languages English has very few inflections. Most of the inflected forms it once had, have worn away and disappeared; and now grammatical relations and uses are expressed by the order of the words in a sentence, by other words, or by substitute phrases.

Inflection means a bending away from the original form.

189. Most nouns have two forms for number and two for relation. A few nouns have two forms for gender.

Eight pronouns have three forms for relation, and a few are inflected for number.

Many adjectives and adverbs have three forms for comparison.

Verbs have seven or eight inflected forms for various uses. The other parts of speech are uninflected.

190. Inflection is a change in the form of a word to denote a difference in application or use.

NUMBER

191. The most common change in the form of a noun is that by which we express Number.

192. Number is the form of a noun or pronoun that shows whether it denotes one or more than one.

193. The singular number is the form of a noun or pronoun that denotes only one.

194. The plural number is the form of a noun or pronoun that denotes more than one.

195. Most nouns have two number-forms, the singular and the plural.

196. RULE I. — Most nouns are made plural by adding s to the singular. Thus:

chair	valley	zero	gulf	fife	monarch	German chairs	valleys	zeros	gulfs	fifes	monarchs	Germans

197. RULE II. — Letters, figures, signs, etc., are made plural by adding 's. Thus:

Do not make your r's and v's alike. Cancel the 9's. Make the 4's and —'s larger.

Exercise 116. — 1. (a) Is the number of syllables always the same in both singular and plural? (b) Which of these words are pronounced with an additional syllable in the plural? (c) Try to discover the reason. (d) What is the additional syllable?

House; place; pane; size; noose; plate; fire; bridge; bride; niche; name; rope; truce; pulse; fence; case; pause; force.

2. Can you tell why in making these plurals we have added es instead of s alone?

Losses; taxes; topazes; dishes; churches.

198. Some nouns end with a sound so much like that of s that we cannot pronounce the plural easily without making another syllable. Hence —

199. RULE III. — Nouns ending in s, x, z, sh, or ch (soft) form the plural by adding es to the singular. Thus:

grass	box	topaz	wish	larch
grasses	boxes	topazes	wishes	larches

Exercise 117. — Write the plural of —

Pass; branch; honey; tyro; clef; safe; fez; bush; patriarch; piano; fife; dwarf; fox; arch; medley; chimney; hoof; i and t.

200. Some nouns require other changes to be made in forming the plural.

Notice those ending in y. Which of them end in y after a consonant? What is the change in the plural?

fly	key	lily	buoy	story	tray	enemy	ditty
flies	keys	lilies	buoys	stories	trays	enemies	ditties

201. RULE IV. — If the singular ends in y after a consonant, y becomes ie in the plural.

Thus: Pony, ponies; sty, sties; cry, cries; body, bodies. Also, soliloquy, soliloquies; colloquy, colloquies.

NOTE. — Words like lady, city, etc., formerly ended in ie in the singular.

202. RULE V. — Thirteen nouns ending in f, and three in fe, form the plural in ves. They are —

Beef, calf, elf, half, leaf, loaf, self, sheaf, shelf, staff, thief, wharf, wolf; knife, life, wife. (Plural, beeves, calves, elves; knives, etc.)

wharfs is a recognized plural of wharf.

All other nouns in f or fe are regular; adding only s.

203. RULE VI. — About forty nouns ending in o after a consonant form the plural in es.

The most common ones are —

Buffalo, cargo, calico, echo, embargo, flamingo, hero, mosquito, motto, mulatto, negro, potato, tomato, tornado, torpedo, volcano, veto. (Plural cargoes, echoes, etc.)

Most nouns in o (several hundred in all) are regular, adding only s.

204. RULE VII. — Nine common words always form their plural without s. They are —

Man, men; ox, oxen; goose, geese; woman, women; foot, feet; mouse, mice; child, children; tooth, teeth; louse, lice.

German, Mussulman, Turcoman, ottoman, talisman, are not compounds of man, and form their plural in s.

Exercise 118. — Write the plural of each word:

Jelly; ruby; fairy; glory; duty; victory; turkey; sheaf; chief; strife; money; attorney; cameo; motto; grotto; half; waif; soliloquy; alley; ally; veto; solo; mouse; memento.

205. Proper Nouns, when made plural, generally follow the same rules as common nouns. Thus we write:

All the Beechers; the Adamses; the Alleghanies; several Mr. Smiths; both the Miss Hudsons; the two Gen. Johnstons; one of the Dr. Davises; the Mrs. Wrights. But

(a) To prevent confusion, we may make the fewest changes possible in the forms of proper nouns, and may write (for example) the eight Henrys, the Marys, the two Miss Carys, instead of the Henries, the Maries, the Caries.

(b) In referring to members of one family, or to partners in business, we may give the plural form to the title "Mr." or "Miss," instead of to the name itself. Thus we may say —

Mr. Hayes, the Messrs. Hayes; Miss Sands, the Misses Sands.

(c) A title is, of course, made plural when used with several names. Thus:

Messrs. Long and Collins; Misses Charlotte, Emily, and Anne Brontë; Drs. Brown and White; Gens. Lee and Jackson.

206. Most Compound words form their plural like simple words by changing the final syllable. Thus:

Frenchmen; greenhouses; flag-staffs; handfuls; court-yards; major-generals; four-in-hands; forget-me-nots; jack-in-the-pulpits; three-percents; piano-fortes.

(a) A few compounds are made plural by changing the first part, which the rest of the word merely describes. Thus:

Brothers-in-law; sisters-in-law; sons-in-law; daughters-in-law; fathers-in-law; mothers-in-law; attorneys-at-law; attorneys-general; postmasters-general; commanders-in-chief; generals-in-chief; aides-de-camp; courts-martial; cousins-german; hangers-on; lookers-on; knights-errant; men-of-war; and a few others.

(b) Occasionally both parts are changed, as in man-servant, men-servants.

Exercise 119. — Spell or write the plural of these words:

Gentleman; grandmother; spoonful; son-in-law; handicraft; maid-servant; court-martial; dining-room; major-general; rope-ladder; eyelash; touch-me-not; go-between; stowaway; sailor-boy; out-going; cupful; by-path; attorney-general; man-servant; ottoman; Englishman; flower-de-luce; will-o'-the-wisp.

207. Foreign Plurals. — Many words taken without change from other languages retain their foreign plurals. Thus:

Larva, larvæ; vertebra, vertebrae; alumnus, alumni; focus, foci; fungus, fungi; radius, radii; stratum, strata; axis, axes; crisis, crises; ellipsis, ellipses; oasis, oases; genus, genera; phenomenon, phenomena, etc.

208. Some nouns have the same form for both singular and plural meanings. We can tell the number of such nouns only by the context. Among them are —

(a) Deer, sheep, swine, alms, gross — always singular in form.

(b) Amends, means, odds, pains, wages — always plural in form.

(c) Brick, cannon, heathen, head, shot, sail; grouse, salmon, and many names of fish and of game; brace, score, hundred, and other words referring to number, or to quantity. These have also regular plurals with a meaning different from that of the singular. Alms is now generally treated as plural in meaning, although singular in origin. As — The alms were received at the alms-gate.

209. (a) Some nouns, from the nature of what is meant, are almost always singular. (See p. 82.) As —

Wisdom, music, temperance, honesty, etc.

(b) And some are always plural. As —

Ashes, annals, antipodes, measles, nuptials, scissors, shears, tidings, victuals, vitals, etc.

210. (a) Some nouns are plural in form but singular in meaning. As —

News, gallows, and words in -ics, — politics, mathematics, ethics, etc.

(b) And some, singular in form, may be plural in meaning, As —

Army, kin, committee, and other collective nouns. Also, cattle.

211. Some nouns used in two senses have two plural forms.

brother . brothers (by parentage) brethren (by association).
cloth . . cloths (kinds of cloth) clothes (garments).
die . . dies (for coinage, etc.) dice (for games).
fish . . fishes (regarded separately) . . fish (collectively).
genius . geniuses (men of genius) . . . genii (supernatural beings).
index . indexes (table of contents) . . indices (algebraic signs).
pea . . peas (in definite number) . . . pease (by the quantity).
penny . pennies (single coins) pence (as a value or amount).
staff . . staffs (as a military term) . . . staves (in most senses).
stamen . stamens (of flowers) stamina (support or strength).

GENDER

212. Among the nouns that name living beings, many names show to which sex a person belongs; as —

Edward, Mary, Margaret; and we sometimes find two nouns with no difference in meaning, except that one of them denotes a male and the other a female; as — prince, princess; son, daughter; John, Jane.

213. Nouns that denote males are said to be masculine, or of the masculine gender; those that denote females are said to be feminine, or of the feminine gender.

Most nouns that denote living beings apply alike to males or females, and are said to be of common gender. For example: child, parent, author, thief, stenographer, clerk, etc.

The names of things without sex are, of course, of neither gender, that is, of the neuter gender. Neuter means neither. For example: mountain, iron, sky.

214. The gender of a noun is of little grammatical importance except as it determines the form of a pronoun used to represent it. He, his, and him represent masculine nouns; she and her, feminine nouns; and it and its, neuter nouns.

215. When sexless things are given the characteristics of persons they are said to be personified, and may be either masculine or feminine. Thus, the Sun, Time, the Ocean, Anger, War, a river, etc., are represented by he; while the Moon, the Earth, Virtue, a ship, Religion, Pity, Peace, are spoken of as feminine.

216. Gender is distinguished in the following ways:

1. By Inflection.—The correlative nouns are similar in form, the feminine adding ess to the masculine. Thus:

abbot, abbess;	governor, governess;	master, mistress;
actor, actress;	heir, heiress;	negro, negress;
baron, baroness;	host, hostess;	priest, priestess;
count, countess;	Jew, Jewess;	prince, princess;
duke, duchess;	lad, lass [contracted];	prophet, prophetess;
emperor, empress;	lion, lioness;	shepherd, shepherdess;
god, goddess;	marquis, marchioness;	tiger, tigress.

Some words from foreign languages retain their inflected forms. Thus:

administrator, admin-istratrix;	hero, heroine;	Francis, Frances;
beau, belle;	sultan, sultana;	Henry, Henrietta;
czar, czarina;	testator, testatrix;	Joseph, Josephine;
executor, executrix;	Augustus, Augusta;	Louis, Louisa;
	Charles, Charlotte;	Paul, Paulina.

217. 2. By Different Words. — Sometimes the feminine is a wholly different word from the masculine. Thus:

bachelor, maid;	lord, lady;	stag, hind;
earl, countess;	monk, or friar, nun;	wizard, witch;
king, queen;	sir, madam;	youth, maiden.

In widower, widow, the masculine is made from the feminine.

218. 3. By Composition. — Sometimes a well-known gender word is made a part of a compound word to show which sex is meant. Thus: he-goat, she-bear, man-servant, ewe-lamb, cock-sparrow.

Exercise 120. — 1. Tell the gender of the following nouns, and when possible give the corresponding word of opposite gender.

Cousin; clerk; Edward; duchess; president; bridegroom; printer; empress; cashier; peacock; child; cook; czar; lass; widow; secretary; sultana; servant; nun; artist; spinster; aunt; goose; abbot; maiden; husband; roe; hen; landlord; laundress.

2. Give as many general names as you can for relatives of both sexes; as — uncle, aunt.

219. Gender is a distinction in words that denotes sex.

CASE *

Exercise 121. — 1. Tell to what part of speech “cross” belongs in each sentence, and tell how you make the distinction.

1. The bridges cross the stream.
2. He gave me a cross look.
3. The emblem of the Christian religion is the cross.

2. (a) In what seven ways is the noun “Albert” used in these sentences?

1. Albert has returned.
2. This was Albert’s book.
3. Go with Albert.
4. My brother Albert is ill.
5. Have you met Albert?
6. My name is Albert.
7. We named him Albert.

(b) How many forms does the noun have in these sentences? (c) Which use requires a special form? (d) How do the forms differ?

220. Besides having number-forms to show singular or plural meaning, nouns have also what are called Case-forms, according to their use in a sentence. But there is only one of the various uses for which a special form is required.

221. Nouns have two case-forms or cases — the general or common form, for all uses but one; and the special or possessive form, used to show ownership or possession.

222. The possessive form of nouns is made by adding to the common form an apostrophe and s ['s], or an apostrophe alone ['], according to the following

RULE. — To plural nouns ending in s add an apostrophe; to all other nouns add an apostrophe and s. Thus:

Day's, days'; man's, men's; lady's, ladies'; Mr. Hay's book; Mr. Hayes's house; ostrich's, ostriches'.

NOTE 1. — In words ending with a sound that resembles that of s, the apostrophe with s forms an additional syllable. Thus:

James's; Miss Finch's [pron. James-ěz, Finch-ěz].

NOTE 2. — The only exception to the rule occurs in such expressions as conscience' sake, goodness' sake, righteousness' sake, Jesus' sake where the apostrophe alone is added because another s would make too many hissing sounds.

NOTE 3. — In forming the possessive of compound nouns or of noun phrases, the possessive sign is always placed at the end. [§ 206.] Thus:

son-in-law's; sons-in-law's;	his brother John's death;
Martin Luther's hymn;	William the Conqueror's reign.

Exercise 122. — Write the four forms of each of the following nouns.

Thus :

	SING.	PLUR.
Common Form.	child,	children.
Possessive Form.	child's,	children's.

Girl; woman; wife; monkey; mouse; Miss Long; lady; chief; dwarf; ox; swine; Mr. Adams; man; hero; thief; brother; deer; colony; baby; piano; fox; son-in-law; German; attorney-general.

223. The meaning of the possessive case may often be expressed by the use of the preposition of and its object. Thus:

My uncle's death, or The death of my uncle.

Exercise 123. — 1. Write these expressions, using the possessive case instead of the prepositional phrase:

The residence of my sister.

The singing of Miss Vokes.

The wife of my brother.

The stories of Howells.

The manners of a gentleman.

The lectures of Curtis.

A photograph of the baby.

The novel of Dickens.

The sting of a mosquito.

The mother of James.

The store of Mr. Brown.

The letters of Agnes.

The decision of the court-martial.

The army of Xerxes.

The top of the chimney.

The home of Adam.

The retreat of the enemy.

The home of Mr. Adams.

2. Write the expressions in the first column, making every noun plural, and then write the equivalent possessive phrase.

224. A possessive does not always show ownership. It may denote —

1. Origin; as in — I own Scott's novels; She uses Butterick's patterns. Or —

2. Kind; as in — He sells women's shoes and men's hats, and She has a man's voice.

C. THE USES OF NOUNS

Exercise 124. — Analyze these sentences, and tell the way in which the noun "diamond" is used in each:

1. Diamonds are found in Africa and India. 2. Brazil exports diamonds. 3. The most precious jewel is the diamond. 4. Shall we call the jewel a diamond? 5. The countess wore a necklace of diamonds. 6. This priceless gem, the Kohinoor diamond, originally weighed eight hundred carats. 7. The diamond's luster is unsurpassed.

225. There are twelve different uses which nouns may have in the expression of thought. Seven of these uses we already know about.

A Noun may be used in a sentence as —

1. The Subject of a verb:

The wind sways the tops of the trees.

Can woodpeckers make such large holes?

2. The Subjective Complement of a copulative verb (or of a passive verb-phrase) [§ 426]:

These trees are ancient landmarks.

The Emperor of Russia is styled the Czar.

3. The Object of a transitive verb (or verbal word) [§ 369]:

We bend the branches to reach the fruit.

4. The Object of a Preposition:

The shadow of the tree reaches beyond the wall.

5. The Objective Complement of a transitive verb:

They made Theodore Roosevelt President.

6. An Appositive to explain another noun or pronoun:

Homer, the famous Greek poet, was blind.

She mourned him, her only son.

7. A Possessive:

The Indian's wigwam gave place to the settler's cabin.

This is the only use that requires a special form of the noun.

NOTE. — Instead of speaking of the uses of nouns or other words in sentences, we sometimes speak of their construction or syntax. These expressions are identical in meaning, and have to do with the relations of words to one another, or the way they are put together or arranged in sentences.

Rules for the Use of Possessives

226. Sometimes the names of several persons are treated like a single noun in forming the possessive.

Thus, if Parker and Ward is the name of a business firm, we treat it like a compound noun, putting the possessive sign at the end when we speak of Parker and Ward's business or mills. To say Parker's and Ward's business or mills would show that the men were in business separately, or owned different mills.

Exercise 125. — In the following expressions do we mean joint owners of the same thing, or separate owners of different things?

1. Hall and Whipple's hotel.
2. Elizabeth and Mary's reign.
3. William and Mary's reign.
4. Rice and Besant's novels.
5. Bulwer's and Thackeray's novels.
6. Do you prefer Tennyson's or Whittier's poetry?
7. Who were Cain and Abel's parents?

227. RULE I. — (a) To show separate possession of different things by several persons, use the possessive sign after the name of each. But —

(b) To show joint possession, use the sign after the last name only.

Exercise 126. — 1. Change these expressions so as to show joint possession:

1. Gilbert's and Sullivan's operas. 2. Woodward's and Brown's pianos. 3. Warner's and Twain's "Gilded Age." 4. Grant's and Sherman's friendship. 5. Spain's and Portugal's alliance. 6. Beaumont's and Fletcher's dramas. 7. Hay's and Nicolay's "Life of Lincoln."

2. Change these so as to show separate possession:

1. Webster and Worcester's Unabridged Dictionary. 2. Steinway and Chickering's pianos. 3. Green and Macaulay's "History of England." 4. Webster and Worcester's dictionaries. 5. Do you prefer Tennyson or Browning's poetry? 6. Bancroft, Prescott, and Motley's History. 7. Lowell and Holmes's poems.

3. Give two different phrases each implying that Noyes and Weeks own the same mine. How would you show that they own different mines?

228. To express the idea of possession it is often better to use a prepositional phrase than to use the possessive sign. In this way we may avoid awkward forms or the unpleasant repetition of hissing sounds. Thus:

"In the reign of Napoleon the Third" is better than

"In Napoleon the Third's reign"; and

"The houses of my father's partner" sounds better than

"My father's partner's houses." So, instead of "Socrates's sayings" we say —

"The sayings of Socrates." Hence —

229. RULE II. — Avoid harsh or awkward expressions by using a prepositional phrase instead of a possessive.

Exercise 127. — Improve the following sentences according to Rule II:

1. What is the first governor of Rhode Island's name? 2. Did you hear the senator from New York's speech? 3. The conductor of the freight train's excuse was insufficient. 4. Remember my wife's sister's invitation. 5. What is your college chum's father's business? 6. Harper's Magazine's circulation is immense. 7. Where are the architect of the post-office's designs? 8. This is Dr. Smith's the eminent surgeon's opinion.

Exercise 128. — Point out the errors in the use of the possessive, and give the rule violated.

1. Lady's maids. Childrens' playthings. Everybodies' business. 2. Where is Smith's and Jones's store? 3. This is the administrator of the estate's office. 4. The January "St. Nicholas's" illustrations are admirable. 5. Scott and Abbott's estimate of Napoleon differ greatly. 6. Do you prefer Smith or Kitto's Bible Dictionary? 7. What do you think of the captain of the Dauntless's skill? 8. Which is larger, the Independence or the Shamrock's jib?

230. A possessive noun does the work of a phrase or of an adjective, and, like an adjective, may be used without the noun it modifies, as in "This poem is Longfellow's." [See § 288.]

8. NOUNS AS INDIRECT OBJECT

231. A noun may be used as the Indirect Object of a verb. Thus:

We have sent the superintendent an invitation.

Exercise 129. — 1. Mention the object of each verb, and tell to whom or for whom something was done.

1. They gave a whip to the driver. 2. He paid a hundred dollars to physicians. 3. I bought a horse for my brother. 4. Who painted the picture for your friend? 5. I asked questions of the teacher. 6. We made a call on the Czar. 7. They gave the driver a whip. 8. She built the king a castle. 9. We offered the lady a glass of water. 10. Did you lend Henry this book? 11. I have written my mother a long letter.

2. Read the last four sentences with the object next to the verb.

3. Change the first six so as to have the object at the end.

232. Verbs like those in the preceding exercise often have two objects —

(1) One showing what is given, bought, etc., called the Direct Object, because it shows what the action directly affects; and —

(2) The other showing to whom or for whom something is given, bought, etc. This is called the Indirect Object, because it is less closely connected with the verb.

233. When the direct object comes first, the indirect object is expressed in a prepositional phrase, introduced generally by to or for; sometimes by of or on, as in sentences 1-6, Exercise 129.

234. The Indirect Object of a verb is the noun or pronoun that shows to or for what person or thing the action is performed.

Exercise 130. — 1. Read the following sentences, omitting the indirect object.

2. Mention the direct and the indirect objects.

1. He sent my sister some fine mosaics from Florence. 2. The king granted the offender a full pardon. 3. He showed his audience some rare views. 4. This land yields its owner large crops. 5. This merchant allows his customers large discounts. 6. Throw the man a rope! 7. The government granted the Pacific railroad large tracts of land. 8. He forgave the man that debt. 9. Can you teach an old dog new tricks? 10. The judge showed the culprit no mercy. 11. Do you tell me the truth? 12. Can you bring us proofs? 13. We paid the men four dollars.

3. Read the sentences, substituting a prepositional phrase for the indirect object.

4. Analyze the preceding sentences, treating the indirect object as a modifier of the verb. Thus :

(The) king granted [the offender] (a) (full) pardon.

235. When a transitive verb with an indirect object is changed into a passive verb-phrase, either the direct or the indirect object may be made the subject. Thus:

They gave [me] a cordial invitation, may be changed to

A cordial invitation was given [me], — i.e., [to me], or

I was given (a) (cordial) invitation.

In the latter case the direct object is retained as the object of the passive verb. It is often called the retained object. [See Passive Verb Phrases.]

Exercise 131. — Use the following verbs in sentences containing direct and indirect objects:

pay; find; sell; give; toss; make; return; deliver; write; lend.

9. NOUNS USED ADVERBIALY

Exercise 132. — 1. What kind of phrases may be used like adverbs?

2. What words or phrases modify the following verbs as adverbs would? Tell whether they show how much, how often, when, and so on.

1. Have you been standing long?
2. We have been waiting for hours.
3. You might have slept a few minutes.
4. His burden weighs heavily.
5. The load weighs several tons.
6. He came very recently.
7. They went away in the night.
8. We met them last year.
9. She arrived last Sunday.
10. We buy a newspaper every day.
11. Did you fall far? No; I fell a few feet, then slid several rods, and rolled the rest of the way.
12. The steamer sailed due east three hundred miles the first day.

236. We see from the preceding sentences that not only adverbial and prepositional phrases, but also nouns and noun-phrases, may be used like adverbs. They may modify —

Verbs:	{	We shall remain a week .
		He has traveled a thousand miles .
		He was beaten several times .
Adjectives:	{	This is a pound heavier.
		It is worth ninety cents .
		My ladder is ten feet long.
Adverbs:	{	You might write a great deal better.
		We shall walk a mile farther.
		A minute later all was lost.
		Where shall we be a hundred years hence?

237. Nouns used adverbially may denote time, place, or manner — showing when, where, or how; but they generally denote measure, showing how much, how far, etc.

Exercise 133. — 1. Select the nouns used adverbially; tell what they modify, and whether they denote measure, time, place, or manner.

1. The sun sets fifty minutes later.
2. The moon rises an hour earlier.
3. They perished ages ago.
4. What is that coming this way?
5. A few years ago men were a month traveling a thousand miles.
6. Cowards die many times before their deaths.
7. A piece two inches wide and four feet long weighs three pounds and is worth one dollar.

8. He has crossed the ocean twenty times a year. 9. I walked the floor all night long. 10. Emperor William was forty-two years old last Tuesday.

2. Analyze the preceding sentences orally or in writing.

10. NOUNS USED INDEPENDENTLY

238. A Noun may be used Independently in a sentence —

1. In calling to or addressing some person or thing; as —

Bring us some lilies, Mary.

Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict?

We say of such nouns that they are used “independently in address.” They are, therefore, sometimes called vocatives.

2. In calling attention to something not addressed; as —

The wind, the wind! hear how it roars!

Alas! poor creature! how she must have suffered!

We say of such nouns that they are used “independently in exclamation.”

(a) A noun used in either of these ways stands by itself as a separate part of the sentence, and should be set off from the rest of it by commas or an exclamation point.

Exercise 134. — Select the nouns that are used independently, and tell whether they are used in address or in exclamation.

1. Drink, pretty creature, drink. 2. Give me of your balm, O fir tree! 3. What a fall was there, my countrymen. 4. Soldiers, here you must either conquer or die. 5. Our country! it is not the East with its broad-armed ports. 6. Roll on, thou deep and dark blue ocean, roll! 7. Mr. President, my object is peace. 8. The Pilgrim fathers! where are they? 9. The flag of the free! O long may it wave! 10. Permit me, sir, to add another circumstance. 11. “Youth!” he said, “I forgive thee.”

11. NOUNS USED WITH PARTICIPLES

239. A Noun may be used with a participle that modifies it [§ 491] to make an adverbial phrase showing the time or cause of what is predicated. Thus:

Our commander being slain, we retreated. (Showing what caused the retreat.)

My suspicions having been aroused, I began to watch him. (Showing why or when I watched him.)

240. A noun used in this way is sometimes said to be used “absolutely.” The entire phrase is used as a substitute for an adverbial clause [§ 498], and really modifies the verb of the accompanying assertion. The examples given above mean —

We retreated because our commander was slain.

I began to watch him since my suspicions were aroused.

Exercise 135. — Tell how each verb is modified, and explain the use of the italicized nouns.

1. His supplies having been exhausted, the general capitulated. 2. We returned home, our work being finished. 3. The jury having been sworn, the trial proceeded. 4. The river being impassable, no attempt was made to cross it. 5. His trials (being) ended, he rests in peace.

12. NOUNS AS SUBJECT OF THE INFINITIVE

241. A noun may be used as the subject of an infinitive. Thus:

We know the earth to be round.

I believe him to be a dishonest man.

The noun here stands in the relation of object to the leading verb as well as that of subject of the infinitive. A personal pronoun thus used requires the objective case-form. Thus:

Make him hear.

[See Infinitives § 474].

PARSING

242. We analyze a sentence by separating it into its parts, — words, phrases, or clauses — and showing how each one is connected with some other; if we then analyze each phrase and clause, we show how every word is used.

But we need to be perfectly familiar with the forms and classes of words as well as with their use. To do this we must examine each word by itself, and tell what is grammatically important about it. This is called parsing the word.

243. To parse a word is to tell what is of grammatical importance about it.

244. We should analyze a sentence before we parse the words in it, for the forms and classification of words depend upon their use, and this we discover through our analysis.

245. We should parse the words of a sentence in the following order:

- I. The Essentials (subject, verb, complement).
- II. The Modifiers.
- III. The Secondary Modifiers, etc.
- IV. The Connective Words.

246. In parsing a word we should tell —

1. The part of speech to which it belongs.
2. In what subdivision of that part of speech it is found: that is, what kind of noun, verb, adjective, etc., it is.
3. Its grammatical form — number, case, tense, etc.
4. Its use or construction, or what it has to do with some other word.

247. How to Parse a Noun. The following form may be used in parsing nouns:

Alexander II. gave [the Russian serfs] (their) freedom [not many years ago].

Alexander II. is a noun, because it is a name; proper, because it is a special name meant for one person only; singular, because it denotes but one; used as the subject of the verb gave, for it represents the person about whom the assertion is made.

freedom is a noun; abstract, for it names [a quality or] a condition; singular; used as the object of the verb gave, for it shows what was given.

serfs is a common noun, because it is a name for any or all of a certain kind; plural, because it denotes more than one; used as the indirect object of gave, for it shows to whom freedom was given.

years is a common noun; plural; used adverbially to modify ago; it shows how long ago the event happened.

248. The following brief form is generally better:

Alexander II. is a singular proper noun; subject of the verb gave.

freedom is a singular common noun; object of the verb gave.

serfs is a plural common noun; indirect object of the verb gave.

years is a plural common noun; used adverbially to modify ago.

Exercise 136. — Analyze the following sentences, and parse the nouns:

1. The maize-field grew and ripened, and it stood in all the splendor of its garments green and yellow.
2. We may cover a multitude of sins with the white robe of charity.
3. I was born an American; I live an American; I shall die an American.
4. How cunningly Nature hides every wrinkle of her inconceivable antiquity under roses and violets and morning dew.
5. Frequent the company of your betters.
6. Congenial autumn comes, the Sabbath of the year.
7. It is the tint of autumn, a mighty flower-garland, blossoming under the spell of the enchanter Frost.
8. One morn a peri at the gate of Eden stood disconsolate.
9. The oratorio of Elijah was first performed in 1836 at Dusseldorf. 10. Habit is a cable; every day we weave a thread. 11. The longest syllable in English is the word strength. 12. The examiner asked the candidate few questions. 13. The army being disbanded, Washington proceeded to Annapolis. 14. Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion, the city of the great King.

15. Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle and low, an excellent thing in woman.
16. And so make life, death, and that vast forever
One grand sweet song.
17. Farewell, thou ever changing moon,
Pale empress of the night.
18. Peace! Independence! Truth! Go forth
Earth's compass round;
And your high priesthood shall make earth
All hallowed ground.
19. Five times outlawed had he been
By England's king and Scotland's queen.
20. In a valley centuries ago,
Grew a little fern-leaf, green and tender.
21. Now came still evening on, and twilight gray
Had in her sober livery all things clad.
22. Hail Egypt! land of ancient pomp and pride,
Where Beauty walks by hoary Ruin's side;
Where plenty reigns, and still the seasons smile,
And rolls — rich gift of God! — exhaustless Nile.
23. O Painter of the fruits and flowers!
We thank thee for thy wise design
Whereby these human hands of ours
In Nature's garden work with Thine.
24. I hold it truth, with him who sings
To one clear harp in divers tones,
That men may rise on stepping stones
Of their dead selves to higher things.

LESSONS IN ENGLISH

NOUNS: SUMMARY

249. About Nouns we have learned to distinguish the following:

1. Kinds: $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{Common} \\ \text{Proper} \\ \text{Collective} \\ \text{Abstract} \end{array} \right\} \text{Concrete.}$

3. Uses or Constructions.

1. Subject of the verb —.
2. Subjective complement of the verb —.
3. Object of the verb —.
4. Object of the preposition —.
5. An Appositive explaining the noun (or pronoun) —.
6. Possessive form modifying the noun —.
7. Indirect object of the verb —.
8. Used adverbially to modify the $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{verb —.} \\ \text{adjective —.} \\ \text{adverb —.} \end{array} \right.$
9. Used independently in address (or exclamation).
10. Used with the participle — to make an adverbial modifier of the verb —.
11. Objective complement of the verb —, referring to the object —.
12. Subject of the infinitive —.

CONCORD HYMN

Sung at the Completion of the Battle Monument, April 19, 1836.

By the rude bridge that arched the flood,
Their flag to April's breeze unfurled,
Here once the embattled farmers stood,
And fired the shot heard round the world.

The foe long since in silence slept;
Alike the conqueror silent sleeps;
And Time the ruined bridge has swept
Down the dark stream which seaward creeps.

On this green bank, by this soft stream,
We set to-day a votive stone;
That memory may their deed redeem,
When, like our sires, our sons are gone.

Spirit, that made those heroes dare —
To die, and leave their children free,
Bid Time and Nature gently spare
The shaft we raise to them and Thee.

— R. W. Emerson.

Exercise 137. — 1. Point out the nouns in the selection and classify them. 2. Account for the use of capitals. 3. What examples of personification do you find? 4. Six of the twelve uses of the noun are here illustrated. Which are they? 5. Parse the nouns.

CHAPTER VII

PRONOUNS

251. Although the pronouns are few in number, they are divided into several classes, and the most of them have much to do besides merely taking the place of nouns.

A. KINDS

1. PERSONAL PRONOUNS

Exercise 138. — 1. Which of the following pronouns refer to the person speaking?

2. Which refer to the person spoken to?

3. Which to the person or thing spoken of?

1. Did you bring me a letter?

8. She knows their plans.

2. Your father sent it to my care.

9. Tell her what ours are.

3. I asked him for his address.

10. Hers depend on theirs.

4. He wanted yours and mine.

11. Know ye its meaning?

5. Does your sister know them?

12. He telleth thee that thou mayst

6. We must inform our friends.

keep for thy share only

7. They will forget us.

what is thine own.

4. If only one person is speaking, to whom must the pronoun we, our, ours, and us refer?

5. Do any of the preceding pronouns show what kind of person is meant — as a noun would?

252. Pronouns that of themselves show whether we mean the person speaking, the person spoken to, or some person or thing spoken of, are called Personal pronouns.

253. (1) Pronouns of the first person always represent the speaker, either alone or with others.

They are I and its variations — my, mine, me; we, our, ours, us.

(2) Pronouns of the second person always stand for the person or persons spoken to.

They are thou and its variations — thy, thine, thee; ye, you, your, yours.

(3) Pronouns of the third person generally refer to what has been spoken of.

They are he, she, it, and their variations, — his, him; her, hers; its; they, their, theirs, them. Any pronoun not referring to the speaker or to the person addressed is of the third person in meaning.

254. A Personal pronoun is one that denotes the speaker, the person spoken to, or the person or thing spoken of.

255. Myself, thyself, yourself, himself, herself, itself, and their plurals, are called Compound personal pronouns. They have two uses. In the sentence — He caught all the fish himself — himself emphasizes or intensifies the meaning of the pronoun he. This is said to be the emphatic use.

In the sentence — He has injured himself — himself is the direct object of the transitive verb, injured, and refers back as it were to the subject, he. This is said to be the reflexive use.

2. INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS

Exercise 139. — 1. Of what kind are the following sentences? 2. For what does who stand? which? what? 3. To what part of speech do these words belong? 4. For what purpose are they used? 5. What kind of sentence is made by putting the answers in place of the pronouns?

1. Who discovered the Mississippi? — De Soto. By whom was the St. Lawrence discovered? — Cartier. Whose discovery was made first? — Cartier's.

2. Which is the longer of the two rivers? — The Mississippi.

3. What is the meaning of "Mississippi"? — "Father of Waters."

256. An Interrogative pronoun is one used to ask a question.

The three interrogative pronouns are who, which, and what. The last two are sometimes used as adjectives. [§ 321].

257. The word for which an interrogative pronoun stands is unknown until it appears in the answer to the question.

3. — I. CONJUNCTIVE PRONOUNS IN ADJECTIVE CLAUSES

Review p. 62.

Exercise 140. — 1. What is a clause? 2. A dependent clause? 3. An adjective clause? 4. In the sentence, "Trustworthy boys are boys that may be trusted," what two expressions are alike in meaning? 5. What is the use of each? 6. What is the antecedent of that?

258. We have learned that a noun may be modified not only by an adjective word, but also by an adjective clause or group of words that contains a subject and a predicate.

Thus in the sentence —

Regions that have no vegetation are called deserts, the expression that have no vegetation is used like an adjective to show which regions are meant — as if we had said "regions without vegetation" or "barren regions."

259. In the sentence "Read books which make you better," it is evident that the word which has a double use. As a pronoun representing the noun book it is the subject of the verb make, and at the same time it connects the dependent clause in which it stands to the word book in the principal clause. Pronouns that connect clauses as well as take the place of nouns are called conjunctive pronouns.

260. A Conjunctive pronoun is one that introduces a dependent clause and generally connects it to the rest of the sentence.

261. We shall find in our study of noun clauses that the antecedent of a conjunctive pronoun is often omitted or understood. When it is expressed the pronoun is called a relative pronoun.

262. A relative pronoun is a conjunctive pronoun whose antecedent is expressed.

Exercise 141. — 1. Select the adjective clauses, and tell what each one modifies or describes.

2. Point out the relative pronoun and its antecedent in each clause.

1. I have read the book which you lent me. 2. The story that it tells is interesting. 3. The author, who is a woman, lives in Texas. 4. Help those that are weak. 5. Invite the gentleman of whom you spoke. 6. He gave all that he had. 7. Those that are rich should help those that are poor. 8. A man who cannot govern himself is a slave. 9. Our journey, which was very tiresome, ended at last. 10. The friends whom we visited have come. 11. Remember those whose hearts are sad. 12. Read such books as will be helpful.

263. The four relative pronouns are who, which, that, and as.

Who (whose, whom) represents persons only; which represents things; and that and as represent either persons or things.

264. The antecedent of a relative pronoun is generally a noun or another pronoun. It may, however, be a clause. As—I said nothing, which made him angry. Here the antecedent of which is "I said nothing."

(a) Since which and that have no possessive form, whose is frequently used to represent something besides persons. It is generally better, however, to use of which instead.

(b) When as is a relative pronoun, it follows as many, such, or same; as in—"I give thee such as I have"; "As many as wish may go"; "Mine is the same as yours (is)."

(c) The relative when used as the object of a verb is often omitted in the adjective clause. It may easily be supplied. As—This is the man I saw yesterday. The watch he repaired loses time.

Exercise 142. — 1. Which of the relative pronouns would you use to represent each of the following words?

Book; city; cousin; horse; flowers; soldiers; rivers; kings; tea; winter; Bismarck; tribes; armies; conquerors.

2. Write sentences containing the preceding words modified by adjective clauses.

3. — II. CONJUNCTIVE PRONOUNS IN NOUN CLAUSES

Exercise 143. —

{ Poor people may need help.	{ I saw the things which he gave .
{ The poor may need help.	{ I saw what he gave .
{ Cloth is the stuff that he sells .	{ That which you tell is true.
{ Cloth is what he sells .	{ What you tell is true.

1. Read the expressions that are alike in meaning, but different in form. 2. Compare the subjects in the first pair of sentences, and show how the second subject is made from the first. 3. Find the adjective clauses, and tell what each modifies. 4. Do the antecedents stuff, things, that, add much to the meaning? Give your reason. 5. Read the sentences in which there are no antecedents. 6. Why is not an antecedent expressed? 7. What pronoun is used in the clause when the antecedent is omitted?

265. We know that an adjective may be used without its noun when the meaning is perfectly clear; as in, The ignorant should be taught.

From the preceding exercise we learn that an adjective clause may also be used without the modified word, when the meaning of that word would be indefinite. Used alone in this way it becomes a Noun clause. Thus in —

I saw { that or
 { the thing } which he brought, the word that or thing has of itself so little meaning that we may as well omit it; for it will convey the whole idea to say —

I saw what he brought.

So, too, the sentence "Employ whoever applies," is equivalent to "Employ anyone who applies."

266. In noun clauses we generally use what, whoever, whichever, etc., for the connecting or conjunctive pronouns. But we do not call them "relative," for they only imply another pronoun or a noun which is really the omitted antecedent. They are generally called indefinite conjunctive pronouns.

267. An indefinite conjunctive pronoun is one whose antecedent is not expressed.

268. Noun clauses may be subjects, objects, or subjective complements, etc., like the antecedents which they replace.

Exercise 144. — 1. In these sentences explain the use of the italicized words and clauses:

1. I saw his gifts. I saw what he gave. 2. Milk was her only sustenance. Milk was what sustained her. 3. I hear your remarks. I hear what you say. 4. You tell the truth. You tell what is true. 5. Your work is excellent. What you do is excellent. 6. Idlers will fail. Whoever is idle will fail. 7. He will sell all his possessions. He will sell whatever he owns. 8. Take your choice. Take whichever you choose. 9. He will fulfill his promise. He will do whatever he promises. 10. Think about your lessons. Think about what you study. 11. Whoever confesses will be forgiven. 12. Whatsoever you ask shall be done. 13. Whosoever will may come. 14. Who steals my purse steals trash.

2. Read each sentence with the noun clause changed to a noun or a pronoun modified by an adjective clause.

269. A noun clause is a clause having the use of a noun.

270. (a) The indefinite conjunctive pronouns what, whatever, whatsoever, who, whoever, whosoever, whichever, and whichever are used in noun clauses.

(b) The interrogative pronouns are also used in noun clauses as connectives when a question is repeated indirectly as part of the reply to it. Thus: "Who wrote the book?" — I do not know "who wrote the book." "Who did it," is a secret. Ask again "which he took." I will not tell "what it is."

Exercise 145. — 1. Classify the clauses in these sentences, and tell how each is used:

1. He remembers what he learns.
2. Have you ascertained who wrote the letter?
3. Man can do what man has done.
4. The fur which warms a monarch warmed a bear.
5. Reputation is what we seem, but character is what we are.
6. Beauty is the mark that God sets on virtue.
7. We shall never know who wrote the book.
8. Whoever trusts him makes a mistake.
9. Whatever he does shall prosper.
10. The man who feels truly noble will become so.
11. Who can tell what the proverb means?
12. We find in life exactly what we put into it.
13. Here lies one whose name was writ in water.

2. Point out the conjunctive pronouns, and tell which are relative and which indefinite. Which two are interrogative?

4. ADJECTIVE PRONOUNS

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1. All men are mortal. | 1. All have faded. |
| 2. Both stories are false. | 2. Both were wrecked. |
| 3. Each hour is precious. | 3. Each shall be rewarded. |
| 4. Many books are worthless. | 4. Many were orphans. |
| 5. Much time is wasted. | 5. Much remains to be used. |
| 6. One man's meat is another man's poison. | 6. One was taken, and another was left. |
| 7. That clock is too slow. | 7. That was more expensive. |

Exercise 146. — 1. Compare the italicized words in the two columns; tell which are adjectives, and give your reason. 2. Do they describe, or only limit? 3. What does each one limit? 4. What noun may each of the italicized words in the second column have been used to represent?

271. In the last exercise we see words that are sometimes used as adjectives to limit the application of a noun, and sometimes as pronouns to replace that noun. Thus, in the sentence —

One can do only one thing at a time, the second one is a limiting adjective modifying “thing”; but the first one having no noun expressed, is an adjective used as a pronoun; that is, it is an adjective pronoun.

Exercise 147. — Select the adjective pronouns, and tell for what each one is used.

1. Few shall part where many meet. 2. All that breathe will share thy destiny. 3. None are so deaf as those who will not hear. 4. This was the bravest warrior that ever buckled sword. 5. She had no fortune, and I had none; but that of my father was ample. 6. Some are happy, whereas others are miserable. 7. One ought to rely on one's self. 8. Such as I have, give I unto thee. 9. Both went to the war, but neither returned. 10. Both of these are good, and I will take either. 11. An hour or so had passed.

272. The principal words used as adjective pronouns are·

All, another, any, both, each, either, few, former, latter, many, more, most, much, neither, none, one, other, own, same, several, some, such, this, that, these, those.

273. Each, either, and neither are called distributives, because they refer to a number of objects taken separately.

This, that, these, and those are called demonstratives when they point out objects definitely. He, she, they, etc., have a similar use in such sentences as — “He that would thrive must rise at five.”

Which and what are interrogatives. As in — Which road did he take? What book have you? They may also be conjunctive. As in — Do you know which road he took or what friends he left?

Each other, one another, are reciprocal pronouns.

274. An adjective pronoun is a limiting adjective used without its noun.

Exercise 148. — Tell the class to which each pronoun belongs, and give your reason. Thus:

"I" is a personal pronoun, for it always represents the speaker. "What" is a conjunctive pronoun, for it connects a clause to the rest of the sentence.

1. It is I. 2. We are frail. 3. You and he are strong. 4. Few are stronger. 5. Who knocks? 6. To whom shall they go? 7. Is this the house which he built? 8. Which are they? 9. Did you call us? 10. That on the hill is his. 11. Which is yours? 12. Thou art she whom he calls. 13. Bring what he wants. 14. What is his name? 15. I cannot tell what his name is. 16. I that speak unto you am he. 17. Many are called, but few are chosen. 18. I have none to go with me. 19. We respect those that respect themselves. 20. We often deceive ourselves while trying to deceive others. 21. God helps those that help themselves.

B. INFLECTION: CHANGES OF FORM

1. NUMBER

275. Fourteen pronouns have, like nouns, two number-forms. They are:

- | | |
|--|---|
| (1) The five personal pronouns: | $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{Sing. } I; \quad \text{thou; } \underbrace{\text{he, she, it.}} \\ \text{Plural } \textit{we; ye, you; they.} \end{array} \right.$ |
| (2) The five compound personal pronouns: | $\begin{array}{l} \text{Sing. } \textit{myself; } \underbrace{\textit{thyself, yourself;}} \quad \underbrace{\textit{himself, herself, itself.}} \\ \text{Plural } \textit{ourselves; yourselves; themselves.} \end{array}$ |
| (3) Four adjective pronouns: | $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{Sing. } \textit{this; that; one; other.} \\ \text{Plural } \textit{these; those; ones; others.} \end{array} \right.$ |

276. All other pronouns have but one form, which is used either with a singular or with a plural meaning.

Another, each, either, neither, are always singular in meaning; and both, few, many, several, are always plural in meaning.

Exercise 149. — 1. Tell whether these pronouns have a singular or a plural meaning:

This; we; you; few; she; them; who; myself; both; us; they; each; these; such; which; he; that; many; ourselves; either; whoever; themselves; several; all; those; who; it; any; some; another; neither.

2. Give the other number form of such of these words as have two forms.

2. CASE

Exercise 150. — 1. I left my trunk behind me.

2. Thou art the Creator, and thy works praise thee.

3. He sent his army on before him.

4. They obey their parents, and honor them.

1. Whom do the pronouns in the first sentence represent? 2. Give the use of each one. 3. How does the form change with the use? 4. In No. 2 mention the pronoun used as subject; as possessive; as object. 5. Do they represent the same person? 6. Why do they differ in form? 7. In Nos. 3 and 4 how are the forms of the pronouns changed? 8. How do you account for these changes?

277. We see from the preceding exercise that besides a possessive form some pronouns have still another special form, which is required whenever they are used as objects.

Thus, besides who, we have the possessive form whose, and the object, or objective form whom, which is used when the pronoun is the object of a verb or of a preposition; as in —

Whom did you mention? For whom is it?

278. Eight pronouns —

I, thou, he, she, it, who, whoever, whosoever — have three case-forms or cases in one number or both:

(1) The possessive, to show ownership;

(2) The objective, required when the pronoun is used as an object; and —

(3) The subjective or nominative form for all other uses.

“Nominative” means merely naming.

279. Cases are the different forms of nouns and pronouns required by their relation to other words in a sentence.

280. The Nominative case is the form of a pronoun required for use as a subject or a subjective complement.

The Possessive case is the form of a noun or pronoun required to show possession.

The Objective case is the form of a pronoun required for use as the object of a verb or a preposition.

281. To give all the singular and plural case-forms of a pronoun is to decline it. Thus:

		NOMINATIVE	POSSESSIVE	OBJECTIVE
First Person . .	{ Singular.	I	my [mine]	me
	{ Plural.	we	our [ours]	us
Second Person .	{ Singular.	(thou)	(thy) [thine]	(thee)
	{ Plural.	(ye) you	your [yours]	you
Third Person . .	{ Sing. Masc.	he	his	him
	{ Sing. Fem.	she	her [hers]	her
	{ Sing. Neut.	it	its	it
	{ Plural.	they	their [theirs]	them
		NOMINATIVE	POSSESSIVE	OBJECTIVE
Singular or Plural in meaning.	{	who	whose	whom
	{	whoever	whosoever	whomever
	{	whosoever	whosoesoever	whomsoever

(a) Thou, thee, etc., are now used chiefly in solemn address, or in poetry. The plural you commonly takes the place of thou, and may denote one person only.

Exercise 151. — 1. Name the case of these pronouns. Which are plural forms?

Her; him; thine; them; who; ours; its; I; their; ye; whose; thee; whom; us; hers; thy; our; you; me; my; it.

2. Learn the ten nominative forms; the nine objective forms. Which two forms are either nominative or objective? Which one is either possessive or objective?

282. Three pronouns — one, other, another — like nouns, have a special form only for the possessive use. Thus:

Singular: one, one's; other, other's; another, another's.

Plural: ones, ones'; others, others';

283. Most pronouns, however, are not used as possessives, and have but a single form for all their constructions.

Either's and neither's are sometimes used; but the phrases of either, of neither, would be better.

3. GENDER

284. He, she, and it denote sex. He represents a male, and is of the masculine gender; she represents a female, and is of the feminine gender; it generally represents sexless things, and hence is said to be of the neuter gender.

(a) He is often used to represent an antecedent that applies to both males and females. As in —

Has any person lost his gloves?

(b) In sentences like "The child cries for its mother," "Shoot the crow if you see it," we use it, because the sex is either unknown or unimportant.

285. Personification. We sometimes speak of things as if they were persons, and use masculine or feminine pronouns in referring to them. Such objects are said to be personified. Thus: The sun his ceaseless course doth run. Nature in her robes of green.

C. USES, OR CONSTRUCTION

286. Pronouns have all the constructions, or uses in sentences, that nouns have. Three or four of these uses, however, are rare; and relative and interrogative pronouns are mostly used in one of the first four ways. [See p. 104.]

287. An Interrogative pronoun generally precedes the verb, and there is sometimes a doubt whether it is used as subject or as subjective complement. We can always decide, however, by noticing the construction of the word that takes its place in the expected reply. For example:—

Who is it? It is your mother.
Which is mine? The small one is yours.
What was he? He was a clergyman.

Here who and what must be subjective complements, for so are mother and clergyman, the words they represent. For a similar reason, which is a subject.

Exercise 152. — Tell the use of each pronoun in these sentences:

1. He liveth long who liveth well. 2. Who is it? — It is I. 3. We have found them. What is it that you have found? 4. In what did you travel? We sent to him by her for this. 5. Whose carelessness caused this? Our defeat was their victory. One's manners show one's breeding. 6. He himself hath said it. They each and all declined to go. 7. He gave one of them permission, and she told us the secret. 8. Each stepping where his comrade stood the instant that he fell. [§ 237.] What is it worth? 9. "O Thou who hearest prayer!" "O happy we! thus blessed." 10. This being the case, we shall not go. 11. The will makes the house yours. You may as well call it such. [§ 122.]

288. Most personal pronouns have two possessive forms — one used like an adjective to modify a following noun, as in — "my hand," "your heart," — and the other used to take the place of a noun, as in — "mine is here," "this is yours." These second forms are sometimes called possessive pronouns.

(a) His is used in either way; as "his land," "his was a useful life."

(b) Mine and thine are sometimes used like my and thy before a word beginning with a vowel sound; as "mine own," "thine honor."

289. The second of the possessive forms may be used in any construction, and with singular or plural meaning. Thus:

That tongue of hers will make trouble.

Thine is the glory. Bring theirs, but leave ours.

"Wealth is not his that has it, but his that enjoys it."

Do not use the apostrophe in writing ours, yours, theirs.

290. It is frequently used as the temporary or anticipative subject of a verb, the real subject of which is a word or an expression that comes after it [§ 466]. As in —

It is always best (to try). It is true (that health makes wealth).

291. It, they, and one are sometimes used indefinitely without an antecedent. As in —

It rains. It will freeze tonight. Who is it? It is I. It is the king. It is the queen.

They say that honesty is the best policy.

One should take care of one's health.

ANALYSIS OF COMPLEX SENTENCES

292. Sentences containing conjunctive pronouns are always complex.

293. A Complex Compound sentence is a compound sentence that contains one or more dependent clauses.

294. In analyzing complex sentences the directions given on pages 72, 73, may generally be followed.

In marking the analysis adjective clauses (and adverb clauses) may be inclosed like other modifiers, and the use of noun clauses may be shown by underlining them entire. The essentials of a clause may be marked by lines drawn over subject, verb, and complement. The word that introduces the clause may be marked with a + over it.

Examples. — I. (The) past is (a) (shadowy) page ⁺ (which keeps [forever]) (the) record (of our lives).

1. This is a complex assertive sentence.
2. Formed of the principal clause and an adjective clause.
3. The essentials of the principal clause are past is page.
4. The subject past is modified by the adjective the.
5. The subjective complement page is modified by the adjectives a and shadowy, and by the adjective clause which keeps forever the record of our lives.
6. The essentials of the adjective clause are which keeps record, and so on.

II. Nothing is troublesome ⁺ (that we do [willingly]).

NOTE.—Conjunctive pronouns used as complements always precede their verbs, as in the sentence above.

III. Whoever does (a) (good) deed is ⁺ [instantly] ennobled.

1. This is a complex assertive sentence.
2. Formed of a principal clause having a noun clause for its subject.
3. The essentials of the assertion are — and so on as before.

IV. (The) lecturer told [us] ⁺ what he had seen [during his journey]. ↓

Exercise 153. — Analyze the following sentences:

1. Who owned the farm that was sold?
2. Tell me what you have learned.
3. The gentleman who called is a physician.
4. He is a man that I esteem highly.
5. Show me those that you have finished.
6. We shall send him whatever he demands.
7. Do you know for whom the gift is meant?
8. Have you heard what caused the fire?
9. I know what you want.
10. Ask her who he is.
11. We prize that which we obtain by effort.
12. This is the book from which he read the story.
13. My lord, I know not what the matter is.
14. People almost never do anything in anger of which they do not repent.
15. He who was taught only by himself had a fool for a master.
16. Nature is loved by what is best in us.
17. There is no secret of the heart which our actions do not disclose.
18. Reputation is what we seem, but character is what we are.
19. Beauty is the mark that God sets on virtue. 20. What man has done man can do. 21. Such as I have give I unto thee. 22. The block of granite which was an obstacle in the pathway of the weak, becomes a stepping-stone in the pathway of the strong.

23. That which was sown an earthly seed
Shall rise a heavenly flower.
24. What's hallowed ground? 'Tis what gives birth
To sacred thoughts in souls of worth.
25. It is thinking that makes what we read ours.
26. Who gives himself with his alms feeds three,
Himself, his hungering neighbor, and me.
27. Each, after all, learns only what he can;
Who grasps the moment as it flies,
He is the real man.

. 295. How to Parse a Pronoun. — A pronoun is parsed by giving its 1. kind; 2. antecedent; (3. person;) (4. number;) (5. case;) 6. use; and (7. declension).

The following forms may be used:

(My) mind (to me) (a) kingdom is.

My is a personal pronoun; represents the speaker; first person; singular number; possessive case; used to modify the noun mind.

Or more briefly —

My is the first singular personal pronoun, and is used to modify mind.

Those ⁺ (that waste (their) youth) lose ⁺ what they can [never] regain.

Those is an adjective pronoun; represents "those persons"; plural number; used as subject of the verb lose.

That is a relative pronoun; antecedent, those; used as the subject of the verb waste.

What is a conjunctive pronoun; antecedent omitted; used as the object of the verb can regain.

Exercise 154. — Parse the pronouns in Exercises 153 and 148.

SUMMARY: PRONOUNS

Case: Nominative, Possessive, Objective

3. Construction. See "Summary of Nouns," page 104.

DIRECTIONS FOR THE USE OF PRONOUNS

1. NUMBER FORMS

- Exercise 155. — 1. A tree is known by its fruit.
 2. Deciduous trees shed their leaves annually.
 3. Neither of the ships lowered its colors.
 4. Let each person do his best.
 5. Even a child is known by his doings.
 6. Both the regiments laid down their arms.
 7. Each pupil must provide his own books.
 8. No faithful girl will forget her duties.

1. What is meant by the antecedent of a pronoun? 2. In the first two sentences, would you fill the blanks with "their" or "its"? 3. Give your reason, and explain the number of both pronoun and antecedent. 4. In the third sentence, does the subject "neither" mean one or more than one? 5. Will "their" correctly represent it? Give your reason. 6. In the next two sentences, why may we not use "their" to represent person and child? 7. Fill the blanks in the remaining sentences with "their," "her," "its," or "his," as you may think best. 8. When is the singular form of a pronoun to be used? 9. The plural? 10. The feminine.

297. We must be careful always to use a singular pronoun to represent a singular antecedent, and a plural pronoun to represent a plural antecedent.

It is incorrect to say —

Every man of you must polish their own armor, for the plural pronoun "their" does not correctly represent the singular antecedent "man." We should say —

Every man of you must polish his own armor.

298. Agreement. — A pronoun must agree with its antecedent in number, gender, and person.

Exercise 156. — Fill the blanks with suitable pronouns, giving the reason for your choice. Thus:

"Neither had discovered his mistake." The singular antecedent "neither" must be represented by the singular pronoun his. A pronoun must agree in number with its antecedent.

1. Neither had discovered ~~the~~ mistake. 2. Each contributed what ~~the~~ could. 3. Every one stoutly maintained ~~the~~ innocence. 4. The beaver shows great skill in constructing ~~the~~ dwellings. 5. Everybody must look out for ~~the~~. 6. A person should control ~~the~~ wrath. 7. When one is ill, ~~the~~ will call a physician. 8. If you find "Little Women" send ~~the~~ to me. 9. This is such bad news that I cannot believe ~~the~~. 10. England expects every man to do ~~the~~ duty. 11. Each workman must provide ~~the~~ own tools.

12. Sharpen my shears so that ~~the~~ will cut. 13. Which of the two finished ~~the~~ work first? 14. Let each esteem others better than ~~the~~. 15. A person may make ~~the~~ happy without wealth. 16. Let each of the girls take — place. 17. A person's manners frequently show — morals. 18. After you have read "My Girls," return — to me. 19. If thine enemy hunger, feed —. 20. If anybody knows, — must not tell. 21. Many a man will sacrifice — reputation for a trifle. 22. If anybody calls, tell — to wait.

299. Antecedents joined by AND. — Singular antecedents connected by "and" must be represented by a plural pronoun when they denote different things, but by a singular pronoun when

(1) they denote the same thing, or

(2) when they are kept separate by the use of "each," "every," "many a," or "no." Thus:

Martha and Mary (two persons) wept for their brother.

The secretary and treasurer (one person) has resigned his office.

Each leaf and each flower can speak its Maker's praise.

Every maple and every elm will have shed its leaves.

Many a flower and many a gem may have its beauty hidden.

No friend and no acquaintance gave me his aid.

Exercise 157. — Supply a suitable pronoun in each of these sentences, giving the reason for your choice:

1. Joseph and Benjamin rejoiced to see — father. 2. Cultivate good temper and kind feeling: — presence will make all about you happy. 3. Envy and hatred make — possessor unhappy. 4. Poverty and wealth have each — own temptations. 5. Each officer and each soldier will be permitted to retain — arms. 6. My classmate and companion had completed — studies. 7. Every steamer and every train had — complement of passengers. 8. Every lady and every gentleman must register — names. [See § 301.] 9. The husband and father cannot support — family. 10. Every city and village and farm furnished — quota of soldiers.

300. Antecedents joined by OR or NOR. — Use a singular pronoun to represent singular antecedents connected by "or" or "nor." Thus:

Either the president or the cashier must add his signature.

Neither Harrison, Taylor, nor Garfield completed his term of office.

301. In referring to singular nouns of different gender we may (1) use pronouns of different gender, (2) use a pronoun of the masculine gender, or else (3) change the form of the sentence. Thus, we may say —

Every boy or girl may keep his or her books, or

Every boy or girl may keep his books, or

All the boys and girls may keep their books.

It is wrong, of course, to say, — Every boy or girl may keep their books. If there were a singular pronoun that could refer to either males or females, we might not be tempted so often to use “they” incorrectly.

Exercise 158. — Read these sentences, supplying a suitable pronoun, and giving a reason for your choice, according to § 300. Thus:

Neither Henry nor Thomas had paid his fare.

The singular pronoun his must be used to represent the singular nouns “Henry” and “Thomas” which are connected by “nor,” and hence are to be taken separately.

1. Neither the lawyer nor the physician will give — services. 2. If thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut — off. 3. Where can I buy a good horse or farm, if I want —? 4. Neither Alfred nor Ellen recited — lesson perfectly. 5. No man nor woman ever hurt — health in this way.

302. Collective nouns while singular in form are either singular or plural in meaning, and hence are represented sometimes by a singular and sometimes by a plural pronoun. When we say —

The committee has made its report, we speak of the action of one body. In —

The jury were divided in their opinion, we are thinking of the action of the individuals that form the body.

The name of our country, the United States, though plural in form, is now more generally treated as a singular collective noun. We speak of its government, its army, its navy. Usage, however, is divided.

303. Collective antecedents. — Represent a collective noun by a singular pronoun when you refer to the collection as a whole, and by a plural pronoun when you refer to the individuals of the collection separately.

Exercise 159. — Fill each blank with a suitable pronoun, giving the reason for your choice.

1. The audience kept — seats till the close. 2. The jury had not brought in — verdict. 3. The House will elect — speaker next Monday. 4. The Board of Aldermen will be divided in — opinion. 5. Our club will hold — meeting tomorrow. 6. The Post will install — officers next week.

2. CASE-FORMS

304. When we use the pronouns that have three case-forms, we must be careful to use only the nominative forms as subjects and subjective complements, and only the objective forms as objects of verbs or prepositions.

305. The nominative forms for subjects and subjective complements are —

I, we, thou, he, she, they, who, whoever, whosoever.

The objective forms for objects of any kind are — me, us, thee, him, her, them, whom, whomever, whomsoever.

306. Rule for subjects, etc. — 1. Never use an objective case-form as a subject or as a subjective complement; or —

2. The subject of a verb should be in the nominative case.

Exercise 160. — Select the proper form of the pronoun, giving the reason for your choice. Thus:

"It wasn't (me, I) that did it." The nominative I, and not the objective me, should be used as the subjective complement of was according to the rule, "Never use an objective case-form as a subject or a subjective complement." We should say, "It wasn't I that did it."

1. You and (me, I) will go together. 2. Why shouldn't (us, we) girls form a club? 3. Thy father says (thou, thee) must obey. 4. I should go if I were (he, him). 5. You said it was (her, she) that called. 6. (Them, they) that have want more. 7. I do not know (who, whom) it will be. 8. Reward (whomever, whoever) is deserving. 9. (Whom, who) do you think it is? 10. It is not (us, we) who are to blame.

11. Was it (she, her) that came last? 12. Few can entertain an audience better than (him, he). 13. I do not think it could have been (they, them). 14. She knows better than you or (me, I). 15. (They, them) that do well should be rewarded. 16. How much older are you than (her, she)? 17. Where are you and (he, him) to stay? 18. Who will ask for it, you or (I, me)?

307. Rule for objects. — 1. Never use the nominative of a pronoun with three case-forms as the object of a verb or a preposition; or —

2. The object of a verb or a preposition should be in the objective case.

Exercise 161. — Choose the proper form of the pronoun, and justify your selection. Thus:

"He has invited you and (I, me)." The use of the nominative I instead of the objective me as the object of the verb has invited would be a violation of the rule, "Never use the nominative of a pronoun with three case-forms as the object of a verb"; hence we should say, "He has invited you and me."

1. Let this be a secret between you and (I, me). 2. (Who, whom) did they choose? 3. I want you and (he, him) to go. 4. Nothing is too good for you nor (she, her) either. 5. (Who, whom) did you see?

6. Tell me (whom, who) you mean. 7. There was no one to go except (she, her) and her mother. 8. I wanted you and (him, he) to come again. 9. (Whom, who) is this package for? 10. (Them, they) that honor me I will honor. 11. Send (whoever, whomever) you choose. 12. I will give it to (whosoever, whomsoever) you select. 13. (Who, whom) did he appoint as executor? 14. This is for you and (I, me). 15. Let's you and (I, me) bring the sleigh.

308. An appositive pronoun requires the objective case-form only when in apposition with an object. Thus:

Honor thy mother, her who loves thee well.
We will write to each other, you and I.

309. A pronoun used independently or with a participle should generally have the nominative case-form. Thus:

O Thou who hearest prayer! He failing, who shall succeed?

310. The subject and the complement of the indirect predicate "to be" must both have the objective case-form. Thus:

I knew it to be him. He thought them to be us. Whom did he suppose me to be?

Exercise 162. — Read each of these sentences several times, using different pronouns to fill the blanks, when possible. Thus:

It is I. It is you. It is we. It is he. It is she. It is they.

- | | | | |
|---------------------------|--------------|----------------------------|---------------|
| 1. It is —. | It wasn't —. | 9. It can't be —. | It must be —. |
| 2. Is it —? | No, it is —. | 10. Was it —? | No, it was —. |
| 3. It is not — nor —. | | 11. They saw — and —. | |
| 4. — and — will go. | | 12. Between — and —. | |
| 5. Neither — nor — went. | | 13. Do you know — he sent? | |
| 6. Those are for — and —. | | 14. He knows — it is for. | |
| 7. He mistook — for —. | | 15. — knew it was —. | |
| 8. Do you know — it is? | | 16. — knew it to be —. | |

Exercise 163. — Read the sentences, using that form of the pronoun which you think is correct. Give the reason for your choice.

1. Was it you or (I, me) that made the mistake? 2. It was intended for either you or (him, he). 3. (Who, whom) did he send with you? 4. Was it (him, he) (that, who, whom) you met at my uncle's? 5. Be careful (who, whom) you admit to your friendship. — 6. No matter (who, whom) the poor fellow is, help him. 7. All (which, that) I have told you is between you and (I, me). 8. (Who, whom) shall we send in his place? 9. The committee did not agree in (its, their) opinion. 10. We saw the procession with (their, its) banner.

11. There are few better men than (he, him). 12. Each of them must answer for (themselves, himself). 13. (Whom, who) besides him do you think was rewarded? 14. Nobody should praise (themselves, himself). 15. Can you forgive (we, us) girls for our folly? 16. Every man and boy took off (their, his) hat. 17. Please explain the phenomena: I do not understand (it, them). 18. That distinguished orator and statesman will give (their, his) lecture tonight. 19. Neither the king nor the queen wore (his, her, their, the) royal robes.

3. CHOICE OF PRONOUNS

311. Of the relative pronouns, who stands for persons only, which for things, and that for either persons or things.

312. That, rather than who or which, should be used —

(1) After a superlative adjective. Thus:

The wisest man that ever lived.

(2) After same, all, and the interrogative who. Thus:

The same friend that I visited. All that was left. Who that heard the orator can forget him?

(3) After antecedents denoting both persons and things. Thus:

He spoke of the men and the cities that he had seen.

Why not "whom he had seen" or "which he had seen?"

313. It is often better to use that, rather than "who" or "which," in restrictive clauses; that is, in clauses that limit the application of the antecedent by showing which ones or how many, etc., are meant.

Other adjective clauses state an additional fact about the antecedent, and may be called coördinate, explanatory, or appositive clauses. For example:

RESTRICTIVE. Franklin was the commissioner that negotiated the treaty.

COÖRDINATE. Congress appointed a commissioner, who negotiated the treaty.

314. It is better to use each other in speaking of two objects; one another, of more than two. As in —

David and Jonathan loved (each) other.

[How] do (the) months compare [with (one) another]?

Each and one are generally in apposition with the subject of the verb; other and another are objects.

Exercise 164. 1. Fill the blanks with who, which, or that, and give the reason for your choice.

1. He was deceived by the friend in — he trusted. 2. A new party arose, — opposed the National Bank. 3. These are the same persons — assisted us before. 4. Who are those — were introduced to us? 5. All — I said did not influence him. 6. They have not forgotten the friends and the home — they have left. 7. Is that the regiment of — you are a member? 8. He was the first — reached the New World. 9. The surgeon, — was a very skillful man, saved my friend's life. 10. The family — I visited cannot be the one to — you refer. 11. We saw the prisoners and the flags — were captured.

2. Select the proper expression as you read these sentences :

1. The tribes of Southern Africa resemble (each other, one another).
2. (Either, any one) of the five will help you.
3. The two nations are suspicious of (one another, each other).
4. We saw a ship (that its, whose) masts were cut away.

Exercise 165. — 1. Name four classes of pronouns. 2. Name those that are always of the same "person." 3. What two uses have conjunctive pronouns? 4. What is a clause? 5. An adjective clause? 6. A noun clause? 7. Of what kind are pronouns that introduce adjective clauses? 8. What is a complex sentence? 9. Which pronouns have two number-forms? 10. Name the eight pronouns that have three case-forms. 11. Give the nine objective case-forms. 12. Use who in five different constructions. 13. Mention three rare uses of the personal pronouns. 14. What determines the number-form of a pronoun? 15. In what constructions must the nominative case-form be used? 16. The objective? 17. When must a singular pronoun represent a collective noun? 18. What is the rule for the number of a pronoun that represents two singular nouns?

19. Parse the pronouns in the following selection. 20. Quote the two adjective clauses and tell what each modifies. 21. How is the noun clause used? 22. What clause modifies buy like an adverb? 23. What phrases may you substitute for above and below?

He liveth long who liveth well;
All else is life but flung away;
He liveth longest who can tell
Of true things truly done each day.
Then fill each hour with what will last;
Buy up the moments as they go;
The life above, when this is past,
Is the ripe fruit of life below.

CHAPTER VIII

ADJECTIVES

[Review pages 24-27].

Exercise 166.

- | | |
|-----------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| 1. Any bright, intelligent child. | 7. Several large Asiatic lions. |
| 2. Some poor anthracite coal. | 8. What plants are poisonous? |
| 3. Which planet is brightest? | 9. Those three decaying trees. |
| 4. Chasms, dark and dreadful. | 10. Every tenth man was lame. |
| 5. Six tall Russian soldiers. | 11. All the written evidence. |
| 6. That road looks cheerless. | 12. This water tastes salt. |

1. What is an adjective? 2. Which of the preceding adjectives describe what is mentioned? 3. Which show how many are meant? 4. Mention those that merely show which ones are referred to without describing them. 5. What is a predicate adjective? 6. Mention those used above. 7. Name the adjectives used to ask questions. 8. The two derived from proper nouns. 9. Those that are made from verbs. 10. Those that show quantity. 11. Which besides the predicate adjectives follow the nouns that they modify?

A. KINDS

316. Most adjectives are words that may be used with a noun to describe the object named by showing that it is of a certain kind or quality, or that it is in a certain state or condition. As — white roses; skillful surgeons; wounded men; daily walks.

Such adjectives besides describing what is named also often limit the application of the noun, as in the last three examples just given.

317. Other adjectives do nothing else but determine or limit the application of a noun by showing which ones, how many, or what quantity. As — this brook; the fourth day; six perch; few trout; much rain.

318. A Descriptive adjective is one that describes what is mentioned.

319. Descriptive adjectives derived from proper nouns are called proper adjectives. Those that are forms of verbs are called participial adjectives. Those that denote qualities are called qualitative adjectives. Thus:

Brazilian diamonds; fatiguing journeys; wise men.

Exercise 167. — From the following nouns form proper adjectives to fill the blanks in the sentences:

Genoa, France, America, Spain, Persia, Venice, Italy, China, Japan, Turkey, Greece, Mexico, Africa, Shakespeare, Malta, Brazil.

1. — navigators sailed under the — flag. 2. The — flag and the — flag have three colors each. 3. — carpets and — rugs are imported. 4. — lanterns and — fans are sold here. 5. The windows have — blinds. 6. He is an excellent — reader. 7. Which are more valuable, — or — diamonds? 8. He played several — airs. 9. Draw a — cross and a — cross. 10. We met two —, a —, and several —. 11. Cochineal is a — product.

320. A Limiting adjective is one that merely shows which ones, how many, and so on, without describing.

321. Limiting adjectives include the following:

I. The two Articles — the; an, or a.

(a) The is the definite article, used with either singular or plural nouns to point out some particular thing or things.

(b) An or a is the indefinite article, used with singular nouns to show that we mean either one only or any one.

II. Numeral adjectives, — showing how many or which one of a series, how large a part, etc. As —

March contains thirty-one days, or four weeks and three days. Pronounce the third word on the ninety-first page. A tenth part is smaller than a sixth part.

III. The Interrogative adjectives — which and what. As —

Which road leads to Rome? What cities were destroyed?

IV. The Conjunctive adjectives — which and what, with their compounds, used to introduce a noun-clause, or to connect it to the rest of the sentence. As —

Do you know what presidents died in office?

Whatever facts you may obtain will be valuable.

We have not heard which army was victorious.

Some conjunctive adjectives are relatives, and some interrogatives.

V. Demonstrative adjectives — this, that, these, those, and yonder, which point out objects definitely.

VI. Distributive adjectives — each, every, either, neither, and many a, which refer to objects singly.

VII. Quantitative adjectives — much, more, most, little, less, least.

Distributive and quantitative adjectives are called Indefinite adjectives.

The interrogative, conjunctive, demonstrative, and indefinite (except every) adjectives, may also be used as pronouns. (See Adjective Pronouns.)

Exercise 168. — 1. Classify the adjectives in Exercise 106.

2. Construct ten sentences, each containing a limiting and a descriptive adjective.

B. INFLECTION: CHANGES OF FORM

COMPARISON

Exercise 169. — 1. Lake Erie is a large lake.

2. Lake Michigan is larger than Lake Erie.

3. Lake Superior is the largest lake in the world.

1. Mention the descriptive adjectives in these sentences. 2. What two lakes are compared? 3. With reference to what quality are they compared? 4. Which of the two has that quality in the greater degree? 5. What change in the form of the adjective is made to show this? 6. With what is Lake Superior compared? 7. What lake is of greater size than Lake Superior? 8. What lake has the quality of size in the highest degree? 9. In these comparisons what changes do you notice in the form of the adjective?

322. Some adjectives are inflected to show that one object has more of the quality than others with which it is compared.

Thus, without making a comparison, we say —

This is a high mountain;

but, to show that another mountain with which we compare it has the quality of height in a greater degree, we add er to the adjective, and say —

Mt. Lafayette is a higher mountain.

And if we wish to show that one mountain among all those we are considering has the quality of height in the greatest degree, we add est to the adjective, and say —

Mt. Washington is the highest mountain in the state.

323. To add er and est to an adjective so that it may denote different degrees of a quality is to compare it.

— 324. Comparison is a change in an adjective to denote different degrees of the quality.

325. The positive degree of an adjective denotes the simple quality. As — tall, heavy, sad.

The comparative degree denotes a higher degree of the quality. As — taller, heavier, sadder.

The superlative degree denotes the highest degree of the quality. As — tallest, heaviest, saddest.

Exercise 170. — 1. Tell which degree of these adjectives is given:

Happier; nobler; musty; clearer; slower; nearest; hot; proper; bright; slender; small; politer; fairest; luckiest; surest.

2. Compare the following adjectives [see § 380]:

Thin; feeble; strong; merry; lofty; brave; short; jolly; pretty; red; coy; gloomy; keen; shy; rough; great; mighty; lovely; idle; profound.

3. Which change y to i? Which really add only r and st? Which double the last consonant?

— 326. Irregular comparison. — The following adjectives are compared in an irregular way — sometimes by quite different words:

POSITIVE	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE	POSITIVE	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
Good	better	best	Late	{ later	{ latest
Well				{ latter	{ last
Bad	worse	worst	Near	nearer	{ nearest
Ill					{ next
Little	less	least	Old	{ older	{ oldest
Many	more	most		{ elder	{ eldest
Much			[In]	inner	{ inmost
[Forth]	further	furthest			{ innermost
Far	farther	farthest	[Out]	outer	{ outmost
Fore	former	{ first			{ outermost
		{ foremost	[Up]	upper	uppermost

NOTE. — The words in brackets are adverbs. Several other superlatives are made by adding -most instead of -est. As — northern, northernmost; southern, southernmost.

327. Many adjectives cannot be compared by inflection, since the addition of er and est would make awkward or ill-sounding words.

Hence a second method is employed by which more and most are used with the positive form to make the comparative and superlative. Thus:

beautiful, more beautiful, most beautiful.

Or we may use less and least to show degrees below the positive. Thus:

remarkable, less remarkable, least remarkable.

328. The adjectives to which er and est may be added are words of one syllable and a few words of two syllables, chiefly those ending in y or le. As —

Happy, hearty, ready; noble, able; polite, mellow, etc.

329. A few adjectives denote qualities that cannot exist in different degrees, and hence they can neither be compared nor modified by more and most. As —

Dead, chief, square, equal, principal, spherical, etc.

NOTE. — Such forms as rounder, straighter, truest, are sometimes used as if they meant more nearly round or straight, or nearest true.

Exercise 171. — 1. Change the adjectives to equivalent adjective phrases, and change the phrases to equivalent adjectives.

Handsomest; more shallow; most sincere; fittest; more handy; sauciest; most ample; narrowest; slenderest; more nimble; braver; gentlest.

2. Change them to phrases denoting lower and lowest degrees.

3. Tell which of the following adjectives are not compared, and give your reason:

Luscious; empty; hollow; supreme; wrong; tenth; dead; particular; false; vain; fashionable; naked; honest; lucrative; void; these; blind; equal; fatal; dry; wet; best; mean; dutiful; level.

330. Number. — Only two adjectives, this and that, change their form when used with nouns plural in meaning. Thus:

this kind; these varieties; that reason; those reasons.

(a) A or an, another, each, either, neither, many a, much, and one are used only with singular nouns; and both, many, several, sundry, divers, and most numeral adjectives, only with plural nouns.

C. USES, OR CONSTRUCTIONS

331. I. (a) An adjective may be closely connected with its noun as an attribute, or part of the name. Thus:

Those | brave soldiers prepared for the | coming battle.

(b) Or it may be used appositively. Thus:

The enemy, equally brave, began the conflict.

Cool and resolute, they awaited the onset.

332. II. It may be joined to a copulative verb as a predicate adjective, showing what is asserted of the subject. Thus:

The contest was long and bloody, and the result seemed doubtful.

333. III. An adjective may be joined to a transitive verb or verbal word as an objective complement to complete its meaning and at the same time add a quality to the object of it.

His troubles made him insane. We tried to make him comfortable.

334. How to Parse an Adjective. — To parse an adjective we have to tell only its (1) kind, (2) form — if comparative or superlative — (3) use. These forms may be followed:

1. <Full many a> gem <of purest ray serene>

(The) (dark), (unfathomed) caves (of ocean) bear.

2. Do you know ⁺(what) (American) historian was blind?

3. (Which) king (of England) had <six> wives?

many-a is a limiting adjective; used to modify gem.

purest is a superlative, descriptive adjective; used to modify ray.

American is a proper, descriptive adjective; used to modify historian.

what is a conjunctive adjective; used to modify historian.

blind is a descriptive adjective; used as subjective complement of was, and referring to historian.

which is an interrogative adjective; used to modify king.

six is a numeral adjective; used to modify wives.

Exercise 172. — Analyze these sentences, and parse the adjectives.

1. Gentle rains revive the thirsty fields. 2. Firm-paced and slow, a horrid front they form. 3. Calm and serene as the iron walls around him, stood Regulus the Roman. 4. Many amusements appear harmless that are really dangerous. 5. The painting looks attractive, but the artist does not seem satisfied. 6. A few critics have pronounced it perfect. 7. The government thought him competent to command. 8. Make the house where gods may dwell beautiful, entire, and clean. 9. Many try in vain to be happy. 10. The people found their new ruler to be cruel and blood-thirsty. 11. Appearing honest and being honest are very different things. 12. You must tell me about what things you see. 13. Medicine only made the patient worse. 14. To be prodigal in youth is to be needy in age. 15. Which course would you advise him to take? 16. Whatever efforts you make will be rewarded. 17. Fortune may make a man famous, but it cannot make him great.

335. Summary. — An adjective is a word that adds to the meaning of a noun or a pronoun, without asserting anything nor standing by itself as a name.

1. Kinds:

Descriptive { Qualitative.
Participial.
Proper.

2. Forms: { Positive.
Comparative.
Superlative.

Limiting { Article: Definite, Indefinite.
Numeral: Cardinal, Ordinal.
Demonstrative.
Interrogative.
Distributive.
Conjunctive: Simple, Compound.

3. Uses, or Construction:

1. Modifies the noun (or pronoun) —.
2. Subjective Complement of the verb (infinitive or participle) —.
(a) Referring to —. (b) Used abstractly.
3. Objective Complement of the verb (infinitive or participle) —.

D. DIRECTIONS FOR THE USE OF ADJECTIVES

336. A or An. — A should be used only before words beginning with consonant sounds, and an before words beginning with vowel sounds. Thus:

A house, an honor; a wonder, a one, an onion, an ounce; a yew, a ewe, a ūse, a ūnit, a eulogy, an ūrchin, an ūncle.

NOTE. — One begins with the consonant sound of w, and long u begins with the consonant sound of y.

337. Article repeated. — When two or more connected adjectives describe different objects, the article is used with each; but when they describe the same object, the article is used with the first only. Thus:

A pink and a white dahlia (two flowers).

A pink and white dahlia (one flower).

A red, a white, and a blue flag.

A red, white, and blue flag.

How many flags are mentioned.

338. Agreement. — An adjective that implies one, or more than one, must agree in number with the noun that it limits. Thus we should say —

“This kind,” not “these kind”; “that sort,” not “those sort”; “three feet wide,” not “three foot wide”; six pounds of tea,” not “six pound.”

339. Such expressions as a few, a dozen, a great many, a hundred, ten thousand, three hundred sixty-five, two and a half, may be considered adjective phrases when they modify nouns.

340. Them. — Never use “them” as an adjective.

Expressions like “them books,” “them things,” are among the worst errors.

Exercise 173. — 1. Fill the blanks with a, an, or the when needed.

1. Brutus was — honorable man. 2. This is — universal truth.
3. He was — kind and — indulgent parent. 4. Omit — first and second stanzas. 5. — poor and — rich have equal rights. 6. She was married to — dignified and — kindly man.

2. Select the proper form, giving your reason.

1. I prefer (these, this) kind of rugs. 2. Did they use (that, those) hose at the fire? 3. You must avoid (those, that) sort of people. 4. I haven't seen him for (these, this) two weeks. 5. We must catch (them, those) horses.

341. Adjectives not compared. — Do not compare adjectives so as to make ill-sounding or meaningless forms.

Say the most impertinent fellow, not the impertinentest; and more nearly square, rather than squarer.

342. Double Comparison. — Do not modify comparatives by "more" nor superlatives by "most."

For "They could not find a more worthier man," say, "a worthier man," or "a more worthy man." In—"This is the most unwisest course," omit either most or st.

343. Forms Confused. — Use the comparative form in comparing two objects, the superlative in comparing more than two. Thus:

Which is better — health or wealth?

Which is best — health, wealth, or learning?

344. "Other" misused. — Do not spoil a comparison by wrongly inserting or omitting the word "other." Thus:

"New York is larger than any city in America," should of course be "than any other city in America"; and Rhode Island is the smallest of all the other States," should be "of all the States."

345. Adjectives for Adverbs. — Do not use an adjective where an adverb is needed.

Not "speak proper," but "speak properly"; not "real good," but "really or very good."

Exercise 174. — Correct the following sentences, giving your reason:

1. Go very quick. 2. I never heard a more truer remark. 3. Which is largest — the numerator or the denominator? 4. Which is the best writer — James or Henry? 5. Speak loud and distinct. 6. This is the most quietest part of the city. 7. Let such an one rise, if present. 8. I never saw anything neater done. 9. Which is nearest the north pole — Europe or Asia? 10. This copy is very perfect. 11. Were you weighed on that scales? 12. He is the awkwardest skater on the pond. 13. Of all my other friends, I like him best. 14. Brother Charles is taller than any member of our family.

TO A WATER FOWL

346.

Whither, midst falling dew,
While glow the heavens with the last steps of day,
Far, through their rosy depths, dost thou pursue
Thy solitary way?

Vainly the fowler's eye
Might mark thy distant flight to do thee wrong,
As, darkly seen against the crimson sky,
Thy figure floats along.

Seek'st thou the plashy brink
Of weedy lake, or marge of river wide,
Or where the rocking billows rise and sink
On the chafed ocean-side?

There is a Power whose care
Teaches thy way along that pathless coast —
The desert and illimitable air —
Lone wandering, but not lost.

All day thy wings have fanned,
At that far height, the cold, thin atmosphere,
Yet stoop not, weary, to the welcome land,
Though the dark night is near.

And soon that toil shall end;
Soon shalt thou find a summer home, and rest,
And scream among thy fellows; reeds shall bend,
Soon, o'er thy sheltered nest.

Thou'rt gone! The abyss of heaven
Hath swallowed up thy form; yet, on my heart
Deeply hath sunk the lesson thou hast given,
And shall not soon depart.

He who, from zone to zone,
Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight,
In the long way that I must tread alone,
Will lead my steps aright.

— William Cullen Bryant.

1. Make a list of the descriptive adjectives. 2. Of the limiting adjectives. 3. Of the adjective phrases. 4. Of the adjective clauses. 5. This selection gives excellent opportunity for a review in analysis and parsing.

TEST QUESTIONS

1. Explain the difference between descriptive and limiting adjectives. 2. Name three classes of limiting adjectives. 3. Use which as a conjunctive adjective. 4. Why is what sometimes called a conjunctive adjective? 5. How and why are adjectives compared? 6. What substitute is there for the comparative degree? 7. When is the superlative degree used? 8. What adjectives are not compared? 9. How do you discriminate in the use of a and an? 10. Mention three errors to be avoided in the use of adjectives. 11. Parse the adjectives in the following selection:

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day;
The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea;
The plowman homeward plods his weary way,
And leaves the world to darkness and to me.

Now fades the glimmering landscape on the sight,
And all the air a solemn stillness holds;
Save where the beetle wheels his droning flight,
And drowsy tinklings lull the distant folds;

Save that from yonder ivy-mantled tower,
The moping owl does to the moon complain
Of such as, wandering near her secret bower,
Molest her ancient solitary reign.

— Thomas Gray.

CHAPTER IX

VERBS

A. KINDS

^ 347. The life of a sentence is the verb that it contains; for without a verb we cannot assert or question or command or wish.

^ 348. In our study of the structure of sentences we have already learned that —

1. Most verbs express action, as — go, come, work.
2. Some verbs denote a state or condition, as — be, dwell, seem.
3. All verbs belong to one of two classes, (1) verbs of complete predication, or briefly, complete verbs, and (2) verbs of incomplete predication, or incomplete verbs. As —

(1) The sun rises. (2) The sun gives light.

4. A Complete verb is one that may be used alone to make a predicate. As — The earth revolves.

5. An Incomplete verb is one that needs another word to complete the predicate. As — The earth is a sphere.

This part that completes the predicate is called the complement of the verb.

6. Incomplete verbs are of two kinds, copulative and transitive.

7. A Copulative verb is one that requires a complement that describes or limits its subject.

As — Life is short. The Muses were nine in number.

8. A Transitive verb is one that has a complement which shows who or what receives the action expressed by the verb. As — The fox caught the rabbit. The hunter shot the fox.

9. The Complement of a copulative verb is either a predicate noun or a predicate adjective, or else some phrase or clause used as its equivalent. As — Edward is king. The people are loyal. Lost time is beyond recall. Life is what we make it.

10. The complement of a transitive verb is a noun or pronoun or its equivalent, and is called an object.

As — Receive him kindly. Bring flowers. Try to do right. Tell why the birds sing.

We sometimes speak of this object as the direct object, to distinguish it from the indirect.

11. Some transitive verbs, besides the direct object, take also an indirect object which shows to or for whom or what the action is performed.

As — Give me time to think. Give the lawn a sprinkling.

12. A few transitive verbs, in addition to the direct object, may have a second complement referring to it. As — Make the path smooth. This is called the objective complement.

Such verbs are sometimes called factitive verbs, that is, verbs of making.

349. Sometimes verbs are classified as transitive and intransitive, complete and copulative verbs forming the latter class. It is often convenient to use the term, intransitive.

350. Certain verbs are used without any real subject, the meaningless word it serving as an expletive. As —

It rains. It has snowed all night. May it please the court.

Such verbs are called impersonal verbs.

Exercise 175. — 1. Supply subjects to these verbs, and complements where they seem to be needed:

Screamed; stays; fly; ate; cut; punished; grew; drink; seek; depart; talked; tears; looks; seemed; saw; were; became; found; arm; wore; feels; had; spoke; are; was.

2. Explain the difference between the two kinds of complements that you have added.

351. The same verb may belong to different classes, according to the different senses in which it is used. Thus, in the sentence, The trees grow, the verb grow is complete and cannot take an object; in, Stones grow old, the verb is incomplete and copulative, for it needs the complement "old" to describe the subject; and in, The florists grow cuttings under glass, grow is still incomplete, but it is transitive, since its complement, instead of describing the subject, is an object, showing what the action affects.

352. The number of copulative verbs is small; one of them, however, is extremely common, namely, be, which — with its various forms, am, is, was, were, etc. — helps to make many verb phrases; as in —

We are waiting, for We wait.

(a) Be is sometimes used like "exist" as a complete verb with more of its original meaning; as in —

The time was, when no one lived here; There has been a frost;
but generally it seems only to connect the subject to what is asserted of it. [See § 125.]

(b) Be enters into the meaning of all other copulative verbs. Thus:

He appeared wise — was wise in appearance.
The clouds look distant — are distant to the sight.
The water tastes bitter — is bitter to the taste.

So with feel, sound, smell, become, seem, etc.

Exercise 176. — Point out the verbs the meaning of which is completed by some expression that is descriptive of what the subject names.

1. The case seems more hopeful. 2. Man became a living soul. 3. The man has turned fool. 4. He looks well and feels much stronger. 5. Why stand ye here idle? 6. All bloodless lay the untrodden snow. 7. He had been called wise. 8. The English forces proved irresistible. 9. The shutters blew open. 10. The buds smell sweet, but they taste bitter. 11. Some men are born great.

353. Verbs that are usually transitive may also be used intransitively; i.e., they may signify merely that something is done, nothing being said about what is affected by the action. So we say —

“He sees his friends” or “He sees distinctly.”
“He writes English” or “He writes slowly.”

354. Even verbs that are usually intransitive may sometimes take an object. Thus:

Sit thee down. She worked herself to death. They live a dreary life, and are running a hopeless race. Walk your horses up hill.

Exercise 177. — Make short sentences showing how each verb may be used either transitively or intransitively:

Answer; boils; dissolve; returned; smells; survive; break; fell; slipped; believes; becomes; shakes; rained; pulls; struck; drives; gnaw; sing; worries; felt; sounds; followed; rattled; tasted; fear; stay.

B. INFLECTION: CHANGES IN FORM

355. As with nouns and pronouns, so with verbs, each has several forms made by inflection to correspond to changes in the use or in the meaning.

The phrases that are used instead of inflected forms we shall study later. [See page 160.]

1. TENSE FORMS

Exercise 178. — 1. Tell whether the time referred to is present or past. If in doubt, add "now" or "yesterday."

He thinks.	She rides.	It stood.	They fall.
I thought.	They caught.	We found.	Waves dash.
He catches.	I walked.	I lose.	Water freezes.
We study.	You wrote.	It grows.	Ice breaks.

2. Change each verb so that it will refer to some other time.

356. Nearly every verb has one change of form that affects the meaning as much as if it were modified by an adverb. Thus, speaking of the present time, we say —

I come; I wait; I stay;

but if the coming, waiting, or staying took place at some time in the past, we say —

I came; I waited; I stayed.

— 357. Tenses are the forms of a verb that distinguish time.

Exercise 179. — Tell whether the form of the verb denotes present or past time:

I have.	Thou mayest.	He was.	Thou canst.	He shall.
He does.	You may.	I will.	You can.	Thou art.
I did.	He might.	They had.	They could.	He hath.
We were.	I am.	She has.	It is.	You should.

358. The present tense of a verb is the form that generally refers to present time.

359. About twenty verbs cannot be changed in this way, and the time is, therefore, shown by something besides the form; as —

Now we spread our tents. We spread them yesterday.

In such cases we may call the form present or past according to its use.

360. The present tense is sometimes used of what is past or future to make it seem present or distinct; as —

. In the fifteenth century a new era begins.
We leave the city tomorrow.

361. In form the present tense is like the simple infinitive, or root, from which all other forms are derived.

362. The past tense of a verb is the form that generally refers to past time.

363. The common or regular way of changing the present to the past form is by adding ed. Thus:

I called; I borrowed; I waited.

But in a number of the oldest verbs the change appears in the middle of the word, whether anything is added or not. Thus:

stand, stood; fall, fell; see, saw.

Exercise 180. — Write the present tense of —

Patted; played; began; could; caught; worked; stood; walked; chose; came; waited; bit; tried; crept; struck; blew; broke; flew; gazed; brought; burnt; whipped; did; bled; dug.

Write the past tense of as many of these as you can:

Work; write; make; wear; think; till; love; take; strike; see; pour; steal; speak; sit; sell; run; ride; guess; smoke; give; part; drive; dream; ask; try.

2. NUMBER AND PERSON

364. Other differences in the forms of a verb depend on what its subject is. Thus, in the present tense we say —

I	}	go	He	}	goes
We			She
You			It
They			The man
The men
		stay			stays

using a special form made by adding s or es whenever the subject is a third-singular pronoun or a singular noun.

365. As this special form is never used except with a subject denoting the third person and the singular number, it is called the third-singular form. It is also called the s-form, because it always ends in s.

Exercise 181. — Use every one of these words in succession to fill each blank, and spell the third-singular form of the verb:

I, you, he, we, you, she, they, we, it, the men, the man.

— go,	— find,	— perch,	— deny,	— smash,
— wish,	— ply,	— crouch,	— watch,	— cry,
— have,	— do,	— row,	— lie,	— lay.

366. Changes to suit the person and number of the subject were once much more common than now, and two old-style forms, such as we see in the Bible, are still used, especially in prayer and in poetry. Thus:

(a) With thou as subject the verb takes the ending st or est in both the present and past indicative tenses. For example:

Thou waitest. Thou waitedst. Thou goest. Thou stoodst; and (b) instead of the customary third-singular form in s, a form ending in th or eth may be used in the present tense. Thus:

She giveth. He goeth. The wind bloweth.

EXCEPTIONS. — The verb be keeps many of its old changes of form, as shown in § 415.

Dare (meaning venture), and need, sometimes take no added s with a third-singular subject. Thus:

He dare not go.	He dares you to do it.
He need not stay.	He needs a coat.

367. Since the changes in the form of the verb are made according to the meaning of the subject, the verb is said "to agree with its subject."

3. VERBAL NOUNS AND VERBAL ADJECTIVES

368. By inflecting a verb in these different ways, we change the form, the application, and sometimes the use of it; but so long as it can form the predicate of a sentence, it still remains a verb.

We now come to certain other verbal forms that cannot be used as a predicate, and therefore are not verbs like the rest.

Exercise 182. — 1. Which of these verbal words and expressions cannot by themselves form the predicate of a sentence?

grow	took	broken	flying	give running	goes	flew	fallen	grown come	worked	playing	to take	to wait

2. Which may be nouns, and which adjectives?

369. From almost every verb are formed two special kinds of verbal words having the use of other parts of speech.

Thus, besides the true verbs drives, drove, we have two nouns, driving and (to) drive, that name the action expressed by the verb; as in —

Driving is pleasant; I like to drive; and two adjectives, driving and driven, that describe either the actor or the receiver of the action; as in —

A man driving; Snow driven by the wind.

370. Such nouns and adjectives as these differ from all others that are derived from verbs, since they may be formed from almost any verb; and, what is still more important to notice, they may have the same modifiers that verbs have. Thus:

(1) The nouns, if derived from transitive verbs, may take an object. As in —

Driving fast horses is pleasant; and they always may be modified by an adverb. As in —

I like to drive slowly.

Here driving and to drive are used as subject and object, respectively; but, like verbs, they express action as passing over to something else, or as going on in different ways.

(2) So with adjectives, we may say — a man beating a dog, or a dog cruelly beaten.

Here beating and beaten describe the man and the dog like adjectives, and are modified like verbs. There is no assertion in either expression, yet we think of the man as acting and of the dog as acted upon, as much as if a verb were used.

Exercise 183. — Find all the verbal nouns and verbal adjectives.

- | | |
|--|------------------------------------|
| 1. Horses drawing stone. | 6. Ducks shot by a hunter. |
| 2. Stone drawn by horses. | 7. To work is to win. |
| 3. To draw well requires skill. | 8. Telling lies hardens the heart. |
| 4. A good teacher of drawing. | 9. The house standing back from |
| 5. Ducks swimming in the lake. | the road. |
| 10. Fields plowed in the early fall. | |
| 11. An empty boat carried over the falls. | |
| + 12. A long-boat carrying several shipwrecked passengers. | |
| 13. The habit of smoking tobacco or of playing with fire. | |
| 14. To waste in youth is to want in age. | |

371. 1. The first of the two nouns is the root or simplest form of the verb, either with or without the sign to before it; as —

(to) drive, (to) spin, (to) sleep, (to) walk.

This is called the root infinitive, or simply the infinitive.

2. The second verbal noun is formed with the ending ing; as — driving, spinning, sleeping, walking.

This is called the infinitive in -ing, or Gerund. It is often treated in all respects like a noun (§185), having similar uses and modifiers. Thus:

(Rapid) driving (in crowded streets) is dangerous.

Exercise 184. — 1. Select the infinitives, and, if possible, tell how they are used.

1. These are wagons for carrying corn. 2. Writing letters is making signs. 3. Have you ever tried writing with your left hand? 4. We ran to the rescue. 5. We ran to rescue them. 6. To write letters easily is an accomplishment. 7. He came to stay here for his health. 8. He has tried to walk without his crutches. 9. His physician forbade him to run after eating. 10. I desire to go. I wish to go. I will go.

2. When possible, substitute the other infinitive for the one given in these sentences.

3. Form the infinitive of any ten verbs.

372. An Infinitive is a verbal noun. It names the action or condition expressed by the verb, and takes the same complements and modifiers.

NOTE. — The word "infinitive" means infinite, unlimited. It is applied to these forms because in them the idea of the verb is not limited as to person and number.

✓ 373. The two adjectives found among the inflected forms of verbs are called Participles.

✓ 374. One participle describes a person or thing as continuing an action. It is called the active or present participle, and always ends in ing; as — driving, spinning, sleeping, walking.

375. The other participle is called the passive or past participle, because what it describes is regarded either (a) as having received the action expressed by the verb; as in —

Threads are spun; Cattle are driven;

or else (b) as having completed some action; as in —

One who has walked or slept.

This participle usually ends in t, d, or n.

NOTE. — The names imperfect and perfect are also used.

Exercise 185. — Select the participles. Tell from what verb each is derived, what each describes, and what its modifiers are.

A fisherman leaving the shore pulled out to the sunken reef in a boat kept for his use. Hearing a ship pounding on the rocks, he rowed till he could see the crew bound or clinging half-frozen to the shattered masts. They were partly hidden by the fog, and partly by patches of torn sails.

376. A participle is a verbal adjective. It shares or participates in the nature of a verb and of an adjective.

377. These verbal nouns and adjectives are given along with other verb forms, because —

- (1) They are made from almost every verb;
- (2) Most verb phrases are formed by help of them; and —
- (3) They take the same kind of complements and modifiers that verbs take.

CONJUGATION

378. The Conjugation of a verb is the orderly arrangement of its forms.

“Conjugation” means yoking or joining together.

379. We shall find that there are commonly but seven or eight changes made in the verb by inflection. Thus, the common inflected forms of wait and give are —

ROOT	S-FORM	PAST TENSE	PRESENT PART.	PERF. PART.
wait,	waits,	waited,	waiting,	(waited).
give,	gives,	gave,	giving,	given.

Besides these common forms we have the solemn forms — waitest, waitedst, waiteth: givest, gavest, giveth.

380. Rules for Spelling. — I. The third-singular form of the present indicative is made by adding s to the root-form, or es, when needed for the sound. If the verb ends in y after a consonant, y is changed to i, and es is added. [See § 201.] As —

Make, makes; go, goes; wish, wishes; defy, defies.

EXCEPTION. Have becomes has.

II. Silent e is dropped before the suffixes er, ed, ing, etc. As —

Hope, hoped, hoping, hopest, hopeth.

EXCEPTIONS. Hoe, shoe, toe, dye, singe, and tinge retain the e before ing. Die becomes dying; have becomes had.

III. Monosyllables, and dissyllables accented on the second syllable, if they end in a single consonant after a single vowel, double the final consonant before er, ed, ing, etc. As —

Sad, sadder, saddest; hop, hopped, hopping; refer, referred.

IV. To verbs ending in ic, k is added before all endings but s. As —

Traffic, trafficked, trafficking.

Exercise 186. — Write in columns the five common forms of these verbs. Thus:

ROOT	S-FORM	PAST TENSE	IMPERF. PART.	PERF. PART.
try,	tries,	tried,	trying,	tried.
rob,	robs,	robbed,	robbing,	robbed.

[See Appendix I for forms that you do not know.]

Omit; do; carpet; dry; defer; wrap; befit; submit; behave; echo; differ; bar; benefit; live; merit; ship; glorify; have; equip; regret; save; slap; concur; gaze; search; quit; compel; gossip; sing; singe.

381. Regular and Irregular Verbs. — We see that the two verbs wait and give are changed in different ways. The past tense and the perfect participle of wait are formed alike, that is by adding ed. Thus:

wait, waited, waited.

But in give these two parts are unlike, being formed without the use of ed. Thus:

give, gave, given.

Elsewhere the changes are the same, and in order to conjugate any verb we commonly need to know only how these two forms are made.

382. Most verbs * form the past tense and the perfect participle by adding ed to the root, and are called Regular Verbs. All other verbs are called Irregular. For example:

	ROOT- INF.	PAST TENSE	PERF. PART.		ROOT- INF.	PAST TENSE	PERF. PART.
Regular	{ wait,	waited,	waited.	Irregular	{ give,	gave,	given.
	{ call,	called,	called.		{ fall,	fell,	fallen.

383. These three forms, the infinitive, the past tense, and the past participle, are called the Principal Parts of the verb, because when they are known, the whole conjugation of the verb can be given.

384. Double Forms. — Some verbs have both regular and irregular forms for the past tense, or for the perfect participle, or for both. Sometimes these forms differ in meaning, and frequently in use, but generally either may be used.

Such verbs are called redundant.

A few verbs like must and ought lack one or more of their principal parts. They are called defective verbs.

[For a list of irregular verbs, see Appendix I.]

Exercise 187. — 1. I — it now. 2. I — it yesterday. 3. I have — it today.

Fill the blanks with the principal parts of the following verbs:

Bear; beat; begin; bite; blow; break; bring; buy; catch; choose; do; draw; drink; drive; eat; find; forget; forsake; freeze; give; have; hide; know; lay; leave; make; mean; rend; ride; ring; see; seek; set; shake; show; slay; smite; sow; speak; spin; spring; strike; take; throw; weave; wear; wring; write.

Exercise 188. — 1. They may —. 2. They — yesterday. 3. They had already —.

* All but about two hundred of the thousands of verbs in the language.

Use the principal parts of the following verbs to fill the blanks:

Become; bid; come; crow; fall; flee; fly; grow; lie; rise; raise; shine; shrink; sing; sit; slide; stand; steal; stride; strive; swear; ~~swim~~; think; tread.

4. MODE

385. If we study verbs in sentences we find them used to predicate in several ways or modes. Thus, they may be used —

1. To command; As, Be ready; Wish with me.
2. (a) To question; As, Is he ready? Who wishes this?
 (b) To assert positively; As, I am ready; She wishes it.
3. To say something doubtfully, as if only thought of; As —

If it be there I will bring it; If I were ready I would go.

386. It was once the custom to use in such cases quite different forms of the verb called Modes, to show the manner or mode in which a person spoke. Comparatively few of these forms remain; and hardly any of them, or even the phrases that have replaced them, are now invariably used in any one way. Still it is customary to say that verbs are in the indicative, imperative, or subjunctive modes, according as they represent facts, commands, or only thoughts.

✓ 387. Indicative Mode. — The most common of these modes is the indicative; for generally our statements are presented as facts, or at least we assume them to be facts.

⤵ 388. A verb is in the Indicative Mode when used —

1. To state something as a fact.
2. To ask a simple question.

The verbs in the following sentences are all in the indicative mode. Try to tell why.

He goes quickly. Does she wish it? Fish can live only in the water. We shall rise at daybreak. You may go now. Can you analyze the sentence? If she was there I failed to see her. If he comes — as he probably will — I shall meet him. If he was poor he was honest. I could have gone yesterday. Perhaps it is true.

389. Imperative Mode. — A verb is in the imperative mode when it expresses a command, a request, or an entreaty. As in —

Go quickly. Come with me. Do be honest.

390. A command, etc., is generally given to some person or persons addressed by name, or who are so well known as not to need mention, and so the subject of the imperative is commonly omitted. It is always of the second person, and may be singular or plural. It is sometimes expressed for the sake of emphasis. As —

Hear me, my friends. Go thou and do likewise.

In form the imperative is always the simple root of the verb, and it is always of the present tense.

In such expressions as Thou shalt not steal, You will go now, You must pass out at once, the indicative mode is used instead of the imperative for much the same purpose.

391. Subjunctive Mode. — The subjunctive mode expresses not what is real and actual, but rather what is only thought of as a possibility.

The distinctive forms that characterize it are giving way to indicative forms, and are little used now-a-days in spoken language. They abound, however, in literature, and are still carefully used by discriminating writers. It is well to practice the use of some of them.

392. A verb in the Subjunctive Mode * is used to express —

1. What is uncertain, and to be decided in the future;
2. A supposition that is contrary to fact;
3. A wish.

* For a fuller discussion of the Subjunctive, see Appendix I.

Some verbs in the following sentences are in the subjunctive mode. Tell which and why.

1. Though he be dead we shall find him.
Even if he fail he will not despair.
If the wind be fair, the ship may sail.
2. If he were willing I would help him.
If he were rich, he would give liberally.
Were she able she would come to me.
3. I wish I were well. O that he were here!
Thy kingdom come. Long live the King!

393. The subjunctive is generally found in subjoined or subordinate clauses introduced by if, though, unless, except, lest, etc. Not all clauses thus introduced, however, contain subjunctives.

394. Subjunctive forms differ from the indicative in dropping all personal endings.* Thus:

Indicative: goes, stays, risest, sawest, keepeth, lovedst.
Subjunctive: go, stay, rise, saw, keep, loved.

This becomes more apparent when some of the forms of be are placed in contrast. Thus:

Present Indicative:	{ I am, We are,	Thou art, You are,	He is, They are.
Present Subjunctive:	{ I be, We be,	Thou be, You be,	He be, They be.
Past Indicative:	{ I was, We were,	Thou wast, You were,	He was, They were.
Past Subjunctive:	{ I were, We were,	Thou wert*, You were,	He were, They were.

395. Modes are inflected or phrase forms of verbs which show the manner of asserting.

* The form wert (with thou) in the past tense of the verb be is the only exception.

Exercise 189. — Select from the following sentences five verbs that express a command; three that express a wish or a supposition contrary to the fact; three that state something as uncertain and to be decided in the future; three that assert a condition assumed to be a fact; five that state facts positively:

1. Clouds bring rain. 2. Dare to do right. 3. I wish my father were here. 4. The eclipse was total. 5. A robin built its nest in our elm. 6. If I am not paid, I work hard. 7. Speak kindly to the erring. 8. He would be a spendthrift if he were rich. 9. If he was severe, he was not unjust. 10. The crew furlled the sails. 11. Be just, and fear not. 12. Improve your opportunity before it be lost. 13. I should go even if the danger were greater. 14. If the truth be known, no harm can result. 15. Though she was there, I did not see her. 16. If it be fair, we shall go.

D. VERB PHRASES

SUBSTITUTES FOR INFLECTED FORMS

396. English verbs have no changes in form other than those already mentioned. In some languages the number of forms is much greater; but in English all other variations in time, mode, and so on, must be expressed in a round-about way by what are called Verb phrases.

397. Verb phrases are made by using some root infinitive or participle as the complement of another verb. As —

He will go.	They have waited.	She may write.
It is coming.	It was built.

398. The verbs that are used with infinitives and participles merely to make verb phrases, are called Auxiliary (i.e., helping) verbs.

399. The Principal Parts of the Auxiliary verbs are —

PRESENT	PAST	PERF. PART.	PRESENT	PAST	PERF. PART.
shall	should	—	must	—	—
will	would	—	do	did	done
may	might	—	be	was	been can	could	—	have	had	had

The indicative forms used in the solemn or poetic style, with thou as subject, are —

PRESENT	PAST	PRESENT	PAST
shalt	shouldst	canst	couldst
wilt	wouldst	dost, doest	didst
mayest } mayst }	mightest	art	wast, wert
		hast	hadst

1. FUTURE TENSE

Phrases made with Shall and Will

400. When we wish to predict that anything is to happen in time to come, we say —

*I shall take ; He will take ; **

using the present tense of shall and of will to help us in expressing the idea of taking as future.

401. Future Tense phrases are formed with shall or will and a root infinitive, and denote future time.

For other uses of shall and will see §§ 440–443.

402. The parts of any verb phrase may be separated by other words; as in —

He will not go.

We shall, in all probability, fail.

Will she not sing?

Shall you and your friends remain?

* Shall or will is the verb here, and the infinitive take is the object of it. The phrase that they together make is called the future tense of the indicative; for the auxiliaries have lost much of their original meaning, and are now little more than signs of the future tense.

Exercise 190. — Make sentences, using the future tense of each of these forms:

Went; caught; drove; blown; hid; trod; rejoiced; sang; sprung; said; lied; lain; came; flew; flow.

2. PERFECT TENSES

Have as an Auxiliary

403. I. Present Perfect. — Whenever we wish to speak of an action as completed at the present time, we do not say —

I buy it today, but I have bought it today — using the present tense of the auxiliary have, and the perfect participle of some verb. So, too —

The town has grown this year. It has occurred twice this century.

404. II. Past Perfect. — In speaking of an action as completed at some definite past time, we use the past form had with the perfect participle. Thus:

They had gone before I arrived.

405. III. Future Perfect. — If we wish to speak of an action as completed at some future time, we use the future tense, shall or will have, with the perfect participle, and say —

The sun will have risen before our arrival.

406. Phrases that denote completed or perfected actions are called Perfect Tenses. They are formed by combining the perfect participle of any verb with the various tenses of "have."

407. We see then that by inflection and by the use of auxiliaries we form six tenses; namely —

Present: I hear.

Present Perfect: I have heard.

Past: I heard.

Past Perfect: I had heard.

Future: I shall hear.

Future Perfect: I shall have heard.

Exercise 191. — Tell whether the verb shows present, past, or future time, and give the corresponding perfect form of that tense; i.e., the perfect tense phrase:

1. He sings well. 2. He wrote yesterday. 3. They will go to-morrow. 4. They could not wait. 5. They should obey their parents. 6. She had an instructor. 7. We shall set out on his return. 8. Can it be true? 9. What could he answer? 10. Would he welcome you?

3. POTENTIAL FORMS

May, can, and must used as Auxiliaries

408. May, can, and must are used with root infinitives to make what are called Potential phrases, that express what is possible, conditional, or obligatory.

➤ May implies permission, can implies ability or power, must implies obligation or necessity; but, as they often lose their proper meaning and become mere auxiliaries, they are given as parts of the conjugation of the verb that they help.

409. The present forms, may, can, and must generally give a present meaning. Thus:

You may go; i.e., you have permission to go.

We can give; i.e., we are able to give.

The engine can draw the train; i.e., it has the power to draw it.

I must go; i.e., I am obliged to go.

It must be sold; i.e., the sale of it is necessary.

410. May and can sometimes have a future or subjunctive meaning as in —

You may slip; i.e., perhaps you will slip.

I shall come if I can; i.e., if it be possible.

411. The past forms might and could may give a past meaning to the phrase; as in —

He could not wait; i.e., he was not able to wait; or they may give a subjunctive meaning, as of something merely thought of. Thus:

Even if he were here, he could not wait.

He might be useful, though hard to manage.

412. Should, the past tense of shall, is sometimes used with a present meaning to denote a duty or obligation; as in —

You should do as you are bidden. [See § 445.]

413. Potential phrases denote permission, power, obligation, or necessity. They are formed by using the auxiliaries may, can, must, might, could, would, or should, with the root infinitive.

Exercise 192. — Using the infinitive of each of the following words, make sentences containing potential phrases, and tell whether they denote permission, power, obligation, etc. :

Speak; borne; broken; chid; drew; feel; sat; froze; slain; shod; smote; swung; swept; thrust; raised; rose.

Conjugation of the Irregular Verb Give

414. Below will be found the common inflected and phrase forms of the verb give in the various modes and tenses.

The first column contains the singular, and the second column the plural forms. The figures 1, 2, 3, indicate the person. The solemn forms with Thou as subject will be found elsewhere.

Principal Parts. — Present, give; Past, gave; Perfect Participle, given.

Conjugation of the Irregular Verb Be

415. The verb be not only keeps many of the old forms, but is really made up of three different verbs — the infinitives and participles be, being, been, from one root; the present tense, am, are, etc., from another; and the past was, were, from a third. Its inflected and phrase forms are as follows:

Indicative Mode

Principal Parts: Present, be. Past, was. Perfect Participle, been.

	I am	We	} are

Exercise 193. — 1. Fill the blanks with the proper present indicative forms of be.

I — well.

We — well.

She — well.

Thou — well.

You — well.

One — well.

He — well.

They — well.

Some — well.

2. Fill the blanks with the proper past indicative forms of be.

I — absent.

We — absent.

The king — present.

You — absent.

They — absent.

The princes — present.

She — absent.

Roy — present.

Many — present.

She — absent.

Boys — present.

Thou — present.

3. Fill the blanks with present and past subjunctive forms of be. Use if.

4. EMPHATIC VERB PHRASES

416. Do as an Auxiliary. — Instead of the simple present or past He tries, I tried, Try, we may say more emphatically —

He does try,

I did try,

Do try,

They do try,

You did try,

using the verb do, and the infinitive try as the object of do.

Here do seems to have lost its ordinary meaning, perform, and serves only as an auxiliary to make an emphatic form of the verb try.

417. When we ask or deny, as in interrogative or negative sentences, these phrases are almost always used instead of the simple forms. Thus, we usually say —

Does he try? Did I try? He does not try. I did not try. (Not Tries he? Tried I? He tried not, etc.)

Exercise 194. — Change the following expressions to the emphatic, the negative, and the interrogative forms:

1. They learn. 2. We make hats. 3. They settled the country.
4. The plan works well. 5. Their journey ended. 6. He had courage.
7. Time brings changes. 8. We drew the sword.

5. PROGRESSIVE VERB PHRASES

418. Be as an Auxiliary. — To express what is customary or habitual, we use the simpler forms of the verb; as —

She paints, He studied law, They will preach;

but to represent an action as continuing or actually in progress, we use still another form of phrase. Thus:

She is painting. He was studying law. They will be preaching.

Here the verb be has for its complement not an ordinary adjective, but the imperfect or active participle of the verb, and the two together make what is called a Progressive phrase.

419. A Progressive verb phrase represents an action as continuing or in progress.

It is formed by using the active participle with the proper tense of the verb be.

Exercise 195. — Change these verbs to progressive verb phrases:

Goes; went; has gone; will go; had gone; will have gone; dye; must go; may rise; lies; lays; can sit; will wait; walked; could see; drew; shall fix; fought; had done; may have seen.

6. PASSIVE VERB PHRASES, OR VERBS IN THE PASSIVE VOICE

Exercise 196. — 1. In each sentence tell the word that shows who or what performs the action. 2. Tell the word that shows who or what receives the action, or is affected by it. 3. Select each subject that represents the actor. 4. Select those subjects that name the receiver of the action. 5. What difference do you notice in the meaning of each two sentences? 6. In their form?

1. { The breeze fills the sails.
 { The sails are filled by the breeze.
2. { We celebrated the victory.
 { The victory was celebrated by us.

3. { Messengers will carry the news.
 { The news will be carried by messengers.
4. { The government should protect the Indians.
 { The Indians should be protected by the government.
5. { Congress has enacted a new tariff law.
 { A new tariff law has been enacted by Congress.

420. In our study of transitive verbs we have found that they represent some person or thing as acting upon some other person or thing. As —

The sergeant carries the flag.

Dewey captured Manila.

The angler has caught the trout.

In these sentences the subject names the actor, and the object names the thing acted upon.

421. Without changing the meaning of such sentences at all we may change their form by making the receiver of the action the subject of the verb, while the actor appears in a prepositional phrase. Thus:

The flag was carried [by the sergeant].

Manila was captured [by Dewey].

The trout has been caught [by the angler].

422: When the subject of a transitive verb names the actor, the verb is said to be active or in the active voice, but when the subject names the one acted upon the verb is said to be passive or in the passive voice.

Let us see how a verb in the passive voice differs from one in the active voice.

423. We know that the perfect participle of transitive verbs may have a passive meaning; as — driven, spoken, hired;

and if we use this participle as an adjective complement with different tenses of the verb be, as in —

I am driven, It was spoken, You will be hired — we form verb phrases which represent the subject not as acting, but as acted upon, and which are, therefore, called passive verb phrases, and the verbs are in the passive voice.

424. A transitive verb in the passive voice — or a passive verb phrase — is one that represents its subject as receiving the action.

It is formed by using a passive participle with any tense of the verb be.

The active form brings the actor into prominence; the passive, the receiver of the action. The passive form is generally used when the actor cannot or need not be named. As —

The watch was stolen. Lost opportunities cannot be regained.

425. In this way any kind of verb phrases may be made passive. Thus:

I may see, or I may be seen.

They might have stopped, or They might have been stopped.

Even progressive phrases are sometimes found in the passive form. As in —

The prisoner was being tried for theft.

The question is being very thoroughly discussed.

"The house is being built," may be awkward, but it is allowable and exact, and surely better than "in process of construction."

426. Complements of Passive Phrases. — Some transitive verbs, as we know, take both an object and an objective complement. When such verbs are used in the passive voice the object of the active form becomes the subject, while the objective complement remains and becomes the subjective complement of the passive verb phrase. Thus:

Love makes labor (light) = Labor is made light [by love].

The porter found the safe (open) = The safe was found open [by the porter].

They chose him (captain) = He was chosen captain [by them].

427. When transitive verbs that take both a direct and an indirect object are made passive, either object may become the subject of the passive verb phrase, while the other is retained as an object. It is called the retained object, either direct or indirect. Thus:

$$\begin{aligned} \text{He gave [me] money} &= \begin{cases} \text{Money was given [me] [by him].} \\ \text{I was given money [by him].} \end{cases} \\ \text{I forgave [him] his fault} &= \begin{cases} \text{His fault was forgiven [him] [by me].} \\ \text{He was forgiven his fault [by me].} \end{cases} \end{aligned}$$

428. A few intransitive verbs, that, in the active form, are followed by a preposition and its object, are sometimes made passive. In such cases the preposition, as an adverbial modifier, becomes almost a part of the verb, and its former object becomes the subject of the passive phrase. [See § 521]. Thus:

No one had thought of this. This had not been thought of.
Our friends laughed at us. We were laughed at by them.

Exercise 197. — Change each verb in these sentences into either the passive or the active form, without changing the meaning:

1. The engine draws the train. 2. The story has been told by several writers. 3. England taxed the colonies unjustly. 4. Louisiana was sold by France in 1803. 5. Marco Polo tells us strange stories. 6. The Mississippi was discovered by De Soto in 1541. 7. The prudent never waste time nor money. 8. The mortgage will be foreclosed by the executor. 9. Fire has destroyed the poor man's house. 10. Gold is purchased for coinage by the government. 11. Every patriot will defend the flag. 12. Friendship should be strengthened by adversity. 13. Would he believe the truth? 14. Paris had been besieged by the Prussians in 1871. 15. Heaven is not mounted to on wings of dreams. 16. Somebody will probably attend to the matter. 17. Will any one interfere with his rights? 18. The sentinel was found asleep at his post.

Conjugation of Progressive and Passive Verb Phrases

429. We have seen that progressive verb phrases are formed by adding active participles — driving, doing, fighting — to the various tenses of be, and that passive phrases are formed by adding passive participles — driven, done, fought — to the same forms of be. Since the full conjugation of be has been given on page 166, progressive and passive phrases can easily be formed by adding the proper participle, as in the following:

Principal Parts: Present, drive. Past, drove. Perfect Part., driven.

Indicative Mode

Present: am, is, are driving — driven.
Past: was, were, driving — driven.
Future: shall, or will be driving — driven.
Present Perfect: has or have been driving — driven.
Past Perfect: had been driving — driven.
Future Perfect: shall, or will have been driving — driven.

Potential Phrases:

Present: may, can, must be driving — driven.
Past: might, could, would, should be driving — driven.
Present Perfect: may, can, must have been driving — driven.
Past Perfect: might, could, would, should have been driving — driven.

Subjunctive Mode

Present: be driving — driven.
Past: were driving — driven.

Infinitives

Simple: (to) be driving — driven.
Perfect: to have been driving — driven.

Gerunds

Simple: being driving — driven.
Perfect: having been driving — driven.

Participles

Pres. Perf. Passive: having been driven.
Prog. Active: having been driving.
Prog. Passive: being driven.

430. Conjugation of Solemn Forms. — These forms are used in sacred writings and in prayer with the subject Thou. In a verb phrase the first auxiliary only has the personal ending. Forms in eth are used with a third-singular subject in the indicative present only.

The verb be, Indicative. Thou art, wast or wert, hast been, hadst been, shalt or wilt be, mayst or mayest, or canst be, mightest, couldst, wouldst, or shouldst be. Subjunctive. If thou wert.

Other verbs. Thou dost know. Thou doest well. Thou knowest, knewest, hast known. Thou lovest, lovedst, hast loved, etc.

He doth ask. He doeth. He knoweth, loveth.

Exercise 198. — 1. Arrange in columns (1) potential phrases; (2) progressive phrases; (3) passive phrases; (4) emphatic phrases; (5) s-forms; (6) present perfect phrases; (7) past perfect phrases.

Go; goes; went; have gone; has gone; will go; do go; ~~did~~ go; does go; are lost; are losing; was; were; were he; may be; may be seen; can be singing; must sew; could sew; sews; has done; has been done; have been doing; might be; could be heard.

Might be hearing; should write; should be written; should have been writing; is growing; was growing; can have been growing; would sign; had been; had brought; had been brought.

Stands; stood; stand; did stand; was standing; will come; shall be coming; will have lost; will be lost; has been lost; to be; is written; to be made; making; having made; being worn; to have been wearing; has had; had had; did do; does do; would have had.

2. Give the composition of each phrase; i.e., tell of what verb forms it is composed. Thus:

"Would have been broken" is made up of the past would, the infinitive have, the perfect participle been, and the passive participle broken.

Exercise 199. — Write the following-named forms of bring, lay, tread, wear, obey, come, write, do, buy, have:

1. Present indicative progressive, third-singular. 2. Past indicative passive. 3. Future indicative. 4. Future indicative passive. 5. Present perfect indicative progressive, third-singular. 6. Past perfect potential passive. 7. Present indicative emphatic. 8. Past potential passive. 9. Present perfect indicative passive. 10. Present indicative (with subject "he"). 11. Present subjunctive (with "he" for subject).

431. How to Parse a Verb. — A verb or verb phrase is parsed by telling its 1. tense; 2. mode; (3. phrase-form); 4. kind; 5. principal parts; (6. number-form, if peculiar); and 7. subject.

NOTE. — This order of statement, though not material, is a convenient one, since it presents the facts as they appear in the successive elements of a verb phrase.

432. Forms for Parsing. — [To be varied at the option of the teacher.]

1. [⁺[When] (my) ship comes [in]] I shall be rich.

2. He spoke [loud] [⁺[that they might hear him]].

3. [⁺[After we had been drifting [three days]] (a) sail was seen.

comes is the present indicative of the complete verb "come, came, come" s-form with the third-singular subject ship.

shall be is the future indicative of the copulative verb "be, was, been"; its subject is I.

spoke is the past indicative of the complete verb "speak, spoke, spoken"; its subject is he.

might hear is a past potential * of the transitive verb "hear, heard, heard"; its subject is they.

had been drifting is the past perfect indicative progressive of the complete verb "drift, drifted, drifted"; its subject is we.

was seen is a past indicative passive verb phrase formed from the transitive verb "see, saw, seen"; was is used with the third-singular subject sail.

* Potential phrases have sometimes a subjunctive and sometimes an indicative meaning; but it is not expected that all learners will discriminate between the two uses. See Appendix I.

Exercise 200. — Parse the verbs in these sentences.

1. Where shall you be?
2. It cannot be found.
3. How busy you are.
4. Go quickly to the rear.
5. Be careful how you speak.
6. The sun might have risen.
7. No one has yet seen it.
8. Would he go if he were I?
9. Were not the drums beating?
10. You should have gone at once.
11. The mill can never grind again with the water that is past.
12. We might have been called.
13. Nothing must be assumed.
14. The train will have gone before he arrives.
15. Could he have fled alone?
16. Is it rising now?
17. Did he write at your bidding?
18. Do not be discouraged by trifles.
19. Come ye in peace, or come ye in war?
20. Ask, and it shall be given you.
21. Could it not have been found sooner?
22. I wish I were sailing the seas.
23. Have you had enough?
24. How do you do this morning?
25. He had had the money for a week.
26. I am expecting to see him soon.
27. Take heed lest he fall.
28. If he were going he would take it.
29. When he next doth ride abroad, May I be there to see.
30. You could not have been listening, or you would have heard me.
31. There never has been another such man.
32. Might it not have been done?

Exercise 201. — If additional exercise is needed the verbs found on pages 41 and 71 may be parsed.

E. DIRECTIONS FOR THE USE OF VERB FORMS

434. Wrong forms of the verb are very common. It is a prominent word, inflected more than any other part of speech, and hence leads one who is careless to make many conspicuous blunders.

435. Some of the worst mistakes are made by substituting one of the principal parts for another.

For example: Having as principal parts, pres. do, past did, perf. part. done, we should say in stating a past fact, "He did the work," not "He done the work"; but in making a present perfect phrase we should say, "He has done the work," not "He has did the work."

436. Principal Parts Confused. — I. Do not use the perfect participle as a substitute for the past tense.

II. Never use the past tense instead of a perfect participle in making a verb phrase.

Exercise 202. — Select the proper form of the verbs, and give the reason for your choice.

1. Who (did, done) it?
2. Soon it had (sank, sunk) to rise no more.
3. The pears were all (shook, shaken) off by the wind.
4. This lace was

(wove, woven) in France. 5. He (ran, run) all the way. 6. They (come, came) in late yesterday. 7. He soon (begun, began) to be weary. 8. Charles Jones (swum, swam) across the river. 9. I (saw, seen) that yours was wrong. 10. He has (risen, rose) from poverty to wealth. 11. Our club was never (beat, beaten) before. 12. If I had been (showed, shown) I should know how to do it. 13. She had (tore, torn) it off.

14. I (seen, saw) him yesterday. 15. You might have (chose, chosen) something better. 16. Our friends (come, came) last week. 17. You must do as you are (bid, bade, bidden). 18. Some (drank, drunk) too much. 19. What evil has (befallen, befell) them? 20. She may have (went, gone) to Europe. 21. Have you ever (sang, sung) this tune? 22. Have they (drank, drunk) it all? 23. Have they (broke, broken) out the roads yet?

Exercise 203. — Give the principal parts of the verb; tell which should be used, and why.

1. Have you never (shrink) from your duty? 2. She may have been (smite) down. 3. His signature was (write) indistinctly. 4. It cannot have been (steal). 5. You might have (take) more pains. 6. David (sling) the stone, and (smite) him on the forehead. 7. They have (strive) to do their best. 8. Intemperance has (slay) its thousands. 9. My directions were (forget). 10. The pond was (freeze) over. 11. Some one has (break) my pen.

437. Some verbs have somewhat similar forms that are liable to be confounded. Especial care must be taken in using them.

438. Verbs Confused. — Do not use one verb for another of similar form but of different meaning.

Exercise 204. — 1. Learn the principal parts of these verbs, and their meaning:

PRESENT	PAST	ACTIVE PART.	PERFECT PART.
lie (rest)	lay (rested)	lying (resting)	lain (rested)
lay (place)	laid (placed)	laying (placing)	laid (placed)
sit (rest)	sat (rested)	sitting (resting)	sat (rested)
set (place)	set (placed)	setting (placing)	set (placed)

2. Fill the blanks with the appropriate form of lie or lay, and its meaning. Thus:

"I laid (or placed) it on the table, and there it lies (or rests).

1. Where did you — it? 2. How long has it — there? 3. At what wharf does your yacht —? 4. It — on the grass yesterday. 5. It has — there for years. 6. They have — the corner-stone. 7. He — in bed till nine o'clock. 8. She has been — there all day. 9. The ship — to during the storm. 10. A thousand miles of pipe have been —.

11. She now — sleeping quietly. 12. We — over two days in Montreal. 13. — down, Bruno! 14. He — it carefully away in his safe, and there it has — ever since. 15. — it on the table, and let it — there. 16. They have been — new tracks. 17. Has it been — there long? 18. He was — by the brook. 19. The body — in state three days. 20. The city — on the left bank.

3. Fill the following blanks with the appropriate form of sit or set, and its meaning:

1. Come into the — room. 2. The mother-bird is — in her nest. 3. We — out twelve elms last arbor-day. 4. Where did he —? 5. I — it on the shelf, and there it — now. 6. Won't you — here? 7. He — motionless for an hour. 8. I have been — in the arbor while you have been — out your plants. 9. The court will — in June. 10. Was he — there then?

439. Improper Forms. — Watch your speech and writing for improper verb forms; as, "drawed" for "drew."

Exercise 205. — 1. Select the proper form of the verb for each of these sentences:

1. He has (overdraw) his account. 2. He (throw) his adversary yesterday. 3. His will had been (break). 4. Have you (heat) the water? 5. Has the brook ever (overflow) its banks? 6. I (know) you would (lay, lie) down. 7. When was the horse (shoe) last? 8. He (ain't, isn't) as wise as he appears. 9. The moon has (light) us on our way. 10. Your coat doesn't (set, sit, fit) well.

2. Distinguish between (1) born and borne, (2) durst and dared, (3) hung and hanged, (4) may and can, (5) learn and teach, and use the correct form in the following blanks:

1. He was — in Ohio. He was — to his grave by his friends.
2. The king — not sign the warrant. We — them to leap the brook.
3. Nathan Hale was — as a spy. Have the pictures been securely —?
4. — I shut the window. — you discover the reason?
5. — me to sew. My mother — me long ago.

440. Shall or will. — In the conjugation of the future tenses in § 400, shall is used in the first person, and will in the second and third persons simply as auxiliaries to predict future action or condition. Thus we say —

I shall return Monday.	We shall fail.
I shall grow old, of course.	We shall all die.
You will lose your train.	You will injure yourselves.
You will succeed in time.	You will lose your way.
He will find the journey long.	They will be tired.
My friend will be disappointed.	Carriages will be furnished.

441. I. Simply to foretell that something is going to happen use shall with I, or we, and will with other subjects.

442. Will is used with I or we, and shall with other subjects, to promise, or to show the intention or determination of the speaker, who controls the action whoever may perform it. Thus:

I will pay the bill promptly.	We will help you.
I will be obeyed.	We will refund the money.
You shall go.	You shall vacate the house at once.
He shall be detained.	They shall not escape.

The oft-quoted remark of the drowning Frenchman, "I will drown! I will drown! Nobody shall help me!" illustrates the distinction in the use of shall and will. The poor fellow unwittingly expressed his determination to drown, and warned off his rescuers, instead of saying that he was about to drown and that no one was about to help him.

443. II. To promise, or to express a determination of the speaker, use will with I or we, and shall with other subjects.

Exercise 206. — Tell whether the auxiliary is used to promise, to show determination, or simply to foretell:

1. I shall enter college next year. 2. I will have an education.
3. My friends will help me. 4. Nothing shall stand in my way. 5. I shall answer his letter tomorrow. 6. The letter shall be answered at once. 7. I will walk; no one shall carry me. 8. I shall walk; no one will carry me. 9. You shall go with me if you wish. 10. We will assist you at any time. 11. I shall be punished. He shall be punished. 12. Shall you attend the fair? Will you go with me? 13. I will call on you today, and I shall then say good-bye. 14. Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him. 15. It shall be as you will.

444. III. In questions use the same auxiliary that would be correctly used in the reply. Thus:

If we wish to exact a promise, like "I will wait" or "We will go," we ask "Will you wait or go?" But if we wish one to predict a future action by saying, "I shall go," we must ask, "Shall you go?"

EXCEPTION. — Will is never used in a question with I or we as subject. Thus we say —

"Shall I find you there?" not "Will I," etc.

"Shall we come early?" not "Will we," etc.

445. Should and would follow the same rules as shall and will. Thus:

I should not need your help, and, if I did, I would not ask it.

I asked him whether he should go or stay ("Shall you go or stay?"), and he said he should stay ("I shall stay").

He said that he would go ("I will go").

He feared lest he should fall ("I shall fall").

Exercise 207. — Fill each blank with a form of shall or will, giving the rule that guides you.

1. We — expect to hear from you. 2. If I do not study, I — grow up in ignorance. 3. They — receive the money tomorrow. 4. I was afraid that I — lose my position. 5. We — be pleased to hear that he — soon return. 6. If you telegraph, we — come at once. 7. When — we call? When — you go with me? 8. I fear that we — have unpleasant weather. 9. Where — you be next week? 10. I — like to go to town, and — go if I could. 11. I — be delighted if you — call. 12. I — have been ill if I had gone. 13. — you do as he bids you? — you do what I ask? 14. — you have sold it for that price? 15. I — have asked for more time.

446. Subjunctive forms are peculiar only —

(1) In always omitting the endings s, st, eth, of the corresponding indicative;

(2) In that be is used in place of am, art, is, or are, and were in place of was.*

447. Present Subjunctive forms are now used chiefly in clauses expressing a supposition or a condition to be decided in the future. As —

If he ask a pardon, shall you grant it?

If he go, he will not be missed.

In such clauses, indicative forms are also used by good writers and speakers. [See Appendix I.]

448. Past Subjunctive forms must be used in clauses expressing a supposition or a wish which is contrary to the fact. As in —

If he were ready (but he is not), he could go.

I wish I were well (but I am not).

* Wert takes the place of wast in the solemn form.

Indicative forms must be used to express what is assumed as a fact.
As in —

If he intends to go, he should go now.

Though he is far from well, he is industrious.

If he was poor, he was honest.

Exercise 208. — Fill the blank with what seems the appropriate form of the verb "be," and give the reason for your choice.

1. What would she say if she — asked? 2. I wish I — ten years younger. 3. If the book — in the library, you may take it. 4. If the book — in the library, you might take it. 5. O that it — possible! 6. If he — needy, we should help him. 7. Though he — needy, he will get no help. 8. If he — insane, his actions do not show it. 9. If I — to be defeated, I should still persevere. 10. It would be a great disgrace if he — to fail. 11. I will come tomorrow if the weather — fine. 12. I will call upon him if he — now at home. 13. Take care lest it — injured.

DIRECTIONS FOR THE USE OF THE S-FORM OF VERBS

449. We have learned that the s-form of verbs is never used except in the present tenses of the indicative mode, with subjects that in meaning are of the third person and of the singular number.

450. General Rule. — A third-singular subject, and no other, requires the s-form of the verb.

It will be understood that this rule can apply only to the present indicative tenses.

451. Was. — Use was with I or a third-singular subject, but never with you or any plural subject.

Exercise 209. — Choose the correct form in the following sentences, and justify your choice. Thus:

"He (don't, doesn't) try." The third-singular subject "he" requires does, the s-form of the verb do. Say "He doesn't try."

"There (has, have) never been many of that kind." "Many" is not a third-singular subject, hence the s-form has would be improper. The sentence should read, "There never have been many," etc. Rule: A third-singular subject, and no other, requires the s-form of the verb.

1. Neither of them (were, was) correct. 2. From that source (comes, come) all our troubles. 3. It (don't, doesn't) take long to cross the ocean. 4. (Was, were) you at the concert last night? 5. My scissors (needs, need) sharpening. 6. The memoranda (is, are) lost. 7. There (has, have) been many disappointments on this trip. 8. The fragrance of roses (fill, fills) the air. 9. Each of the states (have, has) two senators. 10. Either of those reasons (are, is)-sufficient. 11. Harder times never (were, was) seen.

12. The six days' work (was, were) ended. 13. What (has, have) become of your friends? 14. The meaning of these words (are, is) easily found. 15. Which of these fractions (are, is) the larger? 16. Everybody (have, has) offered us congratulations. 17. There (is, are) a few more to be had. 18. There (has, have) been several lost on these rocks.

452. It is the meaning rather than the form of a subject that affects the form of the verb. For example, in the sentence —

The Three Clerks was written by Anthony Trollope, the subject is singular in meaning, for it names a single book.

453. 1. Collective nouns are generally singular in meaning. Thus:

The jury renders its verdict. Our regiment loses its colonel.

Here we refer to the collection as a whole or unit, and the s-form of the verb is required.

2. Sometimes, however, we refer to actions of the individuals in the collection. Thus:

The jury have returned to their homes.
The regiment hold different opinions of him.

Here the meaning is plural, and the s-form of the verb would be wrong.

454. Collective Subjects require the s-form of the verb only in referring to the collection as a unit.

Exercise 210. — Tell which form of the verb should be used here, and give your reason:

1. The army (was, were) nearly annihilated.
2. The band (has, have) brought (its, their) instruments.
3. (Is, are) your family well?
4. The committee (was, were) unanimous in the choice.
5. The fleet (was, were) separated.
6. The whole herd ran into the sea and (was, were) drowned.
7. Our club (hold, holds) (its, their) meetings every month.
8. (Have, has) the company broken up?
9. A large number (was, were) dissatisfied.
10. The number present (were, was) large.
11. The United States (is, are) a powerful nation.

CONNECTED SUBJECTS

455. Singular expressions joined by and are generally taken together as a plural subject. Thus:

He and I are going. Industry and perseverance win success.
Making laws and enforcing them are very different.

456. Subjects joined by and. — Use the s-form of the verb with singular subjects connected by and — only

- (1) When they name the same person or thing; or
- (2) When they are preceded by each, every, many a, or no.

For example —

- (1) My friend and helper has deserted me.
- (1) A wheel and axle transmits the power.
- (2) Each lady and gentleman has received a copy.
- (2) Every city and town was visited.

457. Subjects joined by or or nor. Use the s-form of the verb with third-singular subjects connected by or or nor. Thus:

One or the other visits London annually.
Neither money nor influence was needed.

Exercise 211. — Select the proper form of the verb, and justify your selection. Thus:

"Neither hope nor courage remains." The s-form is here required, for the subject consists of two singular nouns, hope and courage, which are joined by nor, and hence are to be taken separately.

"Both hope and courage are needed." The s-form of the verb would be wrong, for the two nouns hope and courage joined by and make a plural subject.

"Every boy and girl has recited." The connected nouns boy and girl make a third-singular subject, for they are preceded by the adjective every, and so are to be taken separately. Hence the s-form of the verb is required.

1. In every muscle there (is, are) strength and vigor. 2. Every beggar and spendthrift (receive, receives) his aid. 3. Neither father nor mother (was, were) living. 4. Every word and even every thought (is, are) known. 5. Each day and hour (bring, brings) (its, their) duties. 6. The rise and fall of the tide (are, is) to be explained. 7. The butcher and the baker (has, have) sent in (his, their) (bill or bills). 8. There (is, are) fighting and bloodshed on the frontier. 9. A thousand dollars (are, is) too much to pay. 10. There (were, was) neither anger nor impatience in his tone. 11. To seem and to be (is, are) not always the same. 12. A beautiful poem or picture (has, have) a refining influence. 13. Whether to advance or to retreat (were, was) the question. 14. No pains and no expense (have, has) been spared. 15. Each hour, dark fraud or open rapine or protected murder (cry, cries) out against them. 16. Every leaf and flower (has, have) faded. 17. His subject and mine (was, were) the same. 18. There (sleeps, sleep) the soldier, statesman, and martyr. 19. Wave after wave (come, comes) rolling in. 20. Neither oil nor alcohol (are, is) as heavy as water.

458. When subjects connected by or or nor differ in person or number, the one nearest the verb generally controls its form. Thus:

Neither she nor I am invited. Either you or he knows it.

Are you or he going? Neither he nor his children were saved.

Expressions like these are awkward, and should generally be avoided. Thus:

She is not invited, nor am I.

459. Of two subjects connected by as well as the first one controls the form of the verb that is expressed, and the second that of a verb understood. Thus:

The captain, as well as the crew, was lost.

The crew, as well as the captain, were sick.

460. Of two subjects, one affirmative and the other negative, the affirmative one controls the form of the verb expressed, and the negative one that of a verb understood. Thus:

Not I but he is the one to go. Not he but I am going. The warriors, but not the chief, were present. Not only this habit, but all similar ones, are pernicious.

461. As a relative pronoun has no form for number or person, the sense of the antecedent controls the form of the verb. Thus:

I that speak unto you am he. O Thou who changest not!

Our Father who art in heaven.

Exercise 212. — Select the proper form of the verb, and give the rule that guides you.

1. Equity, as well as justice, (demand, demands) it.
2. One or more persons (was, were) injured.
3. His painting was one of the best that (was, were) exhibited.
4. Not the causes, but the result, (were, was) stated.
5. You or he (are, is) to go.
6. Either he or I (is, am) to go.
7. No sound but that of their own voices (were, was) heard.
8. The army (were, was) led into the defile.
9. Each plant and tree (produce, produces) others of (its, their) kind.
10. This man with his sons (were, was) founders of a nation.
11. He is one of the wisest men that (has, have) ever lived.
12. He comes; nor want nor cold his course (delay, delays).
13. His wealth and not his talents (attract, attracts) attention.
14. I (would, should) like to know whose book this is.

CHAPTER X

INFINITIVES AND PARTICIPLES

I. INFINITIVES

462. Infinitives are in their nature partly nouns and partly verbs. First, being names (of actions, etc.), they are nouns, and they have the uses of nouns. Secondly, though they cannot assert, they are like verbs in meaning, and they take the same modifiers or complements. Thus in —

I wish to drive my horse slowly, to drive, like a noun, is the object of “wish”; and, like a verb, it expresses action, has an object, “horse,” and is modified by an adverb, “slowly.”

463. Nearly every verb has two simple infinitives; as —

(to) drive, driving; (to) run, running;

named from their forms the Root infinitive and the Infinitive in ing.

We shall speak of the root-infinitive briefly as the infinitive, and in speaking of the infinitive in ing we shall use the briefer word, gerund.

464. As verb phrases are used instead of inflected forms, so too, infinitive phrases are used instead of the simple forms to express certain changes of meaning.

Thus, like the infinitive, we have:

	SIMPLE FORMS	PERFECT FORMS
	to drive	to have driven
Progressive:	to be driving	to have been driving
Passive:	to be driven	to have been driven and like the gerund we have:

SIMPLE FORMS	PERFECT FORMS
driving	having driven
Progressive: (being driving) *	having been driving
Passive: (being driven) †	having been driven

[For the use of all these forms as nouns, see § 470.]

465. To was formerly used with the infinitive to express various relations, but it has lost its prepositional character, and now generally means nothing of itself, and serves only as a sign that the following word is an infinitive.

USES OR CONSTRUCTIONS

466. 1. Either the infinitive or the gerund may be used as (1) Subject or (2) Subjective Complement; as —

To hesitate now is to be lost. Making promises is not keeping them. To have given freely is to be asked for more. His having once been crowned will make him noble.

(a) An infinitive may be used as the real subject of a verb to explain the anticipative subject it (§ 290); as —

It is dangerous to trifle with temptation.

467. 2. Either the infinitive or the gerund may be the Object of a verb; as —

I enjoy swimming. I like to swim. I will swim.
She prefers sitting quietly. She prefers to sit quietly.

468. Sometimes the infinitive or the gerund is used as the object of a verb that has also an indirect object. Thus:

He taught [all his pupils] to sing, like —

He taught singing [to all his pupils];

* A rare form, as in "punished for being out driving."

† Also a rare form. [See § 425.]

in which one object names the persons who were taught, and the other the thing that was taught to them. Either object may be used as subject in the passive form [§ 427]; as —

All his pupils were taught to sing, or —

To sing was taught [to all his pupils].

469. After some verbs the infinitive is used as complement without the to. [Compare § 474.]

(1) Sometimes after dare and need. Thus:

She dared to meet them all. They dared not look up.

It needs to be repaired. You need not go.

(2) After had (a subjunctive of have) with the adjective expressions as lief, rather, better, best. Thus, in the sentences —

I had as lief die, I had rather go, the meaning is, "I should hold it as desirable or more desirable to die, to go."

470. 3. Either the infinitive or the gerund may be the Object of a preposition. Thus:

We are weary with watching those men. From having been king he came at last to being supported by charity. They were rewarded for never having been captured. The receiver was accused of having been taking bribes. We missed the performance by being out walking.

(a) The infinitive with to is now used only after the prepositions about, but, except, and save. Thus:

The leader was about to drive off — about driving off.

I am about to go — about going.

He could do anything but make money; that is —

He understood everything but making money.

They will do anything for religion except live for it.

Exercise 213. — Analyze these sentences, and parse the infinitives and gerunds.

1. To be good is to be happy.
2. It is impossible not to grow old.
3. Reading by twilight may injure the sight.
4. It is always best to tell the truth. 5. It was discouraging not to have been kindly received. 6. Seeming good is not being good. 7. Who would wish to be forgotten? 8. They refused to release the prisoner. 9. I have tried to do justice to everybody. 10. He dislikes being falsely accused. 11. The firm expects to be moving out tomorrow. 12. Do you regret having done no more? 13. We can improve by imitating good examples. 14. They know nothing about its having been written. 15. The dog did everything but speak to him. 16. He promised me to go at once. 17. They dare not accuse him of dishonesty. 18. You need not tell that story again.

471. 4. The infinitive with to may be used Adjectively like a prepositional phrase. Thus:

Wood to burn (for burning). Horses to let (for letting).

(The) question (to be decided) is (very) difficult.

(a) It is also often used as a predicate adjective; as in —

Such conduct is to be despised (is despicable).

He appears to have lost his mind (appears insane).

472. 5. The infinitive with to, like a prepositional phrase, may be used Adverbially to modify the meaning of a verb, an adjective, or an adverb, by showing the purpose, cause, respect in which, etc. Thus:

We need the money to pay (for paying) the help.

They are slow to depart (in departing).

It is ripe enough to eat (for eating).

NOTE. — When used adjectively or adverbially the infinitive may generally be replaced by for (in, at, of, etc.) and the gerund. As in — good to drink (for drinking); forced to go (into going); regret to hear (at hearing); failed to come (of coming).

473. 6. The infinitive, of course, cannot be used to make a direct assertion. It is used, however, as an Indirect Predicate in expressions that are nearly equivalent to objective noun clauses. Thus in —

I believed the story to be false the object of “believed” is obviously not story, but the whole expression, the story to be false, as if I had said, I believed that the story was false. Story, the apparent object of the transitive verb, is treated as the subject of the infinitive to be, used as an indirect predicate. [See § 241.] Other examples are —

We believed it to be true — We believed that it was true.
 I expected him to come — I expected that he would come.
 He asked me to stay — He asked that I should stay.
 Permit us to go — Permit that we should go.
 I thought him to be rich — I thought that he was rich.

[For “I thought him rich,” “I thought him a man of means,” see § 333. For “I knew it to be him,” see § 310.]

The application of the word clause is sometimes extended to include these expressions. They may be called infinitive clauses.

NOTE. — This construction is most common after verbs meaning think, perceive, declare, command, permit, and the like, taking the place of an indirect quotation. But the infinitive after these verbs may sometimes be explained in other ways.

474. After bid, let, make, see, hear, feel, and have an infinitive is used as indirect predicate without to (compare § 469). As in —

Bid { him remain.	Let { us go.
{ that he should remain.	{ that we should go.
He made { the top spin.	I saw { her go.
{ that the top should spin.	{ that she went.
We felt { the house shake.	Hear the bells ring.
{ that the house shook.	Have him copy this.

475. The infinitive as indirect predicate is sometimes used with the object of a preposition. Thus:

He gave orders for me to go. It is time for the work to be done.

Constructions

1. Subject of the verb —.
- (a) Explanatory of the anticipative subject it.
2. Subjective complement of the verb —.
3. Object of the verb —.
4. Object of the preposition —.
5. Used adjectively { to modify the noun —.
as subjective complement of the verb —.
6. Used adverbially to modify the { verb —.
adjective —.
adverb —.
7. Used as indirect predicate with its subject —.

Exercise 215. — Analyze the following sentences, parse the infinitives and gerunds, and explain how each is modified:

1. Strive to keep your appointments. 2. I have but a few more words to say. 3. Cease to do evil; learn to do well. 4. The more fact of his father's paying the debt is no proof of its being a proper expenditure. 5. It was no easy task to bridge the chasm. 6. To profess and to possess are very different. 7. A grove near by seemed to invite us to rest. 8. Let us prevent his anger by sacrificing ourselves. 9. The law is made to protect the innocent by punishing the guilty. 10. By observing truth we shall secure the respect of others. 11. He saw a star fall from heaven and vanish in utter darkness.

12. Shall you have time to come to bid us farewell? 13. Those only are fit to rule who have learned to obey. 14. Men love to be adored, but hate to be reprov'd. 15. I have an engagement which prevents my staying longer with you. 16. Their gratitude made them proclaim his goodness. 17. The atrocious crime of being a young man, I shall attempt neither to palliate nor deny. 18. Never leave it to do tomorrow if it ought to be done today. 19. I love to note the break of spring that is to clothe the ground. 20. Buying goods on credit has caused him to fail. 21. I saw them come, but did not hear them go. 22. To live soberly and righteously is to be his motto.

23. I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none.
24. None knew thee but to love thee.
25. Let not Ambition mock their useful toil.
26. He, glad to hide his tell-tale cheek,
Hied back that glove of mail to seek.
27. Look in his face to meet thy neighbor's soul,
Not on his garments to detect a hole.
28. Sir Launfal flashed forth in his unscarred mail
To seek in all lands for the holy grail.
29. Oft has it been my lot to mark
A proud, conceited, talking spark.
30. There is never a blade or a leaf too mean
To be some happy creature's palace.
31. And fools who came to scoff remained to pray.
32. The very leaves seem to sing on the trees.

33. To be graduated with a college diploma without having entered into the true spirit of college life by bearing an active part in its manifold and stimulating experiences, is to have failed of securing the best results of the course.

DIRECTIONS FOR THE USE OF INFINITIVES

479. A modifier should not be used between to and the rest of the infinitive.

Say "They meant never to return," not "They meant to never return."

480. This construction, called the "split infinitive," is used to some extent by reputable writers and speakers, but only when there appears to be a decided gain in clearness or force.

481. Avoid using to alone in place of an infinitive.

Say "He has broken his word and is likely to break it again," or "is likely to do so again," not "— and is likely to again." "Do as I told you," not "Do as I told you to."

Such expressions, however, as "I do not wish to," "He did not mean to," are used even by careful speakers, and may be regarded as allowable in colloquial speech.

482. Avoid the use of and for to.

Say "Come to see me," "Try to do your best," are better English than "Come and see me," "Try and do your best;" though they sound rather stiff and formal in ordinary conversation.

483. Do not use a perfect infinitive after a past tense when the simple form would express the meaning.

Say "I intended to go," not "to have gone."

"We hoped to be present," not "to have been present."

Exercise 216. — How should the following sentences be written?

1. We ought to carefully avoid errors.
2. I have done everything that you told me to.
3. We shall try and call upon you next week.
4. He was not obliged to have gone with me.
5. I ought to at least apologize, but I do not mean to.

II. PARTICIPLES

484. Participles are in part adjectives, for they modify nouns and pronouns; and they are in part verbs, for they take the same modifiers or complements. They do not assert that a thing does or is so and so, but they describe it so as to imply as much.

Thus, in the sentence —

I met a man driving his sheep to market, driving, like an adjective, modifies man, and, like a verb, takes an object, sheep. It describes the man as acting, without asserting anything of him.

485. Nearly every verb has two simple participles, named from their meaning —

- (1) The Present, Imperfect, or Active participle; as — driving, spinning, seeing, walking, sleeping; and —

- (2) The Past, Perfect, or Passive participle; as — driven, spun, seen, walked, slept.

486. In place of inflected forms we have four participle phrases — one formed with the imperfect participle, and three with the perfect. Thus:

ACTIVE	PASSIVE
Imperfect: driving.	Perfect: driven.
Pres. Perf.: having driven.	Pres. Perf.: having been driven.
Progressive: having been driving.	Progressive: being driven.

487. The Present participle always ends in ing. It commonly represents an action or a condition as continuing or imperfect, and it is almost always active; that is, it refers to the actor. Thus:

Vessels carrying coal are constantly arriving.

488. The Past participle commonly ends in en, ed, d, or t (§ 375), and is generally perfect, representing an action or a condition as completed. When used alone it is almost always passive; that is, it refers, not to the actor, but to what is acted upon. Thus:

The army, beaten but not vanquished, slowly fell back.

USES, OR CONSTRUCTIONS

489. I. The simple participles may be used as Subjective Complements. Thus:

The flowers are gone. It seems bewildering. Night came stealing on. The place lay deserted for years.

(a) Used in this way, the participle often has some adverbial meaning, as in the last two examples.

(b) A participle may be used as an objective complement. Thus:

Send the ball rolling. We shall keep you occupied.

490. II. Any participle may be added to a noun or a pronoun appositively. In such cases the idea would be more fully expressed —

(1) By an adjective-clause ; (2) By an adverb-clause ; (3) By an independent statement : as —

1. The books { bought for the library that were bought for the library } are burned.
2. The dog went home { having lost his master.
because he had lost his master.
3. { Reaching for the bell-rope,
I reached for the bell-rope, and } I pulled it vigorously.

491. III. Any participle may be used with a noun or a pronoun in the Absolute construction (§ 239), the two together having the force of an adverb-clause. Thus:

[Quiet having been restored], (the) speaker continued.
[When quiet had been restored], (the) speaker continued.

Constructions

1. Modifies the noun (or pronoun) —.
2. Complement of the verb — referring to —.
3. Used absolutely with the noun (or pronoun) —.

Exercise 217. — Analyze these sentences, and parse the participles. Change each participle-phrase to a clause when possible.

1. The melancholy days are come. 2. I kept him working. 3. This noise is very confusing. 4. The mountain streams went babbling by. 5. Is not the breeze from the hills refreshing? 6. The fire was set burning by sparks from the engine. 7. The news set all the bells ringing. 8. We found some old planks badly rotted by the weather. 9. The sun goes down, lengthening the shadows.

10. What wonder is it that the girl, lost in such dreamy fancies, did not hear you? 11. Even the special train dispatched at two did not arrive till four. 12. Having often seen him passing, I reasoned that the nest was near. 13. She brought some images stolen from the tombs by Arabs. 14. Once possessed of that fortune, he would wish it to be greater. 15. Punished or unpunished, he will never be conquered. 16. Ten times conquered, still you may be victor.

17. The rain having ceased to fall, we look for a rainbow. 18. The weather permitting, we shall set out tomorrow. 19. And the rocks now slipping from beneath their feet, they still refused to flee. 20. He had everything to fear from poisonous plants, the very sight of dogwood being dangerous. 21. She sat by the window, the sash raised, and the wind blowing a gale. 22. The army was in Belgium, the fleet being in the Channel, as we have said.

Exercise 218. — Analyze the following sentences, and parse the participles and infinitives. Expand participle phrases to clauses, and tell how the clauses affect the meaning of the main statement.

1. Strive to keep your appointments. 2. I have but a few more words to say. 3. Cease to do evil; learn to do well. 4. The mere fact of his father's paying the debt is no proof of its being a proper expenditure. 5. It was no easy task to bridge the chasm. 6. To profess and to possess are very different. 7. Evil falls on him who goes to seek it. 8. Gone are the birds that were our summer guests.

9. His great work having been well done, he rests at last. 10. He that is good at making excuses is seldom good for anything else. Let him learn the luxury of doing good. 11. Let us prevent his anger by sacrificing ourselves. 12. The law is made to protect the innocent by punishing the guilty. 13. By observing truth we shall secure the respect of others. 14. He saw a star fall from heaven and vanish in utter darkness. 15. It is well to think well; it is divine to act well.

16. England owes her liberties to her having been conquered by the Norman. 17. Eyes raised towards heaven are always beautiful, whatever they may be. 18. Selfishness is making one's self the most important personage in the world. Happiness shared is perfected. 19. Silently to persevere in one's duty is the best answer to calumny. 20. You find yourself refreshed by the presence of cheerful people. Why not make an earnest effort to confer that pleasure on others?

21. Freedom's battle, once begun,
Bequeathed from bleeding sire to son,
Though baffled oft, is ever won.
22. Rest is not quitting the busy career;
Rest is the fitting of self to its sphere.
'Tis loving and serving the highest and best;
'Tis onward! unswerving, and that is true rest.
23. Flashed all their sabres bare,
Flashed as they turned in air,
Sabring the gunners there,
Charging an army, while
All the world wondered.
Plunged in the battery smoke,
Right through the line they broke;
Cossack and Russian
Reeled from the sabre-stroke —
Shattered and sundered.
Then they rode back, but not —
Not the six hundred.

CHAPTER XI

ADVERBS

A. KINDS

493. As to Meaning. — There are many adverbs, and they modify in many different ways; yet they may all be divided, according to their meaning, into six principal classes:

1. Adverbs of Time. As — now, then, always, never, next, last.
2. Adverbs of Place. As — here, there, down, hence, above.
3. Adverbs of Manner. As — well, ill, thus, so, slowly, wisely, freely.
4. Adverbs of Degree. As — much, very, almost, too, scarcely, quite.
5. Adverbs of Cause. As — accordingly, hence, therefore, wherefore.
6. Adverbs of Number. As — first, next, once, thirdly.

494. As to Use. — With respect to their use, adverbs may be classified as Simple when they merely modify, and as Conjunctive when they also connect.

Exercise 219. — 1. What is a clause? 2. What kinds of clauses have you studied? 3. What is an adjective clause? 4. What is a noun clause? 5. What is a conjunctive pronoun? 6. A relative pronoun? 7. Give the meaning of when, where, whence, whither, why, how, in the form of a phrase.

8. Point out the adjective clauses in the following expressions, and tell what each modifies:

- The place on which they stood —
- The time at which they started —
- The town from which they came —
- The land to which they went —
- The reason for which they fled —

9. What does each prepositional phrase modify? 10. Substitute a single word for each phrase. 11. What does the substituted word modify? 12. To what part of speech does it therefore belong?

495. From the preceding Exercise we see that in adjective clauses certain adverbs may be used as the equivalent of a phrase made with a conjunctive pronoun and a preposition. Thus:

This is the house where (in which) I was born.

Here, as we know, which would connect the clause to house, and in which would modify was born like an adverb; so its equivalent where does this double duty of modifying and connecting.

496. Adverbs like when, where, whence, whither, why, how, that both modify a verb and at the same time connect a clause, are called conjunctive adverbs.

So with wherewith, whereon, whereby, and other compounds of where and a preposition.

Conjunctive adverbs used in adjective clauses may be called relative adverbs.

Exercise 220.

Do you know who it is?	Tell me what he wants.
Do you know where it is?	Tell me when he came.
Do you know why he went?	Tell me whence he came.

1. In the first three sentences, what is the object of "do know"? 2. In the last three sentences, what is the object of "tell"? 3. What kind of clauses may be used as objects? 4. Parse "who" and "what." 5. What two uses has each? 6. How are the other noun clauses connected to the rest of the sentence? 7. To what part of speech do where, why, when, whence, belong? 8. What do they modify? 9. What have you learned to call such words when they also serve to connect?

497. From the foregoing illustrations we see that noun clauses also may be joined to the rest of the sentence by conjunctive adverbs. Thus:

Show me how (= in what way) the problem is solved.

Here how is a conjunctive adverb; for it takes the place both of the conjunctive adjective "what" and of the phrase "in what way," which modifies is solved like an adverb.

Exercise 221.

- | | | | |
|------|---|------|---|
| 1. { | Go early.
Go at dawn.
Go [when] day breaks . | 2. { | He died here.
He died at his birthplace.
He died [where] he was born . |
|------|---|------|---|

1. In the first group of sentences what tells when one is "to go"? 2. What kind of modifiers answer the question "when"? 3. Which of the adverb modifiers in the first group is a clause? Why? 4. In the second group what answers the question "Where did he die?" 5. What kind of modifiers tells where? 6. Which modifier in the second group is a clause? Analyze it. 7. Like what part of speech is it used? 8. What then will you call it?

498. The preceding Exercise shows us that a clause may do the work of an adverb as well as that of an adjective or a noun, by showing when, where, why, and so on. Thus:

Go whenever (= at whatever time) he calls.

Stand still wherever (= in whatever place) you are.

Fight as (= in what way) a hero fights.

These clauses, like adverbs, show when, where, and how one is "to go," "to stand," or "to fight," and are, therefore, called Adverb clauses.

They are joined to the verb of the sentence either by conjunctive adverbs or simply by conjunctions.

499. An Adverb clause is one used like an adverb.

500. A Conjunctive adverb is one that modifies some word in a dependent clause and connects the clause to the rest of the sentence.

501. A Simple Adverb is one that modifies without connecting.

Exercise 222. — 1. Select the clauses, and tell their kind.

2. Point out the adverbs, tell their kind and what they modify.

1. When does the moon change? 2. Can you tell wherein they differ? 3. Who knows whence he came? 4. Where there is a will there is a way. 5. When the wine is in, the wit is out. 6. I know a bank where the wild thyme grows. 7. Whither I go ye know not. 8. Come as the waves come when navies are stranded. 9. Thou canst not tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth. 10. He works where the sun never shines. 11. Can you tell why the tides rise and fall? 12. They are found in lands where frost is unknown. 13. How can the stream be turned? 14. Whither thou goest I will go, and where thou lodgest I will lodge. 15. When the pyramids were built is uncertain. 16. I must know when he goes, where he goes, and how he goes. 17. This is the place where Franklin was born.

502. Interrogative Adverbs. — The adverbs how, when, where, why, whither, whence, when used to introduce a question, either direct or indirect, may be called interrogative adverbs. As in —

How is it done? When did it happen? Whence came he?

I wonder whether he will come. He asked where he should find the book.

503. Modal Adverbs. — Certain adverbs, like not, surely, certainly, perhaps, indeed, etc., are sometimes used to show that a statement is made in a positive, or negative, or doubtful way. Thus:

Surely you will not leave me. Perhaps he knows no better.

When so used they may be called modal adverbs.

504. Responsives. — The words yes, yea, no, nay, used as responses to questions, were once used like adverbs. We may call them responsives; but, like interjections, they do not properly belong to the parts of speech, being used now in the place of entire sentences. Thus: "Are you coming?" "Yes;" (that is, "I am coming").

505. Phrase Adverbs. — Some little phrases, generally used as adverbs, cannot well be separated, and may be called phrase adverbs. Among them are the following:

At length; at last; at all; at once; as yet; by far; for good; at least; in general; in vain; in short; of old; of late; from below; etc.

506. There. — The adverb there is frequently used without much of its original meaning to introduce a sentence in which the verb comes before its subject. When so used it may be called an expletive. Thus:

There were a thousand there.

B. INFLECTION AND USES

507. Comparison. — Adverbs have, in general, no change of form. A few, however, are compared like adjectives. Thus:

soon, sooner, soonest; often, oftener, oftenest.

(a) The adverbs ill, far, little, much, near, well, are compared irregularly like the adjectives of the same form. [See p. 136.]

508. Many adverbs that are not inflected may have a comparative or superlative meaning added by the use of more and most, or less and least. As — quickly, more quickly, most quickly; less quickly, least quickly.

509. An adverb may modify not only a verb, an adjective, or an adverb, but also an infinitive, a participle, a preposition, a phrase, a clause, or even an entire sentence, as we have seen in § 503.

510. Parsing Adverbs. — To parse an adverb we have only to tell (1) its kind, and (2) what it modifies; the form (3) need be mentioned only when comparative or superlative.

EXAMPLE. — We work [more cheerfully] [[when] we are [well] paid].

more is a simple adverb in the comparative degree; used to modify the adverb cheerfully.

cheerfully is a simple adverb modifying the verb work.

when is a conjunctive adverb modifying the verb are paid.

Exercise 223. — Point out the adverbs, and show exactly what each modifies.

1. Springing lightly into his saddle, he rode rapidly away.
2. It is lawful to do well on the sabbath day.
3. They live just beyond the mill.
4. He sailed nearly round the world.
5. How quickly night comes on!
6. Do precisely as you are bidden.
7. The paths of glory lead but to the grave.
8. Assuredly he cannot be mistaken.
9. Perhaps you will have no other opportunity.
10. The tunnel extends almost through the mountain.

C. DIRECTIONS FOR THE USE OF ADVERBS

511. Adjective for Adverb. — Never use an adjective where an adverb is required. Thus:

"He reads rapid but distinct" is wrong. The adjectives rapid and distinct should not be used to describe the manner of reading. The sentence should be, "He reads rapidly but distinctly."

512. Adverb for Predicate Adjective. — Never use an adverb in place of an adjective to complete a copulative verb.

"Miss Ward looked beautifully" is wrong. Looked is a copulative verb, for the meaning is, "She was beautiful in appearance." We should, therefore, use a predicate-adjective, and say, "Miss Ward looked beautiful."

513. Double Negatives. — Use only one negative in making a denial.

"He has never had nothing to do with it" should be, "He has never had anything to do with it." The two negatives neutralize each other, and spoil the meaning of the sentence.

(a) Never use such expressions as, "I don't scarcely ever go," or "We do not hardly expect it," when the meaning is, "I scarcely ever go," or, "I hardly expect it."

(b) Such expressions as, "We are not unmindful of your kindness," "He is never unwilling to learn," are right, and convey just the meaning intended. What is the meaning?

514. Adverbial expressions should be so placed in the sentence as to convey just the meaning intended. Compare —

Only the address can be written on this side (nothing else).

The address can only be written on this side (not printed).

The address can be written on this side only (not on the other).

Exercise 224. — (a) Correct the errors in these sentences, giving reasons for the changes:

1. A miser gives nothing to nobody. 2. I never hear from him scarcely. 3. How sweetly the music sounds! 4. He was tolerable well-informed. 5. The princess looked beautifully. 6. We reached home safely and soundly. 7. Did not the young man appear awkwardly? 8. We shall not go this week, I don't think. 9. This water tastes strongly of sulphur. 10. The fruit looks well, but it tastes badly. 11. How strangely everything seems in this light! 12. The children were very pleased with their presents. He was too confused to speak.

Very and too should never be used to modify a participle.

Even such expressions as, "very pleased," "very disappointed," when pleased and disappointed have the force of adjectives, are avoided by careful speakers and writers.

(b) Point out errors of any kind in these sentences:

1. Most all men are ambitious.

Never use most when you mean almost.

2. I never liked neither him nor his opinions. 3. You are too frightened to be of any use. 4. Three of the crew only reached the shore. 5. He desired to be rich very much. 6. I shall be glad to see you always. 7. There only was a solitary fort where Chicago stands fifty years ago. 8. Deaf-mutes can only talk with their hands or lips or eyes. 9. Leave more space between each column.

CHAPTER XII

PREPOSITIONS

515. Prepositions are comparatively few in number; and, though they do not themselves modify other words, they are used to show how different ideas are related to each other. They help to make phrases that modify like adjectives and adverbs.

516. The object of a preposition may be —

1. A Noun: The farmers are at work in the field, or some expression equivalent to a noun; as —

2. A Pronoun: I went from you to her.
3. A Gerund: Thank him for doing the errand.
4. An Infinitive: He did nothing but sing.
5. A Phrase: The Indians fired from behind the trees.
6. A Clause: I am surprised at what you say.

The object sometimes precedes the preposition, especially in poetry. Thus:

The heavy night hung dark the hills and waters o'er.

USES OF PREPOSITIONAL PHRASES

517. A prepositional phrase may be used like an adjective

- (1) To modify a noun or a pronoun; as in —

There is no hope of rescue. Which of you will go?

- or (2) As a subjective complement; as in —

Your friend is in good spirits. They are of great service.

When used as an adjective, it may be called an adjective phrase.

518. A prepositional phrase may be used like an adverb to modify —

1. A Verb: Go in haste | to the town | for the doctor.
2. { An Infinitive: To waste in youth is to want in age.
A Gerund: He succeeded after trying repeatedly.
3. A Participle: Bees coming to hives laden with honey.
4. An Adjective: The narrative is full of interest.
5. An Adverb: She did well for a beginner.

When used as an adverb, it may be called an adverb phrase.

519. A prepositional phrase may be used like a noun, as subject, object, etc. — especially after from. Thus:

They came from across the seas.

Out of sight is out of mind.

Exercise 225. — Point out the prepositional phrases in Exercise 218, and tell whether they are used as adjectives or as adverbs.

520. Phrase Prepositions. — Some little phrases are so much like single prepositions in their use, that, instead of separating them, we may call them phrase prepositions. Thus:

It crawled	{	from	}	a hole.	{	In	}	color, this is perfect.
		out of				As to
		from out				As for

The following are some of the phrases most commonly used as prepositions:

According to; as to; as for; along with; instead of; out of; in spite of; in front of; by means of; on board; etc.

521. Prepositions as Adverbs or Conjunctions. — Most of the prepositions were once adverbs, and are often used as such. Thus:

It isn't worth talking about. How was it disposed of?

Sometimes they become conjunctions [§ 534]. Thus:

Stay till I come. We started before the moon rose.

522. Parsing Prepositions. — A preposition is parsed, (1) by stating that it is a preposition, and (2) by showing how it is used.

These forms may be followed:

[In his garden] grew flowers (of every hue).

in is a preposition, used with its object garden to make a phrase that modifies grew.

of is a preposition, used with its object hue to make a phrase modifying flowers.

Exercise 226. — 1. Parse the prepositions in the following sentences.

2. What words are here adverbs that are often prepositions?

1. From peak to peak the rattling crags among leaps the live thunder.
2. This is the house that he lives in. 3. Come on; let us go in. 4. Will you stay till after dinner? 5. These jewels came from across the sea. 6. As to that, men differ in opinion. 7. He ran from under the tree. 8. All excepting him have gone. 9. But one remains. 10. All but one have gone. 11. There is nothing to be done now but to retreat. 12. Quit yourselves like men. 13. Look the whole world over, and you will not find it. 14. Judging from what he says, I believe him honest.

3. Parse the prepositions in any of the Exercises in this book.

523. Directions for the Use of Prepositions. — Care must be taken to use appropriate prepositions. Thus:

Between refers to two objects; Divide the money between the two claimants.

Among refers to more than two objects; Divide the money among the crew.

Into and to follow verbs of motion; in and at verbs of rest: Go into the house and remain in it. He is at home.

Say, "I met him in the street," "in the car," "in the train," "in a steamboat," rather than "on the street," etc.

Say "different from," not "different to" nor "different than;" as, "Mine is different from yours."

524. Do not use prepositions needlessly nor omit them when they are required. Thus:

Keep off of the grass. Omit of.
The book is no use to me. Say "of no use."

Exercise 227. — 1. Fill the blank with a suitable preposition if one is needed.

1. This work is different — any that have appeared. 2. When shall you be — home. 3. I should have gone if I had been able —. 4. Do smell — these flowers. 5. The signing — that note was a mistake. 6. Let us go — the park. 7. His answer was very different — yours. 8. I could prevail — him to go. 9. Try to profit — the failures of others. 10. There is constant rivalry — the four roads.

11. He differed — his friends. 12. We arrived — a late train, and stayed — the hotel till morning. 13. — what street do you live? 14. Virtue and vice differ widely — each other. 15. How do you reconcile such actions — what he said? 16. First become reconciled — thy brother. 17. Is he worthy — your confidence? 18. He plays — the organ very skillfully. 19. It is — no use to try.

2. Make a study of the following selection with special reference to the construction of prepositions and prepositional phrases.

✓ THE LOVE OF COUNTRY

Breathes there the man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land?
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned,
As home his footsteps he hath turned
From wandering on a foreign strand?

If such there breathe, go, mark him well!
For him no minstrel raptures swell;
High though his titles, proud his name,
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim, —
Despite those titles, power, and pelf,
The wretch, concentred all in self,
Living, shall forfeit fair renown,
And, doubly dying, shall go down
To the vile dust, from whence he sprung,
Unwept, unhonored, and unsung.

— Sir Walter Scott.

CHAPTER XIII

CONJUNCTIONS

525. Since we first defined conjunctions (p. 39) we have studied several other kinds of connective words:

(1) The conjunctive pronouns who, which, that, what, etc., which, while they connect, also do the work of nouns and pronouns;

(2) The conjunctive adjectives which, whichever, what, etc., which modify nouns and also connect clauses;

(3) The conjunctive adverbs when, where, while, etc., which, besides connecting, always modify; and

(4) The prepositions, which show the relation between words.

We now come to genuine Conjunctions, the chief use of which is to connect the parts of compound and complex sentences.

526. Conjunctions are divided according to their use into two classes:

(1) co-ordinating conjunctions, that connect the parts of a sentence so that they remain alike in rank or construction; and

(2) subordinating conjunctions, that make one of the connected parts dependent upon or a part of the other.

"Co-ordinate" means of equal rank; "subordinate," of inferior rank.

527. Co-ordinating conjunctions are used to connect, (1) The members of a compound sentence. Thus:

The floods came, and the winds blew, but it fell not.

We must overcome evil, or it will overcome us.

(2) Words, phrases, and clauses having the same construction.
Thus:

Bright and happy children were running or playing there.
True friends are the same in prosperity and in adversity.
I do not know when he came nor whither he went.

Co-ordinating conjunctions are sometimes used at the beginning of a separate sentence to connect it in meaning with what precedes.

528. We give the name co-ordinating conjunctions first to and, but, or, nor, which do nothing but connect; secondly, to certain words which, though they retain their adverbial meaning, serve principally to show the connection between the members of a compound sentence. Thus:

I do not believe in the change; however, I shall not oppose it.

Therefore, hence, still, besides, consequently, yet, likewise, moreover, else, then, also, accordingly, nevertheless, notwithstanding, etc., are words of this kind. Try to form sentences beginning with them, and you will see that they refer to what has been said before in each case.

529. A Co-ordinating conjunction is one that joins sentences or parts of sentences having the same rank.

530. We can if we wish divide all co-ordinating conjunctions into four classes:

1. Copulative, or such as merely join together, like and.
2. Alternative, or such as offer a choice between two, like or.
3. Adversative, or such as imply that one part is opposed to the other, like but.
4. Causal, or such as assign a cause, a reason, a result, etc., like for.

531. Correlatives. — Some conjunctions, called correlatives, are used in pairs, one before each of the connected parts to make their connection more evident. Thus:

I have both seen and heard the orator.
They are to meet us either in Paris or in London.

Give me neither poverty nor riches.

Whether to go or to return is the question.

NOTE. — The first word of each pair may be parsed as an auxiliary or assistant conjunction helping the other to do the connecting.

Exercise 228. — Point out the conjunctions, and explain what each connects.

1. He is liberal, but he is not generous. 2. They are poor, yet they are not needy. 3. Both he and I are going. 4. I believed; therefore have I spoken. 5. That route is dangerous: besides, we have no guide. 6. The book is not perfect: still, it is very helpful. 7. Either Hamlet was insane, or he feigned insanity. 8. The sea is rough, for I hear the surf. 9. He yields neither to force nor to persuasion.

10. The fault is neither yours nor mine, but theirs. 11. I have had experience both in sickness and in health. 12. But I can never be natural enough, even when there is the most occasion. 13. As to the book you mention, I am in doubt whether to read it or not. 14. We cannot go, nor should you. 15. He is a genius, though he does not seem so.

16. Men will reap as they sow. 17. He will die some day; for all men are mortal. 18. He is very rich, yet he is not contented. 19. Wise men love truth; whereas fools shun it. 20. And now abideth faith, hope, charity, but the greatest of these is charity.

532. Subordinating Conjunctions. — If we unite the sentences —

Rain has fallen. The grass is wet — by the co-ordinating conjunction “and”; thus —

Rain has fallen, and the grass is wet —

we make a compound sentence with co-ordinate members; that is, with members of equal rank. But if we unite them by the conjunction “because”; thus —

The grass is wet, because rain has fallen — we change their relation and rank, and make one of them an adverb clause that gives a reason for the other, by telling why grass is wet.

So, too, in the sentences —

It will dry after the sun has risen. (When?)

We must hasten that we may meet our friends. (Why?)

We shall wait if they have not come. (On what condition?) — the conjunctions after, that, if, change what might be independent sentences into adverb clauses that modify verbs by showing when, why, on what condition, etc.

533. Conjunctions of this kind connect two sentences by changing one of them into a clause which becomes part of the other, and they are, therefore, called subordinating.

534. Most subordinating conjunctions are used to make adverb clauses, which may modify in a variety of ways. Thus, they may denote:

1. Time: We waited after { before, since, till, until, ere, } you came.
2. Cause or Reason: I will go because { for, since, as,
inasmuch as, } you ask it.
3. Manner: Work as if (as though) you were paid.
4. Comparison: { The nights are longer than the days [are].
Venus is more distant than the moon [is].
5. { Condition,
Concession, etc.: } I will go if { unless provided } he needs me.
Though (although) he is poor he is content.
6. Purpose or Result: { Take good care that (lest) they escape.
Exercise daily that you may grow strong.

535. The subordinating conjunction that (and sometimes whether) is often used in making a noun clause. Thus the sentences —

He was wrong, We knew that fact — when united by that become —

We knew that he was wrong.

So —

Ask whether the steamer has sailed.

536. A Subordinating conjunction is one that changes an independent into a dependent clause, and connects it to the rest of the sentence.

A subordinating conjunction often serves simply to introduce a noun clause used as subject. As in —

That you have wronged me doth appear in this.

537. Phrase Conjunctions. — Some little phrases are used to connect like single words. For example:

Corn as well as wheat may be raised here.

I shall go inasmuch as he has invited me.

The most common phrase conjunctions are, as if, as though, as well, forasmuch as, provided that, seeing that, so that, in order that, etc.

538. Parsing Conjunctions. — In parsing a conjunction we are to tell, (1) its kind, and (2) what it connects. The following forms may be used:

1. He spoke and acted [⁺as if (his) life were in danger].

and is a co-ordinating conjunction, and connects the two verbs spoke and acted.

as if is a subordinating phrase conjunction, and connects the adverb clause to spoke and acted, which it modifies.

2. [⁺After we had sailed] we found that (the) ship leaked.

after is a subordinating conjunction, and connects the adverb clause to found, which it modifies.

that is a subordinating conjunction, and joins the noun clause to found, of which it is the object.

539.

Exercise 229. — 1. Parse the prepositions in the following sentences:

2. Analyze the sentences, and parse the conjunctions.

1. Though I admire his courage, I detest his cruelty. 2. Remain until sunset. 3. Do not go until the sun has set. 4. Think twice before you speak. 5. I have not seen my friend since he returned from Dublin. 6. If I were not Alexander, I would be Diogenes. 7. I am proud that I am an American. 8. We know that the moon is uninhabited. 9. That the moon is uninhabited is well known.

10. The fact that the moon is uninhabited is well known. 11. It is well known that the moon is not inhabited. 12. The fact is that the moon has no inhabitants. 13. As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him. 14. Come down ere my child die. 15. It is more than heart can bear. 16. Language was given us that we may say pleasant things to each other. 17. If spring is without blossoms, autumn will be without fruit. 18. It was so cold that the mercury froze. 19. He failed in business because he was dishonest.

540. Directions for the use of Conjunctions. — Observe these rules:

1. Do not use or for nor as the correlative of neither.

"Neither you or I" should be "Neither you nor I."

2. Do not use like instead of as or as if.

He acted like (as if) he was crazy. Sing like (as) I do.

3. Do not use but for than after other or any comparative word.

I have no other friend but (than) you; or, I have no friend but you.

4. Do not use but what for that or but that.

I have no doubt but what (that) he did it.

5. Do not use if when you mean whether.

See if (whether) he can go.

Exercise 230. — 1. Supply an appropriate conjunction.

1. I have no other reason — this. 2. I did not know but — you were busy. 3. He will neither come in — go out. 4. Is there no one else — he to go? 5. He no sooner sees me, — he runs to meet me. 6. He walked — he was lame. 7. He did not deny but — he owed the money. 8. I can't say — he will be here or not.

2. Try to answer the following questions:

1. What may the object of a preposition be? 2. Give examples. 3. What parts of speech may the phrase resemble? 4. Use one as adjective, as complement, as adverb. 5. Explain the difference between prepositions and conjunctions. 6. Between the two kinds of conjunctions. 7. Discriminate between the italicized words in — “after sunset,” and “after the sun had set”; in — “I have not seen him since noon,” and “Since it is true, he must go.” 8. In — “Act as you feel”; “As I looked, it fell”; “She is not so tall as you,” as is a conjunctive adverb. In — “As life is short, improve it,” as is a conjunction; and in — “This is such as I want,” as is a pronoun. Try to explain why.

3. Parse the conjunctions and the prepositions in the following selection:

How sleep the Brave who sink to rest
By all their country's wishes blest!
When Spring, with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallowed mold,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod
Than Fancy's feet have ever trod.

By fairy hands their knell is rung,
By forms unseen their dirge is sung:
There Honor comes, a pilgrim gray,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay,
And Freedom shall awhile repair
To dwell a weeping hermit there.

— Collins.

CHAPTER XIV

INTERJECTIONS, ETC.

541. We call interjections one of the parts of speech because they are spoken and written as words; but they cannot enter into the construction of sentences, being only "thrown in between" them.

They are half-way between ordinary language and the language of coughing, laughing, crying, and so on, which they are made to imitate.

542. Among commonly-written interjections are included —

I. Words used instead of an assertion to express feeling of various kinds:

- (a) Surprise or wonder; as, oh, ah, lo, whew.
- (b) Pleasure, joy, exultation; as, oh, ah, aha, hey, hurrah.
- (c) Pain, sadness, sorrow; as, oh, ah, alas, alack, alack-a-day.
- (d) Contempt, disgust; as, pshaw, fie, fudge, pooh, ugh, bah.

II. Words used instead of a question; as, eh? ah? hey?

III. Words used instead of a command:

- (a) To call attention; as, O, lo, ho, hem, hello, ahoy.
- (b) To silence; as, hist, hush, whist, 'st, mum.
- (c) To direct, expel, and so on; as, whoa, gee, haw, scat.

IV. Words used to imitate sounds made by animals, machines, and so on. As — bow-wow, ba-a-a, pop, bang, ding-dong, rub-a-dub, whiz, whir-r, patter.

Notice the sound of such verbs and nouns as grunt, buzz, roar, crash, hiss, puff.

OTHER EXCLAMATORY WORDS

543. Many ordinary words and phrases are often used independently as mere exclamations, when their real meaning is hardly thought of. So with —

(1) Nouns and pronouns: fire, nonsense, mercy, shame, what.

(2) Verbs: help, behold, look, see, begone, hark, listen.

(3) Adjectives: hail, well, welcome, strange, good, bravo.

(4) Adverbs, prepositions, and phrases: out, indeed, how, why, back, forward; on, up; amen, O dear, dear me, farewell, adieu, good-by, good-day.

544. When such an expression, even though used alone, retains its original meaning, we may supply what is omitted, and treat the word as part of a sentence. Thus:

Silence! (keep silence!) Good! (that is good!)

545. Sometimes, as when greatly excited, we abandon sentences altogether, and utter only the most important words; as —

A sail! a sail! Now for the boats! Down with it!
Steady! Lower! To your oars, men!

Exercise 231. — Write sentences, using each of these words in the right way:

O! ahoy! alas! what! ho! Oh! eh! pshaw! hark! sh!

CHAPTER XV

SENTENCES AND THEIR ELEMENTS

546. For convenience in reviewing what we have learned, the following summary is presented.

SENTENCES: SUMMARY

Sentences are classified according to		The Elements of a Sentence are	Words: the eight parts of speech
Use:	as		{	Phrases:	adjective; adverbial;
					verb; prepositional;
					possessive; appositive;
Form:	as		{	Clauses:	infinitive; participle.
					adverb { explanatory.
					adjective { restrictive.
					adverb [see p. 225].
					noun { subject; object;
					complement.
				appositive.
				explanatory.

547. Besides the (1) essentials, a simple sentence may contain (2) modifiers, and (3) independent expressions.

548. The Essentials of a Sentence. — The essential predicate is always a verb or verb phrase. The subject, object, subjective complement, or objective complement may be —

1. A Noun: Napoleon overthrew the government, and became Emperor. He made his brothers Kings.

2. A Pronoun: They released us. Debtors are those in debt. The treaty made Porto Rico ours.

3. An Adjective [as subjective or objective complement only]: They are silent. Strike the traitor dead!

4. A Phrase: { Out of sight is out of mind.
To be absent is to be forgotten.
His keeping busy prevented his being homesick.
They will be in search of work.
His success will render further help of no use.

5. A Noun Clause: { What I learn cannot be taken from me.
We know that life is uncertain.
The fact is, that she is deaf, dumb, and blind.
My mother made me what I am.

6. A Quotation: { "I still live," was the last that he said.
His dying words were, "Don't give up the ship."
Galileo exclaimed, "It does move."
I have made my motto, "Without haste, without rest."

Some of these constructions are comparatively rare.

549. Modifiers. — I. A noun or a pronoun in any construction may be modified by —

1. An Adjective { word: All men have equal rights.
phrase: The silence was strangely ominous.
clause: Those that think govern those that toil.

2. A Prepositional Phrase: There is a light in the window for thee.

3. A Possessive { word: Am I my brother's keeper?
phrase: It was the rugged mountaineer's cabin.

4. An Appositive { word: The planet Saturn has two rings.
phrase: Gen. Scott, the commander-in-chief of the army.
clause: The axiom that the whole is greater than any part.

5. A Participle { word: They found him wounded and dying.
phrase: Some frail memorial, still erected high.

6. An Infinitive Phrase: A plan to light the streets by electricity.

7. An Explanatory Noun Clause: It is true that air has weight.

550. II. A verb, infinitive, participle, adverb, or adjective, may be modified by —

- | | | |
|--|---|--|
| 1. An Adverb | { | word: Slowly fades the light of day. phrase: He is waiting very patiently . He will come by and by .
clause: When he comes , go where you choose . |
| 2. A Prepositional Phrase: Having risen from poverty to wealth . | | |
| 3. A Noun or Noun Phrase: Go Tuesday and stay six weeks . | | |
| 4. An Infinitive Phrase: | | { We came to demand our rights .
The land is pleasant to live in . |

551. Independent Expressions. — A sentence may contain a word or phrase that is independent of other words, used neither as one of the essentials nor as a modifier or a connective. Such are —

1. Vocatives, or words used in address. As —

Ye crags and peaks, I'm with you once again.
Life, you and I have been long together.

2. Exclamatory expressions, including interjections. As —

Alas! poor Yorick! I knew him, Horatio.
Hurrah! Victory! The battle has been won!

3. Parenthetical words or phrases introduced into the sentence for various reasons. As —

By the way, I met your friend yesterday.
Well, I must leave you. Now, come to see me soon.
He reached the house, it seems, too late to be of service.

552. We sometimes find sentences that contain what are called pleonastic words, used for emphasis, or to call attention to what is to be spoken of. As in —

Thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me.
The boy, O where was he?

In parsing we call such words "independent by pleonasm."

553. Compound Elements. — Any part of a sentence, whether an element or a modifier, may be compounded of two or more simple elements, usually joined by co-ordinating conjunctions. Thus:

In Him we live and move. He is both wise and good.
Speak firmly but kindly. Learn who he is and where he is.

Exercise 232. — Analyze these sentences, and show which elements of each sentence are compound:

1. There health and plenty cheered the laboring swain. 2. Regular and daily exercise was the origin and secret of his health. 3. Gayly rode the hunters through the valleys or over the hills. 4. Love for study, a desire to do right, and care in the choice of friends, were traits of his character. 5. We were deeply impressed by the majesty and sublimity of the cataract and its surroundings. 6. Which would they choose, to live at peace with none, or to die at peace with all? 7. Either sooner or later temperance fortifies and purifies the heart. 8. Make the house where gods may dwell, beautiful, entire, and clean.

554. Elliptical Sentences. — We often shorten our sentences by omitting one or more words which are not needed to show our meaning, but which must be expressed when the sentence is analyzed. The ellipsis, or omission, may generally be readily supplied. The following are examples:

I did not know [that] he was dead.
This is the book [which] you gave me.
The tale is wonderful if [it is] true.
John is older than his sister [is old].
Come as soon as you can [come].
You speak as [you would speak] if you doubted me.
He treats me as [he treats] a friend.
He will return, but no one knows when [he will return].
[It is] no matter what you think.
Though [he was] poor, he was generous.

555. Clauses and Clause Connectives. — The different kinds of clauses must be carefully distinguished, and their connection with the rest of the sentence indicated clearly. The following forms may be used:

- | | | |
|------|---|--|
| I. | — is an Adjective clause modifying the noun (or pronoun) — The clause-connective is | <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. The relative pronoun who, which, that, as. 2. The relative adverb where, when, whence, why, etc. |
| II. | — is an Adverb clause modifying the verb (adj. or adv.) — by denoting time, place, cause, manner, comparison, condition, concession, purpose, etc. The clause-connective is | <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. The conj. adv. where, when, while, whence, as, etc. 2. The sub. conj. till, before, after, if, for, because, as, than, that, etc. |
| III. | — is a
Noun clause; used | <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. As subject of the verb —. 2. As object of the verb —. 3. As object of the prep. —. 4. As subjective complement of —. 5. In apposition with the noun —. 6. To explain the anticipative subject (or object) it. |
| | The clause-connective is | <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. The conj. pro. what, whatever, whoever, etc. 2. The conj. adj. which, what, etc. 3. The conj. adv. how, why, when, where, etc. 4. The sub. conj. that or whether. |

556. In studying selections for analysis and parsing, observe the following directions:

1. Consult the dictionary for the meaning of unfamiliar words.
2. Transpose the words into their common prose order, unless the construction seems clear to you.

3. Select the clauses, and show how each is used.
4. Classify the sentence, and analyze each part of it.

Exercise 233. — (a) Classify the clauses in these sentences, and show, according to the preceding forms, how each is used.

(b) Parse the clause-connectives.

1. We acquire the strength that we overcome. 2. O Solitude! where are the charms that sages have seen in thy face? 3. Life is what we make it. 4. Love not sleep, lest thou come to poverty. 5. What pleases you will please me. 6. The fact is that he has betrayed my confidence. 7. He knew not that the chieftain lay unconscious of his son. 8. It is in vain that you seek to escape.

9. While he slept the enemy came. 10. What he spake, though it lacked form a little, was not madness. 11. All that he does is to distribute what others produce. 12. He that fights and runs away may live to fight another day. 13. The best of what we do and are is poor enough. 14. I thank God that I never hated any man because he was poor or because he was ignorant. 15. A great many men, if put into the right position, would be Columbuses. 16. No wonder you are deaf to all I say. 17. He whistled as he went, for want of thought. 18. Nothing waxeth old sooner than a good turn or a favor. 19. When faith is lost, when honor dies, the man is dead. 20. Be silent, or say something better than silence. 21. Patience is so like Fortitude, that she seems either her sister or her daughter.

22. His misery was such that none of his friends could refrain from weeping. 23. What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted? 24. Thrice is he armed who hath his quarrel just; and he but naked, though locked up in steel, whose conscience with injustice is corrupted. 25. Still the wonder grew that one small head could carry all he knew. 26. When Strength and Justice are true yoke-fellows, where can be found a mightier pair than they? 27. You will gain a good reputation, if you endeavor to be what you desire to appear. 28. He made it clear that the plan was impossible. 29. He felt as though himself were he on whose sole arm hung victory.

30. Whoever thinks a faultless piece to see,
Thinks what ne'er was, nor is, nor e'er shall be.

Exercise 234. — Analyze the following sentences, classifying the clauses, and parsing the words:

1. To dare is great, but to bear is greater. 2. Write it on your heart that every day is the best day of the year. 3. Heaven is for those who think of it. 4. Live as though life were earnest, and life will be so. 5. Sweet it is to have done the thing one ought. 6. He that loveth makes his own the grandeur that he loves. 7. "Don't cross the bridge till you come to it" is a proverb old and of excellent wit. 8. There's nothing so contagious as pure openness of heart. 9. Who does the best his circumstance allows, does well, acts nobly; angels could do no more. 10. He is not worthy of the honeycomb that shuns the hives because the bees have stings.

11. Find thou always time to say some earnest word between the idle talk. 12. Duties are ours, but events are God's. 13. Brooding all day will not arm a man against misery. 14. Nothing that is shall perish utterly. 15. There's nothing but what's bearable as long as a man can work. 16. It is better to fight for the good than to rail at the ill. 17. Love all, trust a few, do wrong to none. 18. Corn growing, larks singing, garden full of flowers, fresh air on the sea — O, it is wonderful! 19. We always may be what we might have been. 20. It isn't so much what a man has that makes him happy, as it is what he doesn't want.

21. We are made happy by what we are, not by what we have. 22. A man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for? 23. It's very easy finding reasons why other folks should be patient. 24. Who laughs at crooked men needs walk very straight. 25. We are such stuff as dreams are made on, and our little life is rounded with a sleep. 26. He who neglects the present moment throws away all he has. 27. "One soweth and another reapeth" is a verity that applies to evil as well as good. 28. Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind. 29. Said he, "All that I am, my mother made me." 30. Since my country calls me, I obey. 31. The days are made on a loom whereof the warp and woof are past and future time. 32. Let me make the songs of a people, and I care not who makes the laws.

33. Words pass as wind, but where great deeds were done
A power abides, transfused from sire to son.

557. Variety of Expression.—Among the many ways of varying our forms of expression are the following:

1. Passive forms may be used for active, and vice versa. Thus:

All may make mistakes. Mistakes may be made by all.

2. The introductory there or it may be used. Thus:

- | | |
|-------------------------------|---|
| 1. A messenger came. | 1. There came a messenger. |
| 2. To retreat was impossible. | 2. It was impossible to retreat. |

3. Words may be expanded to phrases, and phrases to clauses. Thus:

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. Japanese tea. | 1. Tea raised in Japan . |
| 2. The inventor of the telephone . | 2. He that invented the telephone . |
| 3. Before sailing . | 3. Before they had sailed . |
| 4. The voyage having begun . | 4. When the voyage had begun . |

4. Clauses may be contracted to phrases. Thus:

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. Gray, who wrote the poem . | 1. Gray, the author of the poem . |
| 2. Regions that Stanley explored . | 2. Regions explored by Stanley . |
| 3. After we left Paris . | 3. Having left Paris . |
| 4. I thought that he was worthy . | 4. I thought him worthy . |
| 5. Come before the sun has risen . | 5. Come before sunrise . |

5. Simple sentences may be combined into either compound or complex sentences. Thus:

The Americans were not contending for money. They were contending for a principle. They refused to receive the tea.

The Americans were not contending for money, but for a principle, and they refused to receive the tea. (Compound.) Or:

As the Americans were not contending for money, but for a principle, they refused to receive the tea. (Complex.)

6. Negative may be used for affirmative assertions, and interrogative for assertive sentences. Thus:

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1. Such pleasures attracted him. | 1. Such pleasures were not unattractive to him. |
| 2. We have suffered enough. Let us defend our rights. | 2. Have we not suffered enough? Shall we not defend our rights? |

Exercise 235. — 1. Change the italicized expression in some of the ways mentioned in the preceding section without changing the meaning. Describe the change you have made.

1. The author of the book is in Egypt. 2. The note is payable on demand. 3. He canceled his liabilities. 4. I shall see you on my return. 5. They thought me honest. 6. I gave you the book that you might read it. 7. If you call you will see him. 8. Morning dawning, all fears were dispelled. 9. Intemperance ruins many a youth. 10. No place is like home. 11. It is by careful saving that men grow rich. 12. Shame being lost, all is lost. 13. We did not know that our friend was ill. 14. The miser is unhappy. 15. No man is perfect. 16. As the king was dead, a dispute arose as to the succession. 17. The light struggles dimly through the windows which are darkened by dust. 18. Many men who have made wonderful inventions have died poor. 19. After passing Congress the bill was signed by the President. 20. The treaty which Jay negotiated was approved by the Senate.

2. Combine the following groups of simple sentences into compound or complex sentences.

1. Sir Walter Raleigh received from Queen Elizabeth a charter. It gave him a large territory in America. He sent out an exploring expedition in 1584. 2. In 1607 three ships carried out a handful of people. They began the settlement of the United States. The largest one was named Susan Constant. 3. One of the most industrious men in the colony was John Smith. He was a young man. He had many adventures. He was fond of boasting of them. 4. The English government sent tea to Boston. A company of fifty men threw it into the sea. The men had disguised themselves as Indians. 5. Paul Revere was an active patriot. The British had started for Lexington. He was sent to tell this to Adams and Hancock. They were in that town. 6. Geoffrey Chaucer was the first great English poet. He was the author of the "Canterbury Tales." He was born in 1340. He died in 1400.

3. Paraphrase or expand some of the clauses in Exercises 233, 234.

558.

SELECTIONS FOR ANALYSIS AND PARSING

1. Attention is the stuff that memory is made of, and memory is accumulated genius.

2. Wise sayings often fall on barren ground: but a kind word is never thrown away.

3. A great writer has said that grace is beauty in action: I say that justice is truth in action.

4. How easy it is for one benevolent being to diffuse pleasure around him; and how truly is a kind heart a fountain of gladness, making everything in its vicinity freshen into smiles.

5. If we do not plant knowledge when young, it will give us no shade when we are old.

6. To know by rote is no knowledge; it is only a retention of what is intrusted to the memory. What a man truly knows may be disposed of without regard to the author, or reference to the book whence he had it.

7. Alexander the Great, reflecting on his friends' degenerating into sloth and luxury, told them that it was a most slavish thing to luxuriate, and a most royal thing to labor.

8. Oh, what a glory doth this world put on for him who, with a fervent heart, goes forth under the bright and glorious sky!

9. Few men learn the highest use of books. After life-long study many a man discovers too late that to have had the philosopher's stone availed nothing without the philosopher to use it.

10. If the poor and humble toil that we may have food, must not the high and glorious toil for him in return, that he have light, guidance, freedom, immortality?

11. Words are the leaves of the tree of knowledge, of which, if some fall away, a new succession takes their place.

12. The busy world shoves angrily aside
 The man who stands with arms akimbo set,
 Until the occasion tells him what to do;
 And he who waits to have his task marked out
 Shall die and leave his errand unfulfilled.

13. Failure after long perseverance is much grander than never to have a striving good enough to be called a failure.

14. When the Breton sailor puts to sea, his prayer is, "Keep me, my God, for my boat is so small and Thy ocean is so wide."

15. 'Tis greatly wise to talk with our past hours,
 And ask them what report they bore to heaven.

16. The happiest man is he who, being above the troubles which money brings, has his hands the fullest of work.

17. It is seldom that we find how great a man is until he dies.

18. Nine times out of ten, the best thing that can happen to a young man is to be tossed overboard and compelled to sink or swim for himself. In all my acquaintance I never knew a man to be drowned who was worth the saving.

19. If the way in which men express their thoughts is slipshod and mean, it will be very difficult for their thoughts themselves to escape being the same.

20. Learn from the earliest days to inure your principles against the perils of ridicule; you can no more exercise your reason, if you live in the constant dread of laughter, than you can enjoy your life if you are in the constant terror of death.

21. Toiling, rejoicing, sorrowing, onward through life he goes;
Each morning sees some task begun, each evening sees its close;
Something attempted, something done, has earned a night's repose.

22. For manhood is the one immortal thing
Beneath Time's changeful sky,
And, where it lightened once, from age to age,
Men come to learn, in grateful pilgrimage,
That length of days is knowing when to die.

23. Press on! surmount the rocky steep;
Climb boldly o'er the torrent's arch:
He fails alone who feebly creeps;
He wins who dares the hero's march.

Be thou a hero! let thy might
Tramp on eternal snows its way,
And through the ebon walls of night,
Hew down a passage unto day.

24. Young men who spend many years at school and college are too apt to forget the great end of life, which is to be and to do, not to read and brood over what other men have been and done.

25. A hundred years hence what difference will it make whether you were rich or poor, a peer or a peasant? But what difference may it not make whether you did what was right or what was wrong?

26.

Books are yours,
 Within whose silent chambers treasure lies
 Preserved from age to age; more precious far
 Than that accumulated store of gold
 And orient gems which, for a day of need,
 The sultan hides deep in ancestral tombs.
 These hoards of truth you can unlock at will.

— Wordsworth.

27.

Daughters of Time, the hypocritic Days,
 Muffled and dumb like barefoot dervishes,
 And marching single in an endless file,
 Bring diadems and fagots in their hands.
 To each they offer gifts after his will,
 Bread, kingdoms, stars, and sky that holds them all.
 I, in my pleachéd garden, watched the pomp,
 Forgot my morning wishes, hastily
 Took a few herbs and apples, and the Day
 Turned and departed silent. I, too late,
 Under her solemn fillet saw the scorn.

— R. W. Emerson.

28. To go into solitude, a man needs to retire as much from his chamber as from society. I am not solitary whilst I read and write, though nobody is with me. But if a man would be alone, let him look at the stars. The rays that come from those heavenly worlds will separate between him and what he touches. One might think the atmosphere was made transparent with this design, to give man, in the heavenly bodies, the perpetual presence of the sublime. Seen in the streets of cities, how great they are! If the stars should appear one night in a thousand years, how would men believe and adore, and preserve for many generations the remembrance of the city of God which had been shown.

— R. W. Emerson.

29.

Beneath those rugged elms, that yew tree's shade,
 Where heaves the turf in many a moldering heap,
 Each in his narrow cell forever laid,
 The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep.

The breezy call of incense-breathing morn,
The swallow twittering from the straw-built shed,
The cock's shrill clarion, or the echoing horn,
No more shall rouse them from their lowly bed.

For them no more the blazing hearth shall burn,
Or busy housewife ply her evening care;
No children run to lisp their sire's return,
Or climb his knees the envied kiss to share.

Oft did the harvest to their sickle yield,
Their furrow oft the stubborn glebe has broke;
How jocund did they drive their team afield!
How bowed the woods beneath their sturdy stroke!

Let not ambition mock their useful toil,
Their homely joys, and destiny obscure;
Nor grandeur hear with a disdainful smile
The short and simple annals of the poor.

The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Await alike the inevitable hour —
The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

Nor you, ye proud, impute to these the fault,
If Memory o'er their tomb no trophies raise,
Where, through the long-drawn aisle and fretted vault,
The pealing anthem swells the note of praise.

Can storied urn or animated bust
Back to its mansion call the fleeting breath?
Can Honor's voice provoke the silent dust,
Or Flattery soothe the dull cold ear of death?

Perhaps in this neglected spot is laid
Some heart once pregnant with celestial fire;
Hands that the rod of empire might have swayed,
Or waked to ecstasy the living lyre.

From Gray's Elegy in a Country Churchyard.

APPENDIX I

I. CASE AS A RELATION

1. It has seemed to the authors more consistent with the present condition of the English tongue, and less confusing to the learner, to treat case as a form, since the relation is nearly always marked in other ways — by position in the sentence, or by the use of prepositions. Moreover, to say that a noun is in the nominative or objective case is only to say that it has one of five, or one of seven, uses in the sentence. Just what the special use is, must be told in other language.

However, case is here presented as a relation that teachers may use the method they prefer.

2. In many languages nouns and pronouns have several case-forms to denote their different uses, or relations, in a sentence. In English, nouns, long ago, had five case-forms to suit the different uses, but at present nouns have only two such forms. Eight pronouns, however, have three case-forms.

3. By some grammarians the case of a noun or pronoun in English is understood to denote the relation in which it stands to other words in the sentence rather than to denote the form that marks those relations.

4. When case is treated as a relation rather than a form, it is customary to say that nouns in English have three cases.

These are named Nominative, Possessive, and Objective, from the principal relations that a noun may sustain to other words.

5. The Nominative Case is (primarily) the subject of a verb.
As — Victoria died in 1901.

The Possessive Case generally shows possession or ownership.
As — Victoria's reign ended in 1901.

The Objective Case denotes the relation of the object to the verb or preposition. As — The nation honored Victoria. The people mourned for Victoria.

6. These four are the most common relations or uses of the noun in a sentence. There are, however, eight other relations or uses that nouns may sometimes have in sentences. Nouns used in three of these eight ways are said to be in the nominative case because in these relations the nominative case-form of pronouns is required. Nouns having four other uses are said to be in the objective case because the objective case-form of the pronoun is generally required in these relations. A noun in the remaining relation — the appositive — is said to be in the same case as the noun it explains; that is, in any one of the three cases.

7. Case as a relation will, perhaps, be best understood from the following:

SUMMARY

A Noun is in the Nominative Case when used	{	1. as the subject of a verb. As — The hour has come.
		2. as the subjective complement of a verb. As — This is the hour .
		3. independently by address or exclamation. As — O fatal hour !
		4. absolutely with a participle. As — The hour having come —
		5. in apposition with another word in the nominative case. As — Noon, the hour of twelve, has come.

A Noun
is in the Possessive
Case when used

1. to denote ownership or possession. As — An hour's pleasure.
2. in apposition with another noun in the possessive case. As — His brother John's wife —

A Noun
is in the Objective
Case when used

1. as the object of a verb. As — Waste not an hour.
2. as the indirect object of a verb. As — He gave the hour no thought.
3. as the object of a preposition. As — Come at an early hour.
4. adverbially to modify a verb, adjective, or adverb. As — He waited an hour.
5. as the objective complement of a verb. As — Call midnight the hour.
6. as the subject of an infinitive. As — Hear the hour strike.
7. in apposition with another word in the objective case. As — Spend sixty minutes, a full hour.

II. LIST OF IRREGULAR VERBS

Forms now out of use or rare are as a rule omitted. Otherwise the list contains all verb-forms of the old conjugation printed in bold-faced type, and all irregular forms of the new conjugation printed in plain type. Where only part of the forms are irregular, the regular forms are given too.

III. THE SUBJUNCTIVE MODE

It appears to be impossible to frame a concise and exact definition of the Subjunctive mode, or descriptions of its functions. It has been treated as distinguished from the Indicative only where it has separate forms, for in such cases only does it have a palpably distinctive force. The Indicative mode has been described as the one that is used in stating a fact, or in asking a simple question of fact, while the Subjunctive is used to express a thought involving doubt, concession, or wish. Yet the same feeling of doubt or indeterminateness that characterizes the Subjunctive is often conveyed by the forms that are now assigned to the Indicative. For example, in the sentence,

Even if he fails in this, he will still persevere, the conditional force of the Indicative fails, appears to differ in degree, not in kind, from that of the Subjunctive fail in —

Even if he fail in this, he will still persevere. Again in —

Though he may be telling the truth, you cannot trust him, and

Though he be telling the truth, etc., the Indicative of the Potential phrase, may be telling, differs from the Subjunctive be telling, only in presenting the thought as somewhat less uncertain. Historically, it appears that the Indicative mode has borrowed something of the force of the Subjunctive; and in parsing the verb fails, or the Potential verb phrase may be telling, we may say that they are in the Indicative mode, and have the force of the Subjunctive (or are used with Subjunctive force).

There is, of course, the alternative treatment, which regards the Subjunctive as sharing the forms of the Indicative, rather than the Indicative as sharing the force of the Subjunctive. The second method appears to be more easy of comprehension; and as it leads to the same results when applied in the analysis of thought, it has been adopted here.

Other constructions in which a choice of modes is allowed are:

TEMPORAL CLAUSE.

Subjunctive. Wait till this tyranny be overpast.

Indicative. Wait till this tyranny is overpast.

PURPOSE CLAUSE.

Subjunctive. Let him take heed lest he fall.

Indicative. Let him take heed that he does not fall.

RESULT CLAUSE.

Subjunctive. So live that thou go not —

Indicative. So live that you do not go.

INDIRECT QUESTION.

Subjunctive. Which were the better course none could tell.

Indicative. Which was (or would be) the better course none could tell.

NOUN CLAUSE.

Subjunctive. The first requirement is that every man be in his place at the appointed hour.

Indicative. The first requirement is that every man shall be in his place at the appointed hour.

One form of condition, however, and one form of wish always require the verb to be distinctively in the Subjunctive mode. Examine the following sentences. In —

"If the owner were here he would not refuse permission," it is distinctly implied that the owner is not here. Such conditions, where the supposition is the opposite of the fact, are often called conditions contrary to fact. In the wish —

"O that this tale were true," it is clearly implied that the tale is not true. Such wishes may be termed unattainable wishes.

When the predicates of conditions contrary to fact or of unattainable wishes contain the word be, and when also they denote non-fulfillment in the present time, they are in the Subjunctive mode. When, however, these conditions and wishes relate to past time their verbs take the Indicative forms, as —

If you had been here, this would not have happened.

O had he been more careful.

So, also do other verbs than be in such conditions and wishes relating to time present or past, as —

If he saw you here, he would certainly be angry (or If he had seen).

O had I the wings of a dove I would fly.

We hear occasionally in careless speech such expressions as — "If he was here he would help."

"I would not do this if I was you." They are nevertheless as true violations of present correct usage as to say, "He doesn't know nothing about the matter."

The Potential phrases formed by the auxiliaries could, may, might, should, and would are sometimes treated as forms of the Subjunctive mode. It seems more consistent, however, and it certainly is much simpler, to class them as phrases in the Indicative mode with Subjunctive force, in such sentences as —

If he should remain he would be well entertained, I care not what you may do, and the like.

If one examines any extended selection of a careful author, he will find by far the largest portion of the verbs in the Indicative mode, for even where the Subjunctive might be employed its place is usually taken by the Indicative. Yet its part in the masterpieces of English literature is by no means an insignificant one, and the discriminating use of the Subjunctive lends a grace and delicacy to the expression of thought of which the most finished writers of today gladly avail themselves.

PART THREE

LESSONS IN COMPOSITION

CHAPTER I

CAPITALS, PUNCTUATION, ETC.

LESSON I

THE USE OF CAPITALS

One of the marks of a good writer is the proper use of capital letters. The most important rules for capitals are the following:

A Capital Letter should be used to begin —

1. Every sentence.
2. Every line of poetry.
3. Every direct quotation.
4. All individual or special names of persons, places, months, and days; as —

William Shakespeare, Spain, September, Saturday, Easter.

All words made from them; as —

Shakespearean, Spanish.

And all abbreviations of them; as —

Wm., Sept.

5. All names applied to God.

6. The principal words in titles. Thus:

The President of the United States.
"The Land of the Midnight Sun."

7. The words I and O should always be capitals.

[See Appendix II.]

Exercise 1. — Copy the following passages, using capital letters where they are needed. Give a reason for each change that you make.

(a) thus they answered — hoping, fearing, some in faith, and doubting some, — till a trumpet-voice, proclaiming, said, "my chosen people, come!"
then the drum,
lo! was dumb;

for the great heart of the nation, throbbing, answered, "lord, we come!"

(b) here we see the very same wolf — do not go near him, annie!
— the selfsame wolf that devoured little red ridinghood and her grandmother.

(c) "When you are older," said james's father, "you can read the 'iliad.'"

"o i know what that is," replied james, "it is a story about the grecian war written by a greek poet named homer. our teacher read some of it to us last friday."

Exercise 2. — Think of the most interesting story about an animal that you have ever read or heard. Write it briefly in your own words, paying particular attention to the use of capitals.

LESSON II

SOME RULES FOR PUNCTUATION

Writing is much clearer and easier to understand when it is properly punctuated, for punctuation-marks show where the sentences end and how they are divided. Some of the marks show also the kind of sentence. Other aids to clearness are the apostrophe, quotation-marks, and the hyphen. The following are simple rules for these marks.*

1. The Period [.] must be used after —

Every complete sentence that is not a question nor an exclamation.

All abbreviations or initial letters.

A heading, title, or signature, when used alone. [See p. 345.]

2. The Question-mark [?] must be used after —

Every complete question.

3. The Exclamation-point [!] must be used after —

Every expression that is very exclamatory.

4. The Comma [,] must be used to separate from the rest of the sentence —

The name of the person spoken to. Thus:

John, come forward.

A direct quotation, or each of the parts of one if it is divided.

The Comma must also be used to separate —

The parts of a series of three or more words of the same kind.

The flags were red, white, and blue.

The parts of a sentence that is made up of two or more sentences. Thus:

We have come, and you must go.

5. The Apostrophe ['] must be used to denote —

Possession.

The omission of letters in contracted words.

The plurals of letters, figures, etc. Thus:

Dot your i's. Your 4's are poor.

* A fuller treatment of punctuation will be found in Appendix II.

6. Quotation-marks [“ ”] must be used to inclose —

Every direct quotation, or each of the parts into which it is divided.

The title of a book or periodical, if the title is long.

7. The Hyphen [-] must be used between —

The parts of some compound words.

The syllables of a word written on different lines.

Exercise 1. — Tell why each punctuation-mark is used in these sentences:

1. How many days are there in a leap year?
2. Can Honor's voice provoke the silent dust?
3. Boys, have you ever read "Tom-Brown at Rugby"?
4. Now abideth faith, hope, charity.
5. The houses were low, narrow, and dingy.
6. Julius Cæsar wrote, "I came, I saw, I conquered."
7. "Experience keeps a dear school, but fools will learn in no other."
8. Which sounds better, "No, sir, I can't"; or, "Yes, ma'am, I'll try"?
9. "The Courtship of Miles Standish" was written by Henry W. Longfellow.

Exercise 2. — The old Greeks got on with very little punctuation. They even ran their words together, as in the following passage. Try rewriting this interesting little story, separating the words, and putting in punctuation where it is needed.

MrPopehowascrookedandcrosswastalkingwithayoungofficertheofficer saidhethoughtthatinacertain sentenceaninterrogationmarkwasneededdo youknowwhataninterrogationmarkissnarledoutthecrookedcrosslittleman itisacrookedlittlethingthataasksquestionssaidtheyoungmanandheshutup MrPopeforthatday.

Exercise 3. — Think of the most amusing incident that you can recall. It may be something that you have seen or heard at your home, on the schoolground, or in the schoolroom. Make a brief story of it, writing as simply and straightforwardly as you can, as if for a little child to read. Attend particularly to the punctuation.

LESSON III

QUOTATIONS

1. When we introduce the exact language of another person into what we are writing, we make what is called a Direct Quotation. Thus:

Prince Edward and his division were so hard pressed that a message was sent to the King, asking for aid. "Is my son killed?" said the King. "No, sire." "Is he wounded or thrown to the ground?" "No, sire," said the messenger; "but he is very hard pressed." "Then," said the King, "I shall send no aid; because I am resolved that the honor of a great victory shall be his."

2. In writing a direct quotation, we must remember three things:

- (1) To begin it with a capital.
- (2) To inclose it in quotation-marks.
- (3) To separate it from the rest of the sentence by a comma, unless it is a question or an exclamation.

If the quotation consists of several sentences, it may be preceded by a colon [:].

3. When we introduce anything into our writing as a thought or an opinion of another without using his exact language, we make an Indirect Quotation. Thus:

DIRECT. The King said, "I have lost the hearts of my people."

INDIRECT. The King said that he had lost the hearts of his people.

Indirect quotations frequently begin with the word "that," and they require no quotation-marks.

4. A Divided Quotation is one which is given in two parts, with some of the writer's own words between.

Each part should be inclosed in quotation-marks, and should generally be separated from the rest by commas. Thus:

"I propose to fight it out on this line," wrote General Grant, "if it takes all summer."

5. In writing a conversation between two persons, what each one says should generally occupy a separate paragraph. Thus:

"Colonel Miller," asked General Brown, "can you silence that battery?"

"I'll try, sir," replied the gallant colonel.

Exercise 1. — Change the direct quotations in this lesson into indirect quotations.

Exercise 2. — Rewrite the following passage, inserting quotation-marks where they are needed:

The gentleman turned to the boy who was sitting on the log, and said, Where do you live?

Sir?

Where do you live?

The boy hesitated a moment as if he did not understand him. Then he said,

I don't know, sir. I don't live anywhere.

The little boy in the wagon laughed.

Don't know where you live, said the gentleman. Well, what are you doing out here?

I have been catching butterflies.

Exercise 3. — Continue this conversation. What will the gentleman ask next? What will the boy on the log reply? What questions may the little boy in the wagon ask, and what will be the replies? As the gentleman and the little boy drive away, what will they say to each other? Write this all out, paying particular attention to the use of quotation-marks.

LESSON IV

REVIEW OF CAPITALS, PUNCTUATION, AND QUOTATION-MARKS

Exercises. — Copy one or more of the following selections, or write from the dictation of your teacher, using capitals and punctuation marks correctly. Attend carefully also to the quotations.

1. Over and over again,
No matter which way I turn,
I always find in the book of life
Some lesson I have to learn.
I must take my turn at the mill;
I must grind out the golden grain;
I must work at my task with a resolute will,
Over and over again.

2. William H. Prescott, John L. Motley, and George Bancroft are distinguished American historians. Prescott wrote "The Conquest of Mexico." Motley wrote "The Rise of the Dutch Republic." Bancroft wrote the "History of the United States."

3. Know old Cambridge? Hope you do.
Born there? Don't say so! I was too:
Born in a house with a gambrel roof, —
Standing still, if you must have proof.

Yes, in the old gambrel-roofed house looking out on the College Green, lived Rev. Dr. Abiel Holmes — pastor of the First Church in Cambridge, Massachusetts, but of wider fame as the author of the "American Annals" — and there was born to him the son, Oliver Wendell, who was to shed new luster on the family name as the brightest of American poets and essayists. His birthdate is August 29, 1809.

4. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, the most popular of American poets, was born in Portland, Maine, Feb. 27, 1807. His father was a well-known jurist, and, like Bryant, he was descended from John Alden, the youngest of the Mayflower's Pilgrims.

From 1835, the time of his appointment as Professor of Modern Languages and Literature in Harvard University, till his death, March 24, 1882, Longfellow lived in the stately old Cambridge mansion occupied by Washington during the siege of Boston, 1775-76.

5. "Our enemies are before us," exclaimed the Spartans at Thermopylæ. "And we are before them," was the cool reply of Leonidas. "Deliver your arms," came the message from Xerxes. "Come and take them," was the answer Leonidas sent back. A Persian soldier said: "You will not be able to see the sun for flying javelins and arrows." "Then we will fight in the shade," replied a Lacedæmonian.

CHAPTER II

THE CHOICE OF WORDS.

LESSON V

SYNONYMS

We often find several words nearly alike in meaning, each one of which we must learn to use in its proper place. Such words are called Synonyms. Thus:

Ancient, old, aged, elderly, antiquated, are synonyms, for, in a general way, they have the same meaning; but we say "ancient customs," "old trees," "aged or elderly persons," "antiquated fashions."

Synonyms are words that have the same or nearly the same meaning.

Exercise 1. — 1. Separate the following words into five groups, each containing five synonyms.

2. Use the words of each group in expressions that will illustrate their meaning. Thus:

"A plot to rob the bank"; "the arrangement of words"; "a scheme for raising money"; "a conspiracy to assassinate the king."

plot	misfortune	grand	beautiful	reduce diminish	scheme	calamity	superb	free liberal	decrease	plan	disaster	magnificent splendid	generous	abate	conspiracy	catastrophe
mishap	gorgeous	lavish	lessen	arrangement

Exercise 2. — 1. Find one or two synonyms for each of the following words:

Busy; bold; honest; counterfeit; obscure; barren; appease; cheerful; dead; larceny; defeat; certain; collect; death; frighten; censure; frank; famous; obstinate; spacious.

2. Give one or two words that are opposite in meaning to each of the foregoing.

Exercise 3. — Read each phrase, substituting synonyms for the italicized words.

1. Inspid fruit. 2. Gnarled oaks. 3. Relentless foes. 4. Chaplet of flowers. 5. Sepulchers of kings. 6. Auspicious omens. 7. Debtor's assets. 8. Martial music. 9. Voluntary offering. 10. A gluttonous fellow. 11. Waning power. 12. Obsequies of a ruler. 13. Imprudent methods. 14. Infallible signs. 15. Indelible impressions. 16. Merchants' liabilities. 17. Raleigh's explorations. 18. Frugal habits. 19. Brutal actions. 20. Benevolent feelings.

LESSON VI

SYNONYMS

Exercise 1. — Substitute words or expressions as synonyms for the italicized words.

1. Prepare your lessons. 2. Honor your parents. 3. The thief was caught. 4. He spoke excitedly. 5. Peacefully slept the weary children. 6. A furious gale was raging. 7. A few dilapidated old buildings still stand in the deserted hamlet. 8. We urged his going. 9. The Nile overflows once a year. 10. Much fatigued we reached the end of our journey. 11. Farming is a pleasant occupation. 12. There is no cause sacred enough to justify a violation of the truth. 13. We resolved to make the attempt in spite of all difficulties. 14. The prisoners were condemned and executed. 15. He addressed the mariners. 16. She was the one who inherited her uncle's wealth. 17. We awoke as soon as the sun rose. 18. What ought I to do? 19. After the sun had gone down, we resumed the journey that to some of us seemed without end.

Exercise 2. — Substitute sentences of equivalent meaning.

1. The opposing forces stood in battle array. 2. The supply constantly increases. 3. Plants are the habitations of insects. 4. They traversed the lofty mountains that surround this beautiful region. 5. The majority of mankind earn their livelihood by hard work. 6. The army was animated by the spirit of its leader. 7. Sailors encounter constant perils. 8. The intelligence was brought by a courier. 9. Our liberties were not secured without a struggle.

LESSON VII

VARIETY OF EXPRESSION

Exercise 1. — The Wide-Awake Debating Club is to discuss this question: "Resolved, That life in the country is more pleasant for young people than life in the city." Write what you would say on either side of the question, if you were a member of the club.

Exercise 2. — Write what might be said by your opponent on the other side of the question.

Exercise 3. — Rewrite one of the preceding exercises, trying to make it clear and interesting to a child in the fourth grade. Use the simplest words and expressions you can think of, but do not change the meaning very much.

LESSON VIII

SYNONYMS DISCRIMINATED

Very few synonyms have exactly the same meaning. Sometimes the difference between two words is so slight that only careful study will show what it is. Sometimes it is so great that one word cannot be safely used for the other in any sentence. Every one who wishes to use words correctly must be on the watch for these differences. It is not enough to use the almost right word; we must use, if we can, the exactly right word. If we mean "a mischievous boy," we must not say "a wicked boy." If we wish to speak of "a large sum of money," we must not say "an immense sum of money."

Exercise 1. — What is the difference between — a lazy boy	and an idle boy;

a large man	and a great man;
a large gift	and a generous gift;
what one wants	and what one needs ;
he hopes	and he expects ;
a trade	and an occupation ;

peeling fruit	and	paring fruit;
a street	and	a road ;
a savage dog	and	a surly dog;
an indignant man	and	an angry man.

Exercise 2. — Study the words in each of the following pairs till you think that you understand the meaning of them. Then use each of the words so as to show that you can discriminate between them.

1. That is healthful which gives health; that is healthy which has health.

2. To remember is to call to mind readily; to recollect is to recall with effort. We can sometimes recollect what we do not remember.

3. Habit is the result of custom. What is customary soon grows to be habitual.

4. A man's reputation depends on what he appears to be; his character is what he really is.

5. Brave and courageous men do their duty, even though suffering from fear or disapproval; bold and reckless men neither fear nor care.

6. Crimes are offenses against law; sins are offenses against the right.

7. We convince a man by argument; we persuade him by advice and entreaty.

Exercise 3. — Explain the difference in meaning between the words of each pair. Thus:

Mountains and clouds are high; masts and trees are tall.

Do not say "I guess so" if you know enough about the subject to say "I think so."

- | | | |
|------------------|------------------------|--------------------------|
| 1. high, tall; | 4. silent, quiet; | 7. pardon, forgive; |
| 2. glance, look; | 5. economical, stingy; | 8. kill, murder; |
| 3. guess, think; | 6. hear, understand; | 9. see, notice, observe. |

Exercise 4. — Discriminate between the words in each pair, and use them in sentences.

- | | | |
|-----------------------|----------------------|-------------------------|
| 1. love, like; | 4. bring, fetch; | 7. believe, think; |
| 2. export, transport; | 5. bear, carry; | 8. learn, teach; |
| 3. follow, pursue; | 6. discover, invent; | 9. education, learning. |

LESSON IX

WORDS RELATED IN MEANING

Many words in the language are connected in meaning, though they may not be sufficiently alike to be called synonyms. It will be interesting to study some of them.

Exercise 1. — Find several words or expressions that are related in their meaning to each of the following. Thus true, correct, definite are related to "exact," though not strictly synonymous with it. Explain the difference in each case.

exact	ambush	size	inquiry exchange	banner	orifice	deny prudent	ample	journey	error
find	alter	docile	ignorant
taciturn	maintain	necessary	culpable frighten	origin	hinder	sagacious
future	strength	speed	insane
veteran	savage	frosty	veracity evening	dominate	look	obstinate procrastinate	concur	certain	request
aged	occupant

Exercise 2. — Answer these questions thus:

"A just decision is one that is fair to all parties concerned."

"Authentic reports are such as come from a reliable source."

(a) What is a —

1. just decision? 2. salubrious climate? 3. man of veracity? 4. voracious statement? 5. voracious animal? 6. majority of five? 7. minority of three? 8. plurality of seven? 9. ambiguous remark?

(b) What are —

1. sanguinary battles? 2. pugnacious people? 3. contemporaneous events? 4. tyrannical rulers? 5. arbitrary rules? 6. maritime countries? 7. hospitable persons? 8. authentic reports? 9. junior partners?

Exercise 3. — Study the face of the boy in the picture on the next page. Does it express wonder, surprise, interest, curiosity, amusement, amazement, or astonishment? Tell what each word means, and show that the one you have chosen is the best.

LESSON X

RIGHT WORDS AND WRONG WORDS

Here are two lists of words and phrases. Those on the left are words to be avoided. They are words that are not used by people who know how to speak and write correctly. Those on the right are good words which everybody ought to use. Read the lists carefully and resolve that hereafter whenever you speak or write you will choose the good words and shun the bad.

LESSON XI

EXPRESSIONS TO BE AVOIDED

Study the following sentences and note the expressions which should be avoided. You will probably need to refer to them many times.

To be Avoided.

1. I wish everybody would mind their own business.
2. I expect you got wet yesterday.
3. If I had have known you were coming, I should have stayed at home.
4. He felt kind of sorry at leaving us.
5. This is all the farther we have gone.
6. William makes his R's just like I do.
7. Aren't you most through?

To be Used.

1. I wish everybody would mind his own business.
2. I suppose you got wet yesterday.
3. If I had known you were coming, I should have stayed at home.
4. He felt rather sorry at leaving us.
5. This is as far as we have gone.
6. William makes his R's just as I do.
7. Aren't you almost through?

1. Their should be used when the antecedent is plural, his when the antecedent is singular. See p. 123, § 298.

2. Expect refers to the future. We can say "I expect that he will come tomorrow," but not "I expect that he came yesterday."

3. Had known is the past perfect tense of the verb know. See p. 238.

4. Kind of should be used only in such expressions as "this kind of goods." Avoid also kind o', kinder (in the sense of kind of), sort o', and sorter.

5. All the farther, in the sense of as far as, is simply bad English.

6. Like is a preposition and is properly used in such expressions as "He looks like me." As is a conjunctive adverb. See p. 200, § 494.

7. Most is the superlative form of many or much. See p. 135, § 325.

Exercise. — Read or write the following sentences, filling the blanks with the words that should be used.

1. If you — come by the morning train I could have met you at the station. 2. I — you are tired after your long walk. 3. Dinner is — ready. 4. Everyone is expected to bring — own luncheon. 5. Spring Lake is — lonesome after the tourists have left. 6. Frank told me that was — the lesson went. 8. Why don't you signal to him — I do?

LESSON XII

RIGHT WORDS AND WRONG WORDS

The Wrong Words

1. I can't go without my father gives me the money.

2. Potatoes are going to be plenty next fall.

3. Next month I am to have a raise in my salary.

4. Mr. Smith has rode the same bicycle for twenty years.

5. When I got up the house was real warm.

6. Aunt May is feeling some better this morning.

7. The old cat came with us a little ways.

The Right Words

1. I can't go unless my father gives me the money.

2. Potatoes are going to be plentiful next fall.

3. Next month I am to have a rise (or increase) in my salary.

4. Mr. Smith has ridden the same bicycle for twenty years.

5. When I got up the house was really (or very) warm.

6. Aunt May is feeling somewhat better this morning.

7. The old cat came with us a little way.

1. Without is a preposition. Unless is a subordinating conjunction. See p. 36 and p. 215.

2. Plenty is a noun. Plentiful is an adjective.

3. Raise is a verb. Rise, in this case, is a noun.
4. Rode is the past tense, ridden the past participle, of the verb ride.
5. Real is an adjective, but an adverb is needed.
6. Some is an adjective. Somewhat is an adverb.
7. We may say a way but not a ways.

Exercise. — Use the right words to fill the blanks in the following sentences:

1. Chestnuts are very — this year.
2. This check is worthless — you sign your name to it.
3. The firm has promised me a — in salary the first of November.
4. Nobody has ever — this mustang.
5. Judge Henson lives a little — beyond the stone schoolhouse.
6. The thermometer is — higher than it was yesterday.
7. If you will be — quiet I will read you a story.

LESSON XIII

WORDS SIMILAR IN FORM

Words nearly alike in form or pronunciation may have very different meanings. Such pairs of words require special attention. Study carefully the following list and note the differences.

Except, to leave out,

Affect, to act upon, to influence,

Love, to regard with affection,

Lay, reclined,

Sat, took a seat,

Captivate, to charm,

Stop, to halt,

Accept, to receive, to agree to ;

Effect, to produce, to accomplish ;

Like, to be pleased with, to enjoy ;

Laid, placed [see § 438];

Set, placed ;

Capture, to catch ;

Stay, to remain.

Exercise. — Fill the blanks with the appropriate words selected from the preceding list.

1. Please — my thanks for your kindness.
2. How was he — by the news?
3. I — good music.
4. Have you ever — up all night?
5. He — it away in his safe.
6. He — in bed until noon.
7. I — my neighbors, but I do not — them.
8. His troubles have — his mind. 9. I cannot — your invitation. 10. She — down to rest. 11. The Japanese — three of the Russian cruisers. 12. How long will you — in San Francisco? 13. Although he was greatly — by the loss of his friend, he did not cease working until he had — his purpose.

LESSON XIV

WORDS SOMEWHAT ALIKE

Exercise 1. — (a) From the dictionary learn the difference in meaning between the words in each of the following pairs:

1. Prescribe, proscribe; 2. proceed, precede; 3. impute, impugn; 4. statue, statute; 5. species, specie; 6. respectively, respectfully; 7. expect, suspect; 8. convince, convict; 9. lightning, lightening; 10. fly, flee; 11. liniment, lineament; 12. ingenious, ingenuous; 13. stationery, stationary.

(b) Use words from the first three pairs to complete these sentences:

1. What did the physician —? 2. In what order did they — to the temple? 3. The band — the regiment. 4. You should not — wrong motives to me. 5. The lawyer — the honesty of the witness.

(c) Use each of the remaining words in a sentence or phrase, to show that you can discriminate between them.

Exercise 2. — Tell the difference in meanings of these words, and use each word in a sentence:

1. Missives, missiles; 2. emigrants, immigrants; 3. pour, pore; 4. diseased, deceased; 5. prospective, retrospective; 6. luxurious, luxuriant; 7. equity, iniquity; 8. retaliate, reciprocate; 9. principal, principle; 10. rout, route; 11. propose, purpose; 12. contemptible, contemptuous; 13. complement, compliment; 14. human, humane.

LESSON XV

UNNECESSARY WORDS

Do not use words that are not needed to express the thought clearly.

For example; got implies action, and should not be used with have to show simple possession, as in — We have got ten fingers.

Exercise 1. — Relieve the following sentences of all needless words or expressions:

1. I have not got any money left. 2. My friend got badly hurt yesterday. 3. A widow woman called to see you. 4. From whence came they? 5. Smell of these flowers. 6. Taste of this fruit. 7. You had ought to read more. 8. I can never find no time. 9. You have stood up too long: sit down a while. 10. He has lost one-half of his money. 11. Put the vase up on to the shelf. 12. From hence we infer his inability. 13. This fact is universally known by all. 14. Payment must be made by the latter end of the month. 15. You hadn't ought to use any unnecessary words. 16. Where have you been to? 17. Had I have known it, I should have gone also. 18. Edward and James they both went. 19. A strait connects them together.

Exercise 2. — Point out the superfluous words, and show why they are unnecessary.

1. He is equally as anxious as you. 2. Cover the plants over. 3. I shall always distrust him whenever he speaks. 4. The journey will require three weeks' time. 5. Keep off of the grass. 6. This evidence is wonderful and surprising. 7. You cannot give to a more worthier object. 8. He may probably go, but he cannot possibly succeed. 9. He was filled with unbounded admiration. 10. I shall first begin by showing the defects, and then afterwards I shall finish by showing the excellences of the system. 11. He abhorred and detested the idea of being in debt. 12. The funeral obsequies were largely attended. 13. I was just going to go. 14. You do very well for a new beginner. 15. The fort was completely surrounded on all sides by the enemy. 16. What you say is very true. 17. Thank those who are coworkers together.

LESSON XVI

INAPPROPRIATE WORDS

Avoid all unsuitable, or exaggerated, or "slang" expressions.

It is useless to try to describe all kinds of things by such words as "nice," "lovely," "awful," "splendid," or "perfectly immense"; find some other adjective that will express your meaning exactly, and remember that it is no disgrace to speak good English everywhere.

Exercise 1. — Substitute for the italicized words suitable, descriptive expressions.

1. Nice weather; a nice picture; nice clothes; a nice man; a nice lecture; a nice ride; nice music; a nice plan. 2. An awful pen; awful good; awfully pretty; awfully dear; awfully slow. 3. Splendid pudding; splendid entertainment; a perfectly splendid sermon. 4. This sidewalk is just too lovely for anything. 5. The delay was disgusting. 6. What a pretty steamship! 7. Those shoes are an immense fit. 8. I just adore caramels. 9. I hate long stories. 10. The coffee seems mighty weak. 11. What a horrid mistake. 12. A perfectly lovely salad.

Exercise 2. — Use correctly in sentences: nice, awful, horrid, splendid, lovely, disgusting.

Exercise 3. — Select five words that may correctly describe a brook, a speech, music, Niagara Falls, a mountain path.

LESSON XVII

BIG AND LITTLE WORDS

The simplest words are usually the best. Never use a long word when a short one will say what you mean. Never use a phrase when you can put your thought in a word. Avoid big, high-sounding expressions like "a lurid conflagration" for "a fire," "a denizen of the metropolis" for "a city man," "a monarch of the forest" for "a tree"; especially beware of old, worn-out phrases such as "trip the light fantastic toe" for dance, "in the arms of Morpheus" for asleep. The fewer words you can use, the better, provided that you make your meaning entirely clear.

Exercise 1. — Substitute simpler or more appropriate expressions for those that are italicized.

1. He resides in an elegant mansion. 2. The barn was consumed by the devouring element. 3. We attended divine service. 4. He was cut down by the scythe of Time. 5. She was ushered into existence in Maine. 6. The streams are bound by winter's icy chain. 7. The ice broke, and the boy was launched into eternity. 8. We were conveyed to the dearest spot on earth in an express wagon. 9. Crowds congregated to witness the racc. 10. Divest yourself of your outer habiliments, and stay with us.

11. There were some gorgeously appareled members of the gentler sex present. 12. Immediately upon our establishment in the hostelry we partook of a sumptuous repast.

LESSON XVIII

AMBIGUOUS EXPRESSIONS

Try to frame your sentences in such a way that they cannot be misunderstood. Expressions which can mean either of two things are said to be ambiguous.

Thus the sentence "No one should drink this water without being boiled" might be taken to mean either (1) "Every person should be boiled before he drinks this water," or (2) "No one should drink this water without first boiling it."

Exercise 1. — Point out the two meanings which these sentences may have. Then reconstruct each sentence so that it shall have only one meaning:

1. Ask how old Mrs. Jones is. 2. What I want is common sense.
3. The judge told the lawyer that he was not an authority. 4. I have not heard from one of my friends. 5. She has given me more than you.
6. My friend's father died while he was in Europe. 7. I promised her mother that I would call upon her sister. 8. I had just met my partner a ruined man. 9. We met the same horse tramping through the snow in our rubber boots.

The most frequent cause of ambiguity is a wrong order of the words. Try to arrange the parts of a sentence so that it may convey as clearly as possible just the meaning intended.

Exercise 2. — Try to improve the arrangement of the words in the following expressions, and explain why changes are needed.

1. For sale: soft men's hats, black ladies' gloves, and leggings for children with or without feet. 2. We came very near being killed more than once. 3. He bought a new pair of gloves. 4. Carpets and clothes beaten and washed. 5. All rivers are not so swift. 6. Solve the next example to the end but one. 7. I should like to visit you very much. 8. I only recite in the morning. 9. I heard all you said very distinctly. 10. A fine view was obtained from the upper story of Niagara Falls.

11. Mrs. James only has one child. 12. I have been trying to have my watch repaired every day this week. 13. I never expect to be any taller than I am now. 14. Try to always put adverbs in their proper place.

LESSON XIX

VARIETY IN EXPRESSION

Exercise. — Read the following selection, substituting for the italicized words and phrases others that are synonymous or nearly so. Have you improved the narrative in any way? Give your reason.

I am sure that you have read accounts of voyages in the Arctic regions. You have been told of the sufferings of the crews during the long winters, amid the ice and snow; and you have heard how, during that dismal period, there is total darkness, for the sun never rises for weeks and months together. On the other hand, these northern regions often present a more cheerful picture. During midsummer, the long darkness of winter is atoned for by perpetual sunshine. At midnight there is still the full brilliance of day, and the sun, though low, no doubt, has not passed below the horizon. Even in the northerly parts of Europe we can see the midnight sun. Lord Dufferin, in his delightful narrative of a cruise, entitled "Letters from High Latitudes," gives an interesting illustration of the perplexities arising from endless daylight. It appears that everything went on happily until the fatal moment when the yacht crossed the Arctic Circle. Then it was that dire tribulation arose among the poultry. A fine cock was the cause of the trouble. Knowing his duty, he always liked to be particular about performing the important task of crowing at sunrise. This he could do regularly, so long as the yacht remained in reasonable latitudes, where the sun behaved properly. But when they crossed the Arctic Circle, the cock was confronted with a wholly new experience. The sun never set in the evening, and consequently never had to rise in the morning. What was the distracted bird to do? He did everything. He burst into occasional fits of terrific crowing at all sorts of hours, then he gave up crowing altogether, but finding that did not mend matters, he took to crowing incessantly. Exhaustion was succeeded by delirium, and rather than live any longer in a universe where the sun was capable of pranks so heartless, the indignant fowl flung himself from the vessel and perished in the Arctic Ocean.

— R. S. Ball.

CHAPTER III

LETTER-WRITING

LESSON XX

THE HEADING

The most general use of written language is for Letters which we send addressed to absent persons, to whom we have something to say.

1. Kinds. — Letters may, of course, be written upon any subject. They may serve in transacting business; they may give or ask for information or advice; or they may take the place of ordinary conversation between friends and acquaintances. Sometimes they are formal, sometimes familiar.

2. Form. — By custom a formal letter is made to consist of six parts:

- | | |
|----------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| 1. The Heading , | 4. The Body of the Letter , |
| 2. The Address , | 5. The Complimentary Ending , |
| 3. The Salutation , | 6. The Writer's Signature . |

3. The Heading of a letter should give the place and date of writing. If a reply is to be sent to the place of writing, the letter should show exactly where to send it by mail. If a reply is to be sent elsewhere than to the place of writing, the fact should be indicated after the signature. (Form 8.)

1. Place. — If in a city or in any other place where they need to be known, give (a) the name or number of the house, and the name of the street (or else the post-office box). Thus: Turner's Inn, Green St.; or Park Sq. (Forms 1 to 26.)

(b) Always give the name of the city, town, or post-office to which replies are to be sent.

(c) When it would be of any use to tell the county, give that next. It sometimes happens that in one state there are several towns with similar names, so that the name of the county is needed to distinguish them; and if a town is small and little known, it may hasten the delivery of the reply to add the county.

(d) Next comes the name of the state, unless you are sure that it is not needed.

2. Time. — In familiar letters, and whenever it needs to be known, give first the day of the week. (Forms 4 and 12.) In other letters, give only the day of the month, the month, and the year. We may write 24 May, 1906, or May 24, 1906.

3. Position of Heading. — The heading may occupy one, two, or three lines, according to the space it requires. It begins an inch or more from the top, and about half way across the page toward the right. Each of the following lines, if one is not enough, should begin a little farther to the right. Always put the whole of the date on one line.

4. Heading Omitted. — Except in business letters, the heading is often omitted, and the place and time are given at the left of the page after the signature. (Forms 19 and 26.)

5. Punctuation. — Put commas after every part, except between the name and the day of the month, and between the name and the number of the street or post-office box. Put a period after abbreviations, and at the end of the whole.

Exercise. — Examine carefully the forms on pp. 273–279. Then write the following as headings properly arranged:

1. Oct. 25, 1906, Saratoga, State of New York, 217 Spring St.
2. I am in Andover, in Oxford Co., in Maine, at the Eagle Hotel, July 21, 1907.
3. At Home on Washington's Birthday, 1906, Thursday.

4. Outline model of letter showing indentions and arrangement of parts.

13 Francis St. Waverley, Mass.
Houston and Bouton Boston Mass.
3. Salutation.	4. Body of Letter.
<hr/> <hr/> <hr/> <hr/> <hr/> <hr/> <hr/> <hr/>
5. Complimentary ending.

LESSON XXI

THE ADDRESS AND THE SALUTATION

THE ADDRESS

The Address of a letter consists of the name and title of the person or firm to whom it is written. Sometimes, especially in business letters, the residence or place of business is added.

1. Name and Title. — To the name of the person addressed it is polite to add an appropriate title.

(a) Before the name we may write:

Mr. in addressing a man.

Mrs. [Mistress] in addressing a married woman.

Messrs. [Messieurs] in addressing two or more men.

Miss (pl. Misses) in addressing an unmarried woman or a girl.

Master (pl. Masters) in addressing a boy.

Rev. or The Rev. before the full name or some other title in addressing a clergyman; as, The Rev. C. F. Howe; Rev. Mr. Howe; The Rev. Dr. Howe; not Rev. Howe.

Hon. in addressing members of Congress, and a few other high officials.

Dr. in addressing a physician; or any person who has one of the titles M.D., Ph.D., D.D., LL.D., etc.

(b) After the name we may write:

Esq. in addressing lawyers, many government officers, and sometimes other gentlemen, though it is now used less often than formerly.

(c) In addressing the President of the United States, or the Governor of a State, the following forms may be used:

To the President,

Executive Mansion,

Washington, D. C.

Sir: (or Mr. President).

To His Excellency, _____

Governor of the State of _____ Sir: (or Your Excellency).

(d) There are many other titles, such as Gen., Col., Supt., which may be used in addressing the persons to whom they rightfully belong.

(e) Sometimes two or more different titles are used together; as, Prof. Wm. Hale, M.D., LL.D.; but if both have the same meaning, as Dr. and M.D., they should not be used together. With Esq., no other title should be used; and we should not say Mr. Dr. Brown.

2. Residence. — By residence is meant the name of the post-office and state; sometimes also the street and number where a person receives letters.

3. Arrangement and Position. — The address may, like the heading, occupy one, two, or three lines. The first line should contain nothing but the name and title, and should not be indented from the left margin. Each of the following lines should be indented somewhat more than the one before it.

In business letters the address should be given on the two or three lines below the heading. In familiar letters, if given in full, it should begin on the line below the signature. In other letters it may be written at the end instead of at the top, especially when the heading is very long. (Form 11.)

THE SALUTATION

The Salutation is a courteous or affectionate greeting that serves to introduce the body of the letter.

1. Form. — Its form depends upon who is writing, who is addressed, and what degree of intimacy or friendship there is between the two. Hence there are many forms from which to choose, though only a few can be given here. Where several forms are given in succession, the first are the most formal, the last are the most familiar.

(a) In business or formal letters of any sort we write:

Sir (pl., Sirs or Gentlemen);	Madam (pl., Ladies);
Dear Sir or Sirs;	Dear Madam;
My dear Sir.	My dear Madam.

A young unmarried woman is addressed simply as (for example) Miss Brown, or Dear Miss Brown.

(b) In more familiar letters, we may use one of the preceding forms, or such as these:

Friend Brown;	My dear Ned;	Cousin Clara;
Dear Brown;	My dear Friend;	My dear Mother.

2. Position. — If the address consists of three lines, the salutation may be indented as much as the second line. (Form 18.) If it consists of one or two lines, the salutation should be written a little to the right. (Forms 13, 16.)

If the address is omitted here, the salutation should begin at the left margin of the line below the heading.

Although usage is not uniform, there is a tendency among typewriters to place the salutation by itself on the line below the address without indentation. This is done so that the body of the letter may stand alone.

Punctuation. — After the salutation, use a comma, a colon, a comma and a dash, or a colon and a dash, according to the degree of formality with which the letter begins. The comma is the least formal.

Exercise. — After studying the forms on pp. 274–277, write the various addresses and salutations that you might use —

1. In writing to your father; your brother or sister; your uncle; your grandmother; your cousin.
2. In writing to an intimate friend; to your teacher; to a physician; to a neighbor.
3. In writing to a clergyman who is a stranger to you; to the chairman of your school committee; to the superintendent of schools.

LESSON XXII

THE BODY, THE ENDING, AND THE SIGNATURE

I. THE BODY

The body of a letter is the message itself, or what we have to say.

1. Contents. — Do not make such needless remarks as “I now take my pen in hand,” or “I will now close,” but begin with something worth saying; express yourself clearly and concisely in complete sentences grouped into paragraphs according to the sense; and stop when you have done. Use simple words, avoiding slang. Careless or illegible penmanship may not only occasion costly mistakes, but it shows a want of respect.

2. Position, Form, etc. The Body begins under the end of the introduction, or if that is long, on the same line with the salutation. There should be a narrow margin at the left extending the whole length of the page; we should write legibly, without crowding, and never divide a syllable at the end of a line.

II. THE ENDING

The Complimentary Ending is a courteous assurance of good faith, respect, or affection, which is added at the end of a letter. One should say something that is in keeping with the style of letter he has written, and with his relations to the person addressed; and he should at the same time express his feelings truthfully.

1. Form. — (a) In business or formal letters the common forms are:

Yours truly;	(Very) truly yours;
Yours respectfully;	(Very) respectfully yours.

And in extremely formal letters, such as are sometimes written to high officials Form 11, or something similar, may be used. (Forms 1 to 26.)

(b) For friendly or familiar letters there is a great variety of other forms, some of which are given in the models. Other examples are:

Faithfully yours;	With highest regards;	Yours ever;
Most truly yours;	Yours sincerely;	Your loving sister;
Your devoted son;	Ever most gratefully yours. (Forms 3, 6, 8.)

"Yours, etc.," is vulgar.

2. Position. — The conclusion begins on the line following the body of the letter, and is indented about one-third the width of the page. If it is long, it should be arranged in two or three lines, like the heading and the address. (Forms, pp. 274-277.)

III. THE SIGNATURE

The Signature shows the name of the person who writes or dictates the letter. When a person writes as an officer of any sort, he should add his official name (Form 14); and when he signs for another person, he should give both names. (Form 17.)

(a) The signature is to be written distinctly on the line following the complimentary ending, and indented about half the width of the page.

(b) In all business, formal, or extremely important letters, it should be written in full, and in every other letter when there might possibly be a doubt as to who sent it.

(c) A lady when writing to a stranger should so sign her name as to show whether she is to be addressed as Miss or as Mrs. (Form 19.)

Place and Date, or Address, at the End. — (a) When the place and date are not given as a heading, they are to be added in the same form at the left of the page, on the line below the signature. (Forms 19 and 26.) Or —

(b) The address may be put here if omitted at the beginning. (Form 11.)

(c) The place to which a reply is to be sent should be given here, if it is not the same as the place of writing. (Form 8.)

Model Forms. — Observe carefully the position, capitals, and punctuation of the parts of a letter as given in these forms.

Meadville, Penn.

Exercises. — Upon a properly shaped page, write the very best letter you can, whether long or short, and whatever the subject. Refer to the preceding forms and directions. Only constant practice can give you facility.

1. Your father wishes you to bring your copy-book home that he may see your improvement in penmanship. Write a letter to your teacher, asking permission to do this. You may say which book you mean, when you would like to take it, or how your father came to ask about your writing. (Use Forms 1, 24, 25.)

2. Your teacher thinks you have been rather careless in your writing, and wishes your father to wait until the close of the term before examining the book. Write to your father a letter explaining the matter fully. (Use Forms 1, 2, 3.)

3. A friend of yours named —, has invited you to drive next Saturday afternoon. Write to your mother, who is in an adjoining town, asking leave to go, and telling her all you know about how many are going, where you are to go, and how late you are to stay. (Follow Forms 2, 3, 12.)

4. Your mother has a plan to receive company at that time, and wishes you to be at home. Write to your friend about the matter, expressing your thanks and regrets. (Use Forms 5, 6, 12.)

5. Miss Elsie White, of 13 Oak St., Louisville, Ky., has received a Maltese kitten by express from her friend Mary Ford, who lives in Cincinnati. She is much pleased, and writes a letter acknowledging the gift, and mentioning some traits that she has discovered in her new pet. Write Elsie's letter. (Select from Forms 4 and 12, 5, 7, and 24.)

LESSON XXIII

BUSINESS LETTERS

A Business Letter should be business-like. Generally it is brief. Always it should be clear, straightforward, and to the point. Whatever does not bear directly on the matter in hand may be safely omitted.

The reply to a business letter should acknowledge its receipt, give its date, and refer to its contents. We may say, for example, "Your favor of the 28th ult., in answer to our inquiries, is at hand," etc.

None but the most common abbreviations are to be used, and no figures except in connection with dates and large sums of money. The sign & is to be used only in the name of a firm.

Model Forms. Observe carefully the address, salutation and ending of the forms below.

Exercises. — 1. Write to Messrs. Geo. Beck & Sons, Rochester, N.Y., asking them to send you six varieties of flower seeds, which you may name in a column, with the price of each set opposite. Write as if you inclosed a postal order for fifty cents. (Select what you think appropriate forms.)

2. Write to the postmaster in your city or town to ask the cost of sending books through the mail. Before writing decide exactly what you mean to ask. (Compare Forms 7, 15, 18, 25, 14, 17.)

3. Write the answer that, as an officer of the Government, he sends you. (Select parts of Forms 13, 14, 11.)

4. Monroe & Henry are expressmen doing business at 147 Spruce St. Write them to call for your trunk in time for a certain train which you wish to take at the nearest railroad station. Be very definite.

5. Write to the publishers of this book, asking to have a copy of it sent to some person who lives in a neighboring town, and who has asked you to buy a copy for him. Write as if you were to inclose payment. (Use Forms 9, 18.)

6. Samuel Underhill, who lives at 745 University Ave., Knoxville, Tenn., incloses an express money order for one dollar and seventy-five cents to Perry Mason Co., publishers of The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., as the subscription price of that magazine for a year. Write his letter.

7. Write to Wm. Constable & Co., asking that some samples of dress-goods be sent to your mother's address. Give them some idea of the kind wanted. They do business in Broadway, New York City.

8. Mrs. Betsey Trotwood, who lives in Fresno, Cal., at 95 Elm St., has received a tub of butter from Ralph Lane, a farmer living in Oleander, Cal. It was sent with the understanding that it might be exchanged. It is not satisfactory, and Mrs. T. writes accordingly. Reproduce her letter. (Use Form 16.)

9. Dr. Thomas F. Snow lives on Revere St., Boston, at Number 96. He wishes to purchase a residence in one of the suburbs, costing not over $5,000. He writes to Geo. H. Chapin & Co., Real Estate Agents, Journal Building, Boston, telling them what he wants, and asking them to communicate with him. Write his letter. (Use Forms 7, 18, 25.)

10. They reply to Mr. Snow, describing two places they have for sale, — one in Arlington, and the other in Melrose. They give him an idea of the size of each house, of the location, price, terms of payment, etc., and invite him to call to see them. Write their letter. (Use Forms 8, 12, 17.)

11. Write to your grocer to send you "on account" a definite quantity of four kinds of groceries. You may complain of the quality of the last oil he sent you, and explain how it burns. You will try a different brand.

12. As clerk for Bond Brothers, dealers in hay and grain, 94 Portland St., Lowell, Mass., write to the Freight Agent of the B. & M. R.R., Portland, Me., inquiring about the delay in the shipment of three carloads of hay consigned to your firm on a certain date.

LESSON XXIV

REPLY TO AN ADVERTISEMENT

Study this model form. Then write one or more of the letters called for by the exercises.

194 Warren St.,
Manchester, N. H.,
June 29, 1907.

[Form 20]

Mr. Edward C. Spinner,
Supt. of the Atlantic Mills,
Lawrence, Mass.

Dear Sir: I wish to apply for the position advertised in the Sun.

I am fourteen years old, and have just graduated from the Adams School. I am well and strong and not afraid of work, and shall try to be faithful to my employer.

I can bring a recommendation from my teacher, Mr. Ford, and another from the gentleman for whom I worked during my last summer vacation.

Yours very respectfully,
Harriet Edmunds.

Exercises. — 1. FOR SALE. A farm of thirty-five acres, all under cultivation. Price reasonable, and terms easy. For full particulars, address LEMUEL MASON, Sharon, Mass.

Edward Poorman answers this advertisement. His address is P. O. Box 315, Providence, R. I. Write his letter.

2. Mr. Mason replies, giving a full description of the farm, stating price, reasons for selling, and other facts which a purchaser might wish to know. Write his letter.

3. TO LET. A small house, in a pleasant, retired situation. For particulars, address JOS. B. ARNOLD, P. O. Box 1492, Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Allan Downs, who lives at 396 Madison St., in the same city, answers this advertisement, asking information. Write his letter.

4. Mr. Arnold replies, describing the house and giving its location, telling rent, etc. Write his letter.

5. WANTED. A boy in a hardware store to learn the business. Must be honest, willing to work, and ready to give up the use of tobacco if desired. Address, stating age, residence, qualifications, and references, FRANK PURINGTON & Co., 294 Euclid Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Guy Wheeler, who lives in Sandusky, Ohio, answers this advertisement. Write his letter.

LESSON XXV

NOTES OF INVITATION, ETC.

Formal invitations and replies are written in the third person upon note-paper or cards. They are dated at the bottom, and no signature is added. The following models may be used.

Exercises. — 1. Write for your mother to her friends, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Ayer, a formal invitation to dinner next Wednesday at six o'clock.

2. They send a formal acceptance. Reproduce it. Or —

3. They formally decline on account of a previous engagement. Write their declination.

4. Alice Harrison Doe invites her cousin, Mary Sands, to spend the holidays with her, and tells some of her plans for Christmas Day, and the week following. Alice lives at the Armington Home, Philadelphia, and her cousin at 213 Murray Ave., Harrisburg. Refer to a previous visit. (Use Forms 9, 26.)

5. Miss Mary's mother is ill, and she is unable to come. Write the reply in which she tells what she is busy about.

LESSON XXVI

THE ENVELOPE, ETC.

Fold a letter-sheet by turning up the lower edge to meet the upper evenly. Then fold twice the other way — first the left edge, then the right, making the distance between the folds a little less than the width of the envelope.

Fold the lowest third of a note-sheet toward the top, then fold the upper end toward the bottom. If the sheet is wider than the length of the envelope, fold it in the middle from the bottom to the top, and then from left to right. If the envelope is nearly square, fold the paper once in the middle.

The Superscription, or address upon the envelope, is chiefly for the benefit of post-office officials, and should be written so fully and so distinctly as not to hinder in any way the speedy delivery of the letter.

1. Contents. Besides the name and title with the post-office and state, there must be sometimes the street and number; sometimes the county; and sometimes the name of the person to whose care the letter is sent — all arranged as shown in Forms 27-30.

2. Position. The superscription should generally be on the lower half of the envelope, and each successive line should begin a little farther toward the right.

3. Punctuation is meant to be a help to the reader; and on envelopes where there is nothing but the address, and where the parts of that are already separate enough, the best usage is to omit terminal points, as in the models. It is better to give the name of the state in full, on a separate line.

4. Return Address. The name and address of the sender are often placed in the upper left-hand corner, that the letter may be returned if not delivered. This is sometimes an important addition, as when it is not certain that the letter is rightly addressed, or when the full name of the writer is not given inside. (Form 29.)

5. The stamp should be evenly placed, right end up, about an eighth of an inch from the upper right-hand corner. Inclose a stamp to pay for sending the reply, when you think it is only fair to do so.

Exercises. — Rule rectangles on slate or paper, making them the exact shape of some envelope, and copy the models on p. 284. Then write envelope addresses to the following:

1. To your father, mother, brother, sister, or some classmate; to some clergyman of your acquaintance; to a friend, in care of his or her father, whose post-office box is numbered 47.

2. To a doctor of divinity named Gilbert Shaw, living in Cincinnati at 24 Wilson Sq.

3. To Emmett, Kent & Co., a firm of lumber dealers, doing business in Clinton, Illinois. Clinton is in De Witt Co.

4. To the wife of John Alden, who lives in the capital of Ohio, at 91 Garfield Avenue.

5. To a firm composed of Miss Decker and Miss Fitz, whose millinery rooms are on Cumberland St., No. 201, Nashville, Tennessee.

Forms of superscription :

LESSON XXVII

TELEGRAMS

The parts of a telegram are (1) the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, (2) the body, and (3) the signature of the sender.

Telegraph companies do not charge for the name and address or for the signature, and hence these may be given in full. For the body of the message, however, there is a fixed charge for ten words or less, and an extra charge for each word over ten. The message, therefore, does not usually exceed ten words.

The art of writing a telegram consists in saying clearly what you have to say in the fewest words possible. The forms of courtesy used in letters are generally omitted.

Figures, decimal points, and dollar signs are counted as separate words, and compound words as one word. Numbers should be spelled out. If there is any question how the words of your telegram should be counted, inquire at the local telegraph office.

The following is a good telegram:

CHICAGO, Oct. 28, 1906.

GEORGE R. TICKER, Evansville, Ind.

Convention at Auditorium, Chicago, Thursday afternoon at two.
Bring credentials.

FRANK SIMONS.

Exercises. — 1. You were to join your father at a hotel in a neighboring city at a certain hour, but you have missed the train. Telegraph him, telling him what has happened and when you will arrive. Use ten words or less in the body of the message.

2. On your arrival at the Central House, Denver, from Chicago, you find your baggage missing. You telegraph at once to the baggage-master at the station in Chicago making inquiries, describing trunk, and giving orders. Use not more than fifteen words in the body of the message.

3. Yesterday you sent an order to Samuel Pease & Co., St. Louis, Mo., for four Monarch refrigerators, size No. 4. You find now that you should have sent for three of size No. 4 and one of size No. 5. Send a telegram correcting the error.

4. When Edward Birney reaches the fishing camp on Carp Lake, near Provemont, Mich., he finds that he has left his steel fishing-rod in the closet of his room at home. He telegraphs to his father at 624 Cherry St., Elkhart, Ind., explaining the matter and asking him to send the rod by express. Write the telegram.

5. When you bought your ticket at Forest City, you were in such haste to catch the train that you left your pocket-book lying on the ticket-seller's window. You are now at Sumach Junction. Telegraph to the ticket-agent at Forest City, describing the pocket-book, telling him how much money it contains, and asking him to send it by the conductor of the next train.

6. Reduce each of the following telegrams to ten words or less, not counting the address and signature:

NEW YORK, September 2, 1906.

OLIVER POST, 626 Orange Avenue, Tampa, Fla.

Your letter has been received, but I cannot read the name of the steamer on which you say your father is coming. Please telegraph it to me at once.

F. P. STANTON.

CHICAGO, June 5, 1907.

MISS CHARLOTTE FRIEDMAN, Little Rock, Ark.

There are three trunks in the Santa Fé baggage room one of which may be yours. You must send me a fuller description.

T. C. JOHNSON.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COL., March 24.

SAMUEL P. MARSH, Lawrenceville, Minn.

Your son Frederick has had a relapse and is now dangerously ill. You had better come on at once and bring Mrs. Marsh with you.

STEPHEN LANGDON.

CHAPTER IV

NARRATIVES

LESSON XXVIII

HOW TO TELL A STORY

A story must (1) begin right, (2) it must be told in the right order, (3) it must end right, and (4) it must contain only what is necessary. Here is an example of a good story well told. As you read, notice what is told first, what follows, and how the story ends.

My brother Frank was sent to the post-office for a letter. When he came there, the poor child found a big dog at the door of the office, and was afraid to go in. It was just the dead part of the day in a country village, when even the shops are locked up for an hour, and Frank, who is very shy, saw no one whom he could call upon. He tried to make Miss Evarts, the post-office clerk, hear; but she was in the back of the office. Frank was frightened, but he meant to do his duty. So he crossed the bridge, walked up to the butcher's shop in the other village, — which he knew was open — spent two pennies for a bit of meat, and carried it back to tempt his enemy. He waved it in the air, called the dog, and threw it into the street. The dog was much more willing to eat the meat than to eat Frankie. He left his post. Frank went in and tapped on the glass, and Miss Evarts came and gave him the letter. Frank came home in triumph, and papa said it was a finer piece of duty performed than the celebrated sacrifice of Casabianca's would have been, had it happened that Casabianca ever made it. — E. E. Hale.

1. This story begins right because it tells first precisely the things we must know to understand what follows. Thus the beginning gives the name of the boy and tells what he was asked to do.

2. It is in the right order because the events are told just as they happened:

1. Seeing the big dog at the door.
2. Looking for help.
3. Trying to make Miss Evarts hear.
4. Buying the meat.
5. Tempting the dog away.
6. Getting the letter.
7. Going home.

3. It ends right because it closes with the last thing that we want to know. There is nothing else to tell.

4. It contains all that we want to hear at this time about Frank and the dog, and it contains nothing more.

Try changing the order of the happenings and see whether the story is made better or worse.

Exercise. — A friend of yours is at the hospital with a broken ankle. To amuse him and take his mind off his pain, write for him a story about something that has happened in your school since he left. Choose the most interesting incident you can think of. Before you write consider how you will begin, how you will end, and in what order you will tell the story.

LESSON XXIX

A STORY TO BE STUDIED

AN UNWELCOME VISITOR

- 1 Many years ago, when much of our land was still covered with
- 2 thick woods, a little frame schoolhouse stood at the edge of a large
- 3 forest. Often the children in school would tremble to hear the
- 4 wolves howling near by, and sometimes, at play outside, the sight
- 5 of a pair of fiery eyes in the underbrush would make them scamper
- 6 for the schoolhouse; yet they loved to collect at the windows and
- 7 watch the troops of gay hunters who passed on their way to the
- 8 forest.

9 One fine spring morning when every one was working busily, the 10 yelping of hunters' hounds broke the stillness, and before any one
11 had time to rush to the windows to see what was the matter, a fox
12 dashed in at the open schoolroom door with a pack of hounds close
13 upon it. In a second everything was in an uproar. The fox, once
14 in the room, turned about as if it wanted to go back, but the hounds
15 in the door blocked the way, so with growls and snarls it leaped over 16 the benches, scattering the screaming children right and left, and 17 knocking over a little girl who still sat in her seat as if paralyzed
18 by fear.

19 Some of the children scrambled under benches to get out of the 20 way, others huddled together in corners, and a few nearest the door
21 rushed out, while the teacher, who tried to make himself heard in 22 the confusion, shouted, "Out at the door, everybody!" The fox
23 made for the farther corner of the room, and as the hounds closed in 24 upon it, in the general hubbub, the last of the children were finally 25 pushed out at the doorway by the teacher, and from the screams
26 of the fox and the noise of tumbling bodies they could tell that the 27 death struggle was taking place inside.

28 A group of hunters came riding up, and several hurried into the 29 schoolroom to the hounds' assistance. They had guessed what had 30 taken place when they heard the shouts of the children, but were too
31 far away to call off the hounds. They seemed heartily sorry to 32 think they had caused such a disturbance. The children now had 33 great sport talking over their unexpected visitor with the hunters
34 and their teacher, and in putting things in order in the schoolroom 35 but all work for that day was over.

—Katherine Klingel.

Read the first paragraph of this story.

What is told us in this paragraph? Does anything happen in this part of the story? If not, what is this paragraph for? Why not leave it out? What is the use of telling us where the schoolhouse stood? Do we need to know this in order to understand and enjoy the rest of the story? Why say anything in this paragraph about the fears of the children? About the hunters? Why not leave those things until the end?

Read the second paragraph.

Why does the writer tell us at the beginning that the children were working busily? Do we need to know that right here? Why not wait until the fox has come in before telling us the children were busy? Why not wait until the end of the story before saying this? Why tell about the yelping of the hounds before telling about the dashing in of the fox? Name all the happenings in the order in which they come in this paragraph. Do you see why they should come in this order?

Read the third paragraph.

Could you put the second sentence first? Why not?

Read the last paragraph.

What does it tell first? What next? What is the last sentence about? Could the last sentence be put anywhere else in the story? Why not?

Exercise. — Make a list of all the things that are told in the story. You may write it in this way:

Paragraph I. 1. What is told first.

2. What is told next.

Paragraph II. 1. What happens first.

2. What happens next.

3. What happens third.

Paragraph III. 1. What happens first.

2. What happens next.

Paragraph IV. 1. What happens first.

2. What is told next.

3. What happens last.

In line 11 why does the writer say "rush to the windows"? Why not "go to the windows"? In line 12 we are told that the fox "dashed in at the open schoolroom door"? Why not say that the fox "came in at the open schoolroom door"?

Why use the word screaming in line 16? Would it not be just as well to say "Scattering the children right and left"?

Notice the word scrambled in line 19. Would it be as well to say "Some of the children crawled under benches"? Why not? Why use huddled in line 20? Why not say "Others stood together in corners"?

LESSON XXX

A STORY TO COMPLETE

What you see here is a clipping from a New York paper. It contains a true story of a brave little boy. Unfortunately the latter part of it has been torn away and lost. See, however, whether you cannot complete the story. You will find some help in the opening sentences, and the questions below may suggest what to write.

A little boy in New York showed unusual presence of mind and courage for one so young, one day last week when fire broke out in his school. He proved a hero on the occasion and averted a panic. The boy's name is Tony Ruffino. He is eleven years old and attends public school No. 35 on Clark street, which school has 1,500 pupils.

Just before the noon recess last Monday fire was discovered under a stairway and the principal was at once notified, and an alarm sent to the fire department. Immediately the principal sounded the fire drill alarm and the children, who were accustomed to such drills, hastened to march out as usual. (The building being but two stories high it has no fire escapes.) One of the chase rooms near the stairway filled up with smoke and you can imagine the excitement among the fifty boys and girls in the room. It is a rule in the school that at fire drills the girls pass out first. The smoke, however, got the better of one boy's good sense and he made a rush for the door. Others prepared to follow him, and confusion was imminent when one small boy, Master Tony Ruffino, jumped out and faced the leader with the commanding air of a Major General.

1. What did Tony say to the boy who made a rush for the door?
2. What did the boy say and do?
3. What happened then?
4. Did the children march out in order?
5. How long did it take them to reach the sidewalk?
6. When did the fire-engines come?
7. Was the building saved?

Try retelling the whole story (1) as Tony might have told it to his father or mother when he went home at noon; or (2) as one of the girls might have told it to a girl in another room that afternoon; or (3) as the principal might have told it in a letter to the superintendent.

LESSON XXXI

A LETTER AND A STORY

The following letter was written by General Robert E. Lee to his son. It contains many thoughts that are worth noting and remembering.

ARLINGTON HOUSE, April 5, 1852.

MY DEAR SON:—I am just in the act of leaving home for New Mexico. My fine old regiment has been ordered to that distant region, and I must hasten on to see that they are properly cared for. I have but little to add in reply to your letters of March 26, 27, and 28. Your letters breathe a true spirit of frankness; they have given myself and your mother great pleasure. You must study to be frank with the world; frankness is the child of honesty and courage. Say just what you mean to do on every occasion, and take it for granted that you mean to do right. If a friend asks a favor you should grant it if it is reasonable; if not, tell him plainly why you cannot; you will wrong him and yourself by equivocation of any kind. Never do a wrong thing to make a friend or keep one; the man who requires you to do so is dearly purchased at such a sacrifice. Deal kindly but firmly with all your classmates; you will find it the policy which wears best. Above all, do not appear to others what you are not. If you have any fault to find with any one, tell him, not others, of what you complain; there is no more dangerous experiment than that of undertaking to be one thing before a man's face and another behind his back.

We should live, act, and say nothing to the injury of any one. It is not only best as a matter of principle, but it is the path of peace and honor.

In regard to duty, let me, in conclusion of this hasty letter, inform you that nearly a hundred years ago there was a day of remarkable gloom and darkness—still known as the dark day—a day when the light of the sun was slowly extinguished as if by an eclipse. The legislature of Connecticut was in session, and as its members saw the unexpected and unaccountable darkness coming on they shared in the general awe and terror. It was supposed by many that the last day, the day of judgment, had come. Someone, in the consternation of the hour, moved an adjournment. Then there arose an old Puritan legislator, Davenport, of Stamford, and said if the last day had come he desired to be found at his place doing his duty, and therefore moved that candles be brought in so the house could proceed with its duty. There was quietness in that man's mind, the quietness of heavenly wisdom and inflexible willingness to obey present duty. Duty, then, is the sublimest word in our language. Do your duty in all things, like the old Puritan. You cannot do more; you should never wish to do less. Never let me and your mother wear one gray hair for any lack of duty on your part. Your affectionate father.

Exercise. — Retell in your own words the story of "The Dark Day."

LESSON XXXII

A STORY FROM A POEM

Read the following story carefully.

THE OYSTER AND ITS CLAIMANTS

Two travelers discovered on the beach
An oyster, carried thither by the sea.
'Twas eyed with equal greediness by each;
Then came the question whose was it to be.
One, stooping down to pounce upon the prize,
Was thrust away before his hand could snatch it;
"Not quite so quickly," his companion cries;
"If you've a claim here, I've a claim to match it;
The first that saw it has the better right
To its possession; come, you can't deny it."
"Well," said his friend, "my orbs are pretty bright,
And I, upon my life, was first to spy it."
"You? Not at all; or, if you did perceive it,
I smelt it long before it was in view;
But here's a lawyer coming — let us leave it
To him to arbitrate between the two."
The lawyer listens with a stolid face,
Arrives at his decision in a minute;
And, as the shortest way to end the case,
Opens the shell, and eats the fish within it.
The rivals look upon him with dismay: —
"This Court," says he, "awards you each a shell;
You've neither of you any costs to pay,
And so be happy. Go in peace. Farewell!"

— La Fontaine.

Exercise. — Tell in your own words a story like this, of two chipmunks finding a nut. The lawyer in this case may be a squirrel. You may use the following outline:

1. The discovery.
2. The rival claims.
3. The dispute.
4. The lawyer and his fee.
5. The verdict rendered.

LESSON XXXIII

A STORY FROM A PICTURE

THE HUNTERS

In this picture we see two hunters anxiously watching the approach of some wild animal. What is the animal? How far away is it? What is it doing? Has it seen the hunters yet? Study the faces of the hunters. Which is the braver of the two men? Which is the better hunter? What is each man saying? What will each one do as the animal comes on? What will be the outcome of the struggle?

Exercise. — Write the story suggested by the picture. Before writing, consider carefully (1) how you will begin, (2) in what order the events will occur, (3) how you will bring the story to an end.

LESSON XXXIV

A SUGGESTED STORY

Commit this stanza to memory:

Were I so tall to reach the pole
Or grasp the ocean with my span,
I must be measured by my soul:
The mind's the standard of the man.

Exercise. — Try making up a story that will bring out the thought of these verses. Let it be about two boys, Edward Bell and John Dixon. Edward is tall and strong, but inclined to be selfish and overbearing. The appearance and character of John may be anything you please.

LESSON XXXV

THE MEANING OF THE TERM "NARRATIVE"

Another name for the stories that you have been writing, and for stories of any kind, is narratives.

A narrative is an orderly and connected account of what has sometime taken place, or is imagined to have taken place.

In writing a narrative of any kind —

1. Do not begin a sentence until you have thought it through and know just how it is to end.
2. Keep the order in which the events occurred, unless you have a good reason for following some other method.
3. Mention every point that is needed to give the reader a clear idea of what happened.

4. Say most about what is most important or interesting, and omit useless details.

5. Make the narrative a connected whole, but do not string sentences together with "ands."

6. Write naturally, as you would talk, and use no words whose meaning you do not know.

7. Arrange your thoughts by topics, and make a separate paragraph for each distinct topic.

8. Try to punctuate carefully as you write.

Exercise 1. — Observe carefully the events of a day or half-day in your school, making notes of what happens if need be. Next day narrate these events in the form of a letter to your uncle or aunt, following the order in which they occurred.

Say most about what is most important, but omit nothing that is needed to make the account complete. Try to make it clear and interesting.

Mail this letter if your teacher approves and thinks it is well enough written.

Exercise 2. — Narrate your experience with some pet animal — a dog, a cat, a horse, a bird, or rabbits, etc. Observe this order, and make a connected whole:

1. What pet; kind or breed, name. 2. Size, color, age, value. 3. How and when obtained. 4. When or where kept. 5. Food; what, how often, by whom. 6. Habits, day and night. 7. Friends and enemies, or likes and dislikes. 8. Intelligence; tricks, anecdotes. 9. What became of it, how much affection you have for it, or why it was worth petting.

Exercise 3. — Tell how you spent your last pleasant holiday. The following outline may help you.

1. Your subject. 2. Pleasant expectations; what preparation made; what hoped for. 3. The night before. 4. The morning; first occupation; plans for the day; company. 5. The afternoon; where; with whom. 6. The dinner. 7. The evening; all details. 8. Feelings; surprises; disappointments; enjoyment.

Exercise 4. — Each of the following may be the subject of a narrative about your personal experiences. Begin by making an outline similar to those provided in previous exercises.

1. The Fourth of July. 2. Christmas. 3. Saturday Afternoon. 4. A Day in the Country. 5. An Evening at the Fair. 6. A Shopping Expedition. 7. A Visit to the Museum. 8. How I Helped on the Farm. 9. A Day at the Seaside. 10. The Surprise Party. 11. A Base-ball Match. 12. The Toboggan Slide. 13. A Candy-pull. 14. A Day in the Kitchen. 15. A Journey. 16. A Rainy Day. 17. An Out-of-door Geography Lesson. 18. A Fire. 19. Caught in the Rain. 20. My Experience with the Toothache. 21. An Eventful Day. 22. My First Disobedience. 23. A Day on my Bicycle.

Exercise 5. — Under the direction of your teacher, visit with a companion some one of the following in the neighborhood of your school. Then make an outline, and write an account of your visit.

A Cotton Mill.

A Shoe Factory.

A Grist Mill.

The Custom House.

A Machine Shop.

A Bookbinder's.

The Poor House.

The Court House.

The Old Mill.

The Telephone Exchange.

The Ship Yard.

A Newspaper Press Room.

A Cemetery.

The Old Fort.

The Lighthouse.

The Falls.

A Brick Yard.

A Woodland Road.

LESSON XXXVI

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

Exercise 1. — 1. What is a biography?

2. Write a biography of your father, or brother, or some acquaintance.

3. What is an autobiography? Write one, using these suggestions:

Your name — birthplace and date — names and occupation of parents — place of residence — events in your life — travels — schools attended — different studies — out-of-school lessons, such as music or elocution — other occupation or pursuits — habits of rising — work to do — fondness for work — sports — books read — kind of reading preferred — friends — natural disposition — plans for future education — for business — object in life.

In collecting materials this may serve as an

OUTLINE FOR A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

- I. Introduction. Name, and how best known.
- II. Birth. Time, place, and — generally — ancestry.
- III. Childhood and Youth. Education; preparation and training for life-work; early pursuits, habits, disposition.
- IV. Chief Events of Life, public and private, in their order.
- V. Death. Time, place, circumstances.
- VI. Characteristics. Personal appearance and bearing; mental and moral qualities; likes and dislikes, ability and culture.
- VII. Results of Life. Development of self; example to others; service to individuals, to the country, to the world.

LESSON XXXVII

THE STORY OF COLUMBUS

Exercise 1. — Learn what you can about the life and character of Columbus, and then write a biographical sketch. You will find Irving's "Life of Columbus" a good book for this purpose. The following questions will suggest what you are to look for.

1. When and where was Columbus born? 2. What is known about his early life? 3. Why did he become a sailor? 4. What led him to think of a voyage to the West? 5. Where did he seek aid? 6. Where did he find aid? 7. What happened on his first voyage? 8. When and where did he land? 9. How was he received on his return? 10. What other voyage did he make? 11. What led to his imprisonment? 12. What happened on his last voyage? 13. Where and when did he die? 14. What were the greatest and best traits of his character? 15. What was it in him that made him successful?

Exercise 2. — After reading the following poem tell the story of the first voyage as the mate might have told it to another sailor upon his return.

COLUMBUS *

[1492]

Behind him lay the gray Azores,
Behind the Gates of Hercules;
Before him not the ghost of shores,
Before him only shoreless seas.
The good mate said: "Now must we pray,
For lo! the very stars are gone.
Brave Admiral, speak, what shall I say?"
"Why, say, 'Sail on! sail on! and on!'"

"My men grow mutinous day by day;
My men grow ghastly wan and weak."
The stout mate thought of home; a spray
Of salt wave washed his swarthy cheek.
"What shall I say, brave Admiral, say,
If we sight naught but seas at dawn?"
"Why, you shall say at break of day,
'Sail on! sail on! sail on! and on!'"

They sailed. They sailed. Then spake the mate:
"This mad sea shows his teeth to-night.
He curls his lip, he lies in wait,
With lifted teeth, as if to bite!
Brave Admiral, say but one good word!
What shall we do when hope is gone?"
The words leapt like a leaping sword:
"Sail on! sail on! sail on! and on!"

Then, pale and worn, he kept his deck,
And peered through darkness. Ah, that night
Of all dark nights! And then a speck —
A light! A light! A light! A light!
It grew, a starlit flag unfurled!
It grew to be Time's burst of dawn.
He gained a world; he gave that world
Its grandest lesson! "On! sail on!"

Exercise 3. — A friend of yours who has not read the life of Columbus cannot understand why so great and good a man was put in chains. Tell him the story of that part of Columbus's life. Where will you begin? With what will you end?

Joaquin Miller

Joaquin Miller, the author of the poem in this lesson, was born in Wabash District, Indiana, November 10, 1841. His real name is Cincinnatus Hiner Miller. Most of his life has been spent upon the Pacific Coast, and his poems and other writings are mostly about life in that region. His first volume of poems, published in 1871, was called "Songs of the Sierras."

LESSON XXXVIII

THE STORY OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

Use the following outline and notes for a sketch of the life of

GEORGE WASHINGTON

I. Introduction. "The Father of his Country"; first President of the United States.

II. Birth. Virginia, Feb. 22, 1732; English ancestors; father died when his son was quite young; mother a remarkable woman; his devotion to her.

III. Childhood and Youth. Plain and practical education; influence of brother Lawrence; an athlete; habits; strength of character; a surveyor at sixteen.

IV. Chief Events of Life. Marriage; home at Mount Vernon; mission to Venango; his first campaign; his part in Braddock's Expedition; the Revolution; commander-in-chief; around Boston; in New York and New Jersey; defence of Philadelphia; Valley Forge; Monmouth; Yorktown; in constitutional convention; chosen president; events of his administration: farewell address.

V. Death. At Mount Vernon, Dec. 14, 1799; mourned at home and abroad.

VI. Characteristics. Sound judgment, self-control, dignity, firmness, unselfishness, patriotism, self-sacrifice; one of the world's great men.

VII. Results of Life. Brought Revolution to a successful issue. Established the government. Held in affection by all Americans. His life an example and an inspiration. "First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Exercise. — Make a study of the Life of Washington as you find it given in books, and then write a biographical sketch. Use the preceding notes, and follow the directions given in Lesson 36.

Try to express the facts in your own language without dependence upon the words of the books that you may consult, and remember that the quality of what you write is of more importance than the quantity.

LESSON XXXIX

LIVES OF NOTED MEN AND WOMEN

Exercise 1. — Prepare notes according to the plan given, and write sketches of one or more of these

STATESMEN AND INVENTORS

John Adams.
Benjamin Franklin.
Alexander Hamilton.
Thomas Jefferson.
Andrew Jackson.
Daniel Webster.
Henry Clay.
John Hay.

Robert Fulton.
Eli Whitney.
James Watt.
George Stephenson.
S. F. B. Morse.
Charles Goodyear.
Elias Howe.
Thomas A. Edison.

Exercise 2. — Write a sketch of the Life of Longfellow, using any facts that you can remember from your reading. Those suggested here will not be enough.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, the best beloved of American poets — Feb. 27, 1807, Portland, Me. — Bowdoin College. at 14, graduated at 18 — chosen Professor of Modern Languages at Harvard at 28 — his home, a house occupied by Washington in 1775-76 — Charles Kingsley said of his face that it was the most beautiful he had ever seen — Poems noted for sweetness and purity — His courteous, pure, beautiful life the best poem of all — Died March 24, 1882 — The inheritance of his writings.

Exercise 3. — Prepare outline notes, as in Lesson 38 and write a sketch of the life of one or more of these

AUTHORS

William Shakespeare.	Ralph Waldo Emerson.
Sir Walter Scott.	James Russell Lowell.
Washington Irving.	John Greenleaf Whittier.
Edgar Allan Poe.	Sidney Lanier.
William Cullen Bryant.	Oliver Wendell Holmes.
Alfred Tennyson.	Nathaniel Hawthorne.

LESSON XL

HISTORICAL SKETCHES

Historical events are incidents in the life of a people or nation. They are parts of the story of the life of mankind; and the doings of the chief actors make up so large a part of history that a record of events is often little more than a sketch of the life of some prominent man.

Thus, a biographical sketch of Columbus necessarily includes a narrative of the "Discovery of a New World," and to tell of the "Conquest of Mexico" is to sketch the life of its conqueror, Hernando Cortez.

Exercise 1. — Prepare the outline and notes, and write a sketch of one of the following, or of any other distinguished man you may choose, so as to show the part he played in history.

Hernando Cortez.	William Penn.
Ferdinand de Soto.	John Paul Jones.
La Salle.	Robert E. Lee.
Henry Hudson.	Ulysses S. Grant.

Generally something like the following will serve best as an

OUTLINE FOR A HISTORICAL SKETCH

- I. Introduction. The subject : why interesting or important.
- II. Cause or Purpose. What led to the event.
- III. Time and Place.
- IV. Principal Actors, and their relations to one another.
- V. Details, given in natural order.
- VI. Effect produced at the time.
- VII. Conclusion. Thoughts or reflections on the event as a whole.
Influence on the nation's life or future history.

The writing of a good historical sketch, or, for that matter, of anything else, requires a clear knowledge of the subject, which must come from reading, study, and conversation. Note-taking is often helpful.

Outline and notes for a sketch of

BURGOYNE'S INVASION

- I. Introduction. Important event of Revolution.. Its influence on the result.
- II. Object. Plan to divide the country. Clinton going north from New York City, Burgoyne going south to meet him.
- III. Time, Place. June-Oct., 1777. Canada; N.Y.; Vt.
- IV. Principal Actors. Burgoyne, St. Leger, Baum; Schuyler, Gates, Stark. Duty of each.
- V. Details. Route via Lake Champlain and the Hudson; 8,000 men; English; Hessians; Indian allies. Expedition of St. Leger to Ft. Schuyler via St. Lawrence and Oswego (Oriskany), and of Col. Baum to Bennington. Both defeated. Capture of Fts. Ticonderoga, Crown Point, Edward. Two battles at Saratoga. Lost. Defeat; no retreat; no provisions. Surrender of army, Oct. 17, 6,000 men.
- VI. Effect. Americans encouraged. France acknowledged independence.
- VII. Conclusion. Victory timely, as it followed defeats. Greatest influence in ending the war.

Exercise 2. — Prepare the outlines and write a historical sketch on “Burgoyne’s Invasion,” or on one of these subjects:

The Discovery of America.	Battle in Manila Bay.
The Landing of the Pilgrims.	The Burning of the Capitol.
The Battle of Quebec.	Lewis and Clarke’s Expedition.
The Boston Tea-party.	An Incident of the Revolution.
Battle of Lexington.	Our National Flag.
Battle of Bunker Hill.	Naval Battle at Santiago de Cuba.
Arnold’s Treason.	Searching for the North Pole.

Exercise 3. — Write a little history of the State in which you live.

Exercise 4. — Prepare an outline, and write a brief history of Your native town.	New Orleans.	California.

The city in which you live.	Cuba.	Florida.
The city of Washington.	Chicago.	Texas.

LESSON XLI

INCHCAPE ROCK

Listen to the reading of Robert Southey’s story of “The Inchcape Rock.” Then retell it to the class in your own words with the help of the following outline:

Introduction.	Condition of air, sea, and ship.
Details of Story.	Why the holy Abbot placed a bell on the rock.
	How the sea looked on a certain day.
	Sir Ralph walks the deck in merry mood.
	Proposes to vex the Abbot.
	Cuts the bell from the float.
	His voyage, success, and return.
	A storm encountered.
Conclusion.	Anxiety about the Inchcape Rock.
	Fate of the ship.
	Effect on Sir Ralph.

LESSON XLII

THE AFRICAN CHIEF

Read the story of "The African Chief" by W. C. Bryant. Then tell it to the class, using the following outline.

Introduction. Description of captive. Appearance. History.

Details of Story.	{	Request for freedom. Offers ornaments.
		The refusal and intention of captors.
		Disclosure of gold concealed in hair.
		Request renewed, and reasons given.

Conclusion. Again denied, but gold taken.
Effect on the chieftain.

LESSON XLIII

THE WHITE-FOOTED DEER

Read W. C. Bryant's story of "The White-Footed Deer." Then write it as if you were telling it to a little child. The following outline will be a help.

1. The time and place. 2. Appearance of deer and her habits. 3. The protection of the cottage dame. 4. Tradition of the Indians. 5. The hunter's success. 6. His fatal shot. 7. The red-men's revenge. 8. Desolation.

LESSON XLIV

PAUL REVERE'S RIDE

Read and retell Longfellow's story of "Paul Revere's Ride." Imagine that you are Paul Revere telling the story to a grand-child. You may use the following outline.

1. The time. 2. The signal light. 3. The object of the ride. 4. Your listening friends discover the movements of the British. 5. Your impatient watching. 6. The signal at last! You mount and are off!

7. The ride to Medford. 8. Lexington village, its appearance. 9. The ride ended. 10. The result.

LESSON XLV

NAUHAUGHT, THE DEACON

Read and study carefully Whittier's story of "Nauhaught, The Deacon." Then write it from the following outline. Make several direct quotations.

1. Nauhaught and his circumstances. 2. His dream. 3. He visits his traps. 4. His success. 5. Thoughts of home and of his needs. 6. His prayer. 7. He finds the purse. 8. The conflict with temptation. 9. Reasons for keeping the money; for not keeping it. 10. The noble resolve. 11. He visits the inn and finds the owner. 12. The reward. 13. His feelings as he goes home. 14. The angel.

LESSON XLVI

Prepare an outline and reproduce from it the story of "The Frost."

THE FROST

THE Frost looked forth one still, clear night,
And he said, "Now I shall be out of sight;
So through the valley and over the height
In silence I'll take my way.
I will not go like that blustering train,
The wind and the snow, the hail and the rain,
Who make so much bustle and noise in vain;
But I'll be as busy as they."

Then he went to the mountain and powdered its crest,
He climbed up the trees, and their boughs he dressed
With diamonds and pearls, and over the breast
Of the glimmering lake he spread
A coat of mail, that it need not fear
The downward point of many a spear
That he hung on its margin, far and near,
Where a rock would rear its head.

He went to the windows of those who slept,
 And over each pane like a fairy crept;
 Wherever he breathed, wherever he stepped,
 By the light of the moon were seen
 Most beautiful things. There were flowers and trees,
 There were beves of birds and swarms of bees,
 There were cities, thrones, temples, and towers, and these
 All pictured in silver sheen!

But he did one thing that was hardly fair, —
 He peeped in the cupboard, and, finding there
 That all had forgotten for him to prepare, —

 " Now, just to set them a-thinking, I'll bite this basket of fruit," said he;
 " This costly pitcher I'll burst in three,
 And the glass of water they've left for me Shall ' tchick!' to tell them I'm drinking."

— HANNAH FRANCES GOULD.

LESSON XLVII

STORIES FROM VARIOUS SOURCES

After reading one of the following stories make an outline of it. Then write the story in your own words.

- | | |
|---|---------------------------------|
| 1. Bruce and the Spider. | B. Barton.* |
| 2. Small Beginnings. | C. Mackay.* |

CHAPTER V

DESCRIPTIONS

LESSON XLVIII

PICTURES IN A POEM

MIDSUMMER*

Through all the long midsummer-day
The meadow-sides are sweet with hay.
I seek the coolest sheltered seat,
Just where the field and forest meet, —
Where grow the pine trees tall and bland,
The ancient oaks austere and grand,
And fringy roots and pebbles fret
The ripples of the rivulet.

I watch the mowers, as they go
Through the tall grass, a white-sleeved row.
With even stroke their scythes they swing,
In tune their merry whetstones ring.
Behind the nimble youngsters run,
And toss the thick swaths in the sun.
The cattle graze, while, warm and still,
Slopes the broad pasture, basks the hill,
And bright, where summer breezes break,
The green wheat crinkles like a lake.

The butterfly and humblebee
Come to the pleasant woods with me;
Quickly before me runs the quail,
Her chickens skulk behind the rail;
High up the lone wood-pigeon sits,
And the woodpecker pecks and flits.

• Copyrighted by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

Sweet woodland music sinks and swells,
The brooklet rings its tinkling bells,
The swarming insects drone and hum,
The partridge beats its throbbing drum.
The squirrel leaps among the boughs,
And chatters in his leafy house.
The oriole flashes by; and, look!
Into the mirror of the brook,
Where the vain bluebird trims his coat,
Two tiny feathers fall and float.

— J. T. Trowbridge.

Exercise 1. — This poem is full of beautiful pictures. Mark the lines that please you best, and commit them to memory. Then, closing the book, write a description of the picture that you see most clearly.

Exercise 2. — Answer these questions about the poem, or other questions that your teacher may ask:

1. What is the meaning of "bland"? Why has the poet used it in speaking of pine trees? 2. Do you know what "austere" means? Are all trees austere? 3. Why is "fret" a good word to describe the appearance of the rivulet? What other words might be used in its place? 4. What does "nimble" tell you that would not be told by "quick," "busy," "brisk," or "active"? 5. What is a swath? 6. Is "crinkles" the best word to describe the appearance of a wheatfield or a lake when a sudden puff of wind strikes it? Why not use "quivers," "ripples," "billows," or "tosses"? 7. What do young quails do when they "skulk"? Is the word ever applied to persons? 8. How can a brooklet "ring tinkling bells"? 9. What is a "throbbing" drum, and why is this the right word to describe the sound made by the partridge?

10. What is the difference between droning and humming? What kinds of insects make a droning sound? a humming sound? 11. What is the meaning of "chatter" when it is applied to persons? Why is it properly used here of the noise made by a squirrel? 12. Why is "flashes" used in describing the oriole? Why not say "darts" or "glides"? 13. What do you think is the poet's purpose in describing all of these objects and living things? Is he successful?

LESSON XLIX

STUDY OF A POEM

MIDWINTER*

The speckled sky is dim with snow,
The light flakes falter and fall slow;
Athwart the hill-top, rapt and pale,
Silently drops a silvery veil;
And all the valley is shut in
By flickering curtains gray and thin.

But cheerily the chickadee
Singeth to me on fence and tree;
The snow sails around him as he sings,
White as the down of angel's wings.

I watch the slow flakes as they fall
On bank and brier and broken wall;
Over the orchard, waste and brown,
All noiselessly they settle down,
Tipping the apple-boughs, and each
Light quivering twig of plum and peach

On turf and curb and bower-roof
The snow-storm spreads its ivory woof;
It paves with pearl the garden walk;
And lovingly round tattered stalk
And shivering stem its magic weaves
A mantle fair as lily-leaves.

The hooded bee-hive, small and low,
Stands like a maiden in the snow;
And the old door-slab is half hid
Under an alabaster lid.

All day it snows: the sheeted post
Gleams in the dimness like a ghost;
All day the blasted oak has stood
A muffled wizard of the wood;
Garland and airy cap adorn
The sumach and the wayside thorn,
And clustering spangles lodge and shine
In the dark tresses of the pine.

The ragged bramble, dwarfed and old,
Shrinks like a beggar in the cold;
In surplice white the cedar stands,
And blesses him with priestly hands.

— J. T. Trowbridge.

Exercise 1. — Mark the lines of this poem that you most enjoy, and commit them to memory. Answer as many of the following questions as you can.

1. What is the "silvery veil"? Have you ever seen anything like it?
2. What makes the twigs of the plum and peach tree quiver?
3. What is the meaning of the word "woof"? Why is it used here?
4. What does alabaster look like?
5. Why does the poet call the oak tree "a muffled wizard"?
6. Are there any sounds to break the silence? What are they?
7. Do you know why the bramble is called "ragged"?
8. Which of these words best describes the feeling of the poet as he views the scene: joyful, cheerful, sad, somber, melancholy, pensive, calm?

Exercise 2. — Describe in your own words the part of the scene that you remember best.

LESSON L

DESCRIPTIVE WORDS TO BE SUPPLIED

Exercise 1. — Think of all the words that might be used to fill the blank in the following poem. Select the one that will best describe the motion of the reeds or the sound as the wind sweeps through them. Give your reasons for choosing this word.

SUMMER WINDS

Up the dale and down the bourne,
O'er the meadow swift we fly;
Now we sing, and now we mourn,
Now we whistle, now we sigh.

By the grassy-fringed river,
Through the — reeds we sweep,
Mid the lily-leaves we quiver,
To their very hearts we creep.

Exercise 2. — As you read the following description try to picture in your mind as clearly as you can the lake, the mountains, and the road. Then choose from the following just the right words to fill the blanks:

abruptly	steeply	precipitously	sheer	softly
gently	slowly	swiftly	furiously	rapidly

"The lake is about fifty miles long, and the eastern end of it runs far in among the mountains. These mountains are very dark and somber, and their sides rise — from the margin of the water so that in many places there is scarcely room for a road along the shore. Indeed, you go generally to that end of the lake in a steamer; and as you advance, the mountain seems to shut you in completely at the end of the lake. But when you get near to the end, you see a narrow valley opening before you, with high mountains on either hand, and the River Rhone flowing very — between green and beautiful banks in the middle of it."

LESSON LI

READING FACES

Exercise 1. — Notice the expression on the face of the dog. What does it mean? Can you find some word that will describe it? What would he say if he could speak? Why has he put his paw on the little girl's knee? Look at the girl's face. Do you think she is trying to tease the dog? Can you find any word or phrase that will describe her face?

Exercise 2. — Turn to the pictures on p. 317. Find a word or phrase that will exactly describe each face. Suggest words — why do you choose? Why do you reject?

Exercise 3. — Examine the face of the donkey on p. 324. What word can you think of that will describe it accurately?

Exercise 4. — Find words to describe the faces of the two men in the picture on p. 294.

DIVIDED AFFECTION

LESSON LII

DIRECTIONS FOR DESCRIBING

A description should be so written as to produce a clear picture in the mind of the reader.

Observe carefully these directions:

1. Learn all you can about what you are to describe: (a) By observation; (b) By experiment; (c) By reading and study; (d) By inquiry.
2. Do not try to write a description of an object unless you can see it or remember it distinctly. 3. After having gathered the material for your description, arrange it in order according to one of the plans or outlines given

4. Think every sentence carefully through before beginning to write it. Arrange what you say in separate paragraphs, according as it pertains to one or another branch of your subject.

5. Use no word or expression of which the meaning or the application is not clear to you. 6. Learn to select words that exactly describe the quality to which you wish to refer. Do not be too proud nor too lazy to use a dictionary.

7. Avoid in all your language, whether spoken or written, every slang expression — not only because slang is vulgar, but also because it is a great hindrance to the growth of one's vocabulary.

Exercise 1. — Write as if for a friend who is at a distance and has never visited you a clear and vivid description of your schoolhouse and schoolroom.

1. Describe the building: (a) its location; whether pleasant, convenient, and so on. (b) Its surroundings; yard, trees, etc. (c) Its age, size, shape, material; architecture, whether plain or ornamental. (d) The entrances, stairways, corridors, arrangement of rooms, dressing-rooms, etc.

2. Describe your room: (a) In what part of the building. (b) Size, shape; doors, windows. (c) Furniture; seats, number, arrangement. (d) Walls, blackboards, maps, ornaments. (e) Such improvements as you can suggest.

Exercise 2. — In the same general way describe —

- | | |
|----------------------------------|--|
| 1. The church you attend. | 10. The largest public building in town. |
| 2. The house you live in. | 11. A railway car. |
| 3. Your sitting-room. | 12. A children's play-room. |
| 4. Your grandfather's home. | 13. A farmer's kitchen. |
| 5. A mill. | 14. A country store. |
| 6. The nearest railroad station. | 15. An old garret. |
| 7. A blacksmith's shop. | 16. The public library. |
| 8. The gymnasium. | 17. A day in a trolley-car. |
| 9. The ball-field. | 18. An automobile. |

Exercise 3. — Take for your subject —

1. My Garden. Tell its situation; its form and size; how inclosed; how the beds are arranged; what they contain; just how you have managed it this year; what you expect to gather or to raise; what you can find in it to interest you if you will. Write simply and naturally, as you would talk to a friend.

- | | |
|--|----------------------------------|
| 2. What I see from my Piazza. | 10. The Organ-Grinder. |
| 3. What I see on my Way to School. | 11. A Game of Hide and Seek. |
| 4. The View from a Hill-top. | 12. Mowing the Lawn. |
| 5. An Hour in the Woods. | 13. The Tin Peddler. |
| 6. Learning to Swim. | 14. The Broken Axletree. |
| 7. What the City Boy saw in the Country. | 15. How the Moving was done. |
| 8. Autumn Foliage. | 16. On a Street Corner. |
| 9. How the Coal was got into the Cellar. | 17. Scenes in an Electric Car. |
| | 18. The Street Vender. |
| | 19. Scenes at a Railway Station. |
| | 20. Harvesting our Grop. |

LESSON LIII

COMPARISON AND CONTRAST

In describing an object it is often a help to compare or contrast it with something better known — showing how the two agree or differ in appearance, structure, qualities, use, and so on.

Exercise 1. — Compare the following with respect to (a) Form, (b) Parts or Structure, (c) Use.

- | | |
|----------------------------|------------------------------------|
| 1. A pin and a needle. | 8. A leaf and a flower. |
| 2. A spoon and a fork. | 9. A bolt and a lock. |
| 3. A shovel and a pickaxe. | 10. A pocket and a purse. |
| 4. A pail and a box. | 11. A fireplace and a stove. |
| 5. A sled and a boat. | 12. A thermometer and a barometer. |
| 6. A fence and a wall. | |
| 7. A watch and a clock. | 13. A chair and a sofa. |

Exercise 2. — Compare the following as to their (a) Appearance, (b) Qualities, (c) Use.

- | | |
|-----------------------|------------------------|
| 1. Butter and cheese. | 4. Leather and rubber. |
| 2. Cotton and wool. | 5. Silk and flax. |
| 3. Cotton and linen. | 6. Flour and meal. |

Exercise 3. — Compare the following with respect to their (a) Size, (b) Parts, (c) Habits.

- | | |
|---------------------|--------------------------------|
| 1. Horse and cow. | 5. Wolf and lamb. |
| 2. Hen and duck. | 6. Fly and spider. |
| 3. Cat and dog. | 7. Frog and turtle. |
| 4. Horse and camel. | 8. Butterfly and humming-bird. |

Exercise 4. — Compare the following, showing, in an orderly way, points of likeness and of difference.

- | | |
|----------------------------|--|
| 1. Two of your classmates. | 4. A doctor and a clergyman. |
| 2. Summer and winter. | 5. A farmer and a miner. |
| 3. Two churches. | 6. A telephone and a telegraph instrument. |

Exercise 5. — In the picture on p. 321, find two dogs that look very much alike. Point out the likenesses and differences.

Exercise 6. — Examine this face carefully. Then find in this book or elsewhere a face that resembles it. Point out the likenesses and differences.

Exercise 7. — In the front part of Webster's "International Dictionary" and opposite p. 1612 of the "Standard Dictionary" are pictures of the Great Seals of the States. Finding two that are nearly alike, tell the likenesses and differences.

LESSON LIV

THREE FACES

Exercise 1. — Look carefully at these pictures. Are they three portraits of the same boy, or portraits of three different boys? Give reasons for your opinion.

Exercise 2. — Choose the face that you like best, and describe it as accurately as you can.

LESSON LV

GEOGRAPHICAL DESCRIPTIONS

The description of countries, cities, rivers, mountains, and of other natural or political divisions requires careful observation and inquiry, as well as reading and study. The order in which such subjects may be treated is shown by the following

OUTLINES

I. A CITY OR TOWN

I. Situation. County and state or the like; on or in sight of what shore, river, lake, mountain, railroad, or important city — giving distance and direction.

II. Size. Area and population, compared with some other city or town. Variety of inhabitants.

III. Streets and Roads. Quality and direction. Principal means of approach and transportation.

IV. Buildings and Public Works. Number and character. Library, post-office, court-house, churches, schoolhouses, parks, bridges, monuments, etc. If a place of note — the reason.

V. Leading industry. Manufactures — what kind. Commerce — with what places. Agriculture — what products.

VI. Surroundings. Character of the suburbs; natural scenery; places of historic interest.

VII. History. Brief mention of specially interesting events, of remarkable growth and prosperity, or of disasters.

II. A COUNTRY OR STATE

I. Situation. In reference to the whole region; to other states, etc.

II. Size. Area, or length and breadth, as shown by comparison. Population.

III. Physical Features. The coast, surface, mountains, rivers, lakes. The climate and soil.

IV. Products: (a) animal; (b) vegetable; (c) mineral.

V. Cities and Towns. The more important. For what noted.

VI. Trade and Manufactures. Imports, exports, and articles manufactured.

VII. People. Race, nationality; chief occupations; character; education; religion; government. Other matters of interest.

Exercise 1. — Following the general plan given above, describe —

1. The city or town in which you live.
2. One or more of the most important cities in the United States.
3. One or more of the following:

London	Paris	Moscow	Rome	Dublin
Berlin	Birmingham	Tokio	Mexico	Florence
Liverpool	Edinburgh	Calcutta	Cairo	Vienna
Havana	Manila	Cape Town	Pekin	Panama

Exercise 2. — After collecting the necessary information from either persons or books, arrange it according to the preceding plan in —

1. A description of your native state or country.
2. A description of one or more of the following:

England	Scandinavia	Spain	Florida	Holland
New York	Italy	Chile	Greece	Mexico
France	Japan	Russia	Scotland	Australia
Brazil	China	Pennsylvania	Ireland	Java
Palestine	India	Egypt	Germany	California

LESSON LVI

DESCRIPTION OF PROCESSES

To tell how an article is made, or how anything is done, requires a thorough knowledge of the process and considerable skill in expression. We must —

1. State the object of the process; the difficulty, frequency of it, etc.
2. Describe the material used; the tools, utensils, and everything else required.
3. Mention the persons engaged in the work.
4. Narrate the details of the operation from beginning to end, telling exactly what is done.

Exercise. — Take as a subject whichever of these processes you are familiar with, prepare an outline, and write a description of it.

1. Setting a Table.
2. Making a Bed.
3. Harnessing a Horse.
4. Making a Kite.
5. Making an Apron.
6. Getting Supper.
7. Shoeing a Horse.
8. Building a House.
9. Making Traps.
10. Making Bricks.
11. Laying out a Base-ball Ground.
12. The Manufacture of Pottery.
13. Printing a Newspaper.
14. Taking Care of Plants.
15. How to Play my Favorite Game.
16. How a Beaver Builds his House.
17. The Care of a Canary.
18. Laying out a Tennis-court.
19. The Coining of a Silver Dollar.
20. Making Cotton into Cloth.

LESSON LVII

A PICTURE AND A POEM

Exercise 1. — After reading the following story find in the picture, "The Congress of Dogs," a dog like Dart. Describe him. Find other dogs that might be Prince and Swallow and little Music. How do you know which dogs to choose?

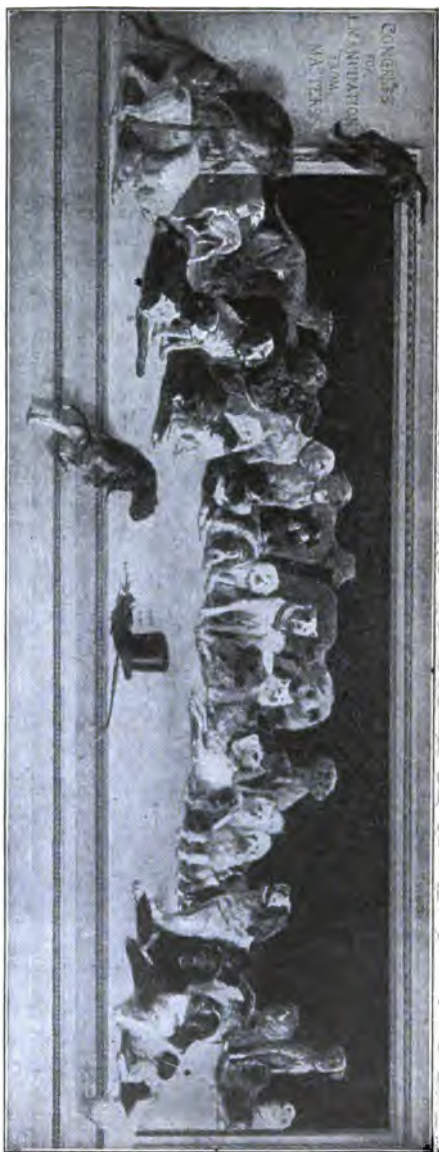

On his morning rounds the Master
Goes to learn how all things fare;
Searches pasture after pasture,
Sheep and cattle eyes with care;
And, for silence or for talk,
He hath comrades in his walk;
Four dogs, each pair of different breed,
Distinguished two for scent, and two for speed.

See a hare before him started!
— Off they fly in earnest chase;
Every dog is eager-hearted,
All the four are in the race:
And the hare whom they pursue,
Knows from instinct what to do;
Her hope is near: no turn she makes;
But, like an arrow, to the river takes.

Deep the river was, and crusted,
Thinly by a one night's frost;
But the nimble hare hath trusted
To the ice, and safely crossed;
She hath crossed, and without heed
All are following at full speed,
When lo! the ice, so thinly spread,
Breaks — and the grayhound,
Dart, is overhead!

Better fate have Prince and Swallow —
See them cleaving to the sport!
Music has no heart to follow,
Little Music, she stops short.
She hath neither wish nor heart,
Hers is now another part;
A loving creature she, and brave!
And fondly strives her struggling friend to save.

From the brink her paws she stretches,
Very hands as you would say!
And afflicting moans she fetches,
As he breaks the ice away.

For herself she hath no fears, —
Him alone she sees and hears, —
Makes efforts with complainings; nor gives o'er Until her fellow sinks to reappear no more.

— Wordsworth.

Exercise 2. — Tell in your own words the story of Dart.

LESSON LVIII

DESCRIPTION OF ANIMALS

Exercise 1. — From what you already know about The Camel, write as good a description as you can without making an outline.

Learn what you can about camels from books and persons, study the outline below, and then follow it, add to it, or use parts of it in re-writing your description.

In gathering material for the description of an animal we may follow an outline similar to that here applied to —

THE CAMEL

I. Introduction. The camel a large beast of burden; famous as "The Ship of the Desert."

II. Place where found. Arabia, Africa, Central Asia.

III. Size, Shape, and Covering. Eight feet high; much larger than a horse; ungainly; humps (one or two) on back; covered with rough, dark brown hair.

IV. Parts. Head small, like a sheep's, no horns; teeth unlike those of most herbivorous animals — more like a dog's, and suited to tearing off twigs and shrubs; neck long, no mane; body bulky; legs long, slender; knees provided with a cushion; feet broad, soft.

V. Food. Thorny shrubs, date leaves, beans.

VI. Habits and Qualities. Chews the cud; seldom needs water; has great endurance; patient, obedient, kneels for burden; vicious towards its own kind.

VII. Uses. (a) Beast of burden: 300 pounds five or six miles an hour. (b) Its milk a favorite beverage. (c) Flesh salted for food. (d) Fat melted for butter. (e) Hair made into cloth.

VIII. Conclusion. Indispensable in long journey across deserts; anecdotes, etc.

Exercise 2. — Write a description of one or more of the following, making an outline of what is important to be said.

Elephant	Beaver	Frog	Tiger	Horse
Lion	Crocodile	Spider	Raccoon	Cow
Bear	Fox	Bee	Sheep	Reindeer
Wolf	Whale	Silkworm	Butterfly	Cod

In collecting material for the description of a bird the outline below may be followed. In every case, when possible, the observation and study should be from the object itself.

DESCRIPTION OF BIRDS

I. Appearance: Form; size; actual and comparative; bill, length, how adapted for use; feet, size; toes, number, length, position, adaptation for mode of life.

II. Color: Above; below; distinguishing marking; differences between male and female; young.

III. Name: Significance of; by whom given; change in different localities; variety in one locality.

IV. Food: Kinds in summer, in winter; where and how obtained.

V. Nest: When built; where; by whom; material used; how made; size; shape; time required for building.

VI. Eggs: Number; color and markings; size; time of incubation.

VII. Young: Covering; food; time in nest; learning to fly.

VIII. Enemies: What; why to be feared.

IX. Song: Characteristics; when; birds having similar song.

X. Migration: When; where; why; routes; leaders.

XI. Value to man.

XII. Personal Observations.

Exercise 3. — In the same general way make a study and description of the following, using the outline or such parts of it as may be helpful.

Woodpecker

Bobolink

Sparrow

Swallow

Jay

Mocking-bird

Chickadee

Blackbird

Oriole

Bluebird

Owl

Meadow-lark

Gedar-bird

Kingbird

Crow

Hawk

Exercise 4. — Examine the face of this donkey carefully. Then, closing your book, tell everything you can about the donkey's appearance.

Exercise 5. — Find in the picture on p. 321 a dog whose expression is much like that of the donkey. Point out the resemblances and differences.

Exercise 6. — Learn the name of some animal that once existed but is now extinct. (If you do not know this word look it up in the dictionary.) Having gathered all the information you can about it, describe it for your classmates.

LESSON LIX

DESCRIPTION OF PLANTS

Exercise 1. — Select some plant, either wild or cultivated, of which you know the looks and habits very well, and try to describe it. Remember the stem, branches, leaves, flowers, and fruit; the shape, size, and color of all the parts; when it starts, when it blossoms, when it dies, etc.

It is one thing to be acquainted with a plant — to know how it grows, how it behaves, and how it differs from other plants in its stem, its leaves, its flowers, and its fruits. This comes only by the study of plants themselves.

It is quite another thing to know of what use a plant is to man, and what treatment it receives.

A general description of a plant as producing something useful to man may follow this

OUTLINE

I. Use, Value. For food, clothing, building material, etc.

II. Place Where Found, and How Discovered. Native or naturalized; wild or cultivated.

III. General Appearance. Height, size, trunk, bark, branches, foliage, flowers, fruit. Method of propagating.

IV. Part Used. Method of gathering or collecting it, and of preparing it for its final use.

Exercise 2. — After reading and asking questions, or after a conversation-lesson in school, make an outline, and give a general description of the plant from which we get

Flour	Sugar	Flax	Rubber	Mahogany
Rice	Cotton	Tea	Tobacco	Oranges
Corn	Coffee	Cork	Cocoa	Potatoes
Figs	Dates	Almonds	Bananas	Peanuts

LESSON LX

LISTENING DOGS

Exercise 1.—The two dogs appear to be listening to some sound that comes from within the house. What is the sound and what causes it? If there is some person in the house, tell who it is and what he (or she) is doing or saying. Describe this person. If he appears at the door what will he say, and what will the dogs do?

Exercise 2.—Describe briefly the attitudes of the two dogs.

Exercise 3.—Find in the picture on p. 321 two dogs which closely resemble these. Point out the resemblances and differences.

Exercise 4.—Suppose that you have taken a snap-shot of these dogs with your camera. In taking the picture you stood a little way behind them, but just before you pressed the button you whistled sharply. Describe the picture thus taken.

LESSON LXI

DESCRIPTION OF PERSONS

It is easy to recognize a person, to distinguish him in a crowd, and to learn his ways; but it is hard to convey clearly to others the means of picturing to themselves one whom they have not seen, or of understanding his character. We must do the best we can to describe truthfully the —

I. Figure. Whether large, tall, stout, well-proportioned, or the opposite.

II. Face. Features, complexion, eyes, hair, etc.

III. Manners. Peculiarities of appearance, bearing, action, dress, and speech.

IV. Traits of Character. Disposition, habits, peculiar traits, mental power, source of reputation.

Exercise 1. — After making an outline, describe one or more of the following:—

- | | |
|------------------------------------|--|
| 1. Your father. | 9. An Indian. |
| 2. Your most intimate friend. | 10. The most peculiar person you know. |
| 3. The family doctor. | 11. A clergyman. |
| 4. A baby. | 12. An Englishman. |
| 5. The oldest person you ever saw. | 13. A Chinaman. |
| 6. Yourself. | 14. An Italian. |
| 7. A tramp. | 15. The ideal boy or girl. |
| 8. A farmer. | |

Exercise 2. — Give directions to an artist for painting a portrait of some boy or girl in your school. You need not give the name. Describe the person so accurately that the artist will have no excuse for mistakes. Write good naturedly and avoid hurting anyone's feelings.

Exercise 3. — Describe one of the historical characters mentioned on pp. 302, 303.

Exercise 4. — Describe some character that you have read about in a story or poem.

CHAPTER VI

EXPLANATIONS

LESSON LXII

AN EXAMPLE OF EXPLANATION

Read carefully the following explanation and be prepared to answer the questions below:

1 You will often read, in books, of measuring the height of a
2 mountain, or other lofty place, by the barometer; and to most people
3 this is quite a mystery. The explanation of it is, however, very 4 simple. It is this: The earth is surrounded on all sides by the 5 atmosphere, which though very light, has a certain weight, and 6 presses with considerable force upon the ground, and upon every-
7 thing that is exposed to it. If, however, you go up from the ground,
8 as, for instance, when you ascend a mountain, the higher you go,
9 the less the pressure is. This is naturally to be expected, for the 10 higher you go in such a case, the less air there is above you to press.
11 Now, a barometer is an instrument to measure the pressure of the 12 air, just as a thermometer measures the heat or coldness of it. An 13 aneroid barometer is a kind in which the air presses on a curi-
14 ously contrived ring or band of brass, and according as it presses 15 more or less, it moves an index like the hand of a watch, which is 16 placed on the face of it.

17 The way in which you use such an instrument to measure the 18 height of a mountain is this: You look at the instrument when 19 you are at the bottom of the mountain, before you begin your 20 ascent, and see how it stands. There is a little index like the hour-
21 hand of a watch, which is movable. This you set at the point where 22 the other index stands when you are at the foot of the mountain.
23 Then you begin your ascent. You shut up your barometer if you

24 please, and put it in your knapsack, or in a box, or anywhere else
25 you please. Wherever you put it, the pressure of the air will find 26 it out, and penetrate to it, and as you gradually rise from the sur-
27 face of the earth, the index, which is connected with the curious
28 brass ring, moves slowly backward as the pressure diminishes.
29 This motion continues as long as you continue ascending. If you
30 come to a level place, it remains stationary as long as the level
31 continues. If you descend, it goes forward a little, and then begins
32 to go back again as soon as you once more begin to ascend. Then,
33 when you get to the top of the mountain, you look at it, and you
34 see at once how much the pressure of the air has diminished. From 35 this, by an easy calculation, you tell at once how high you have 36 come.

1. What is it that the writer is trying to explain? In what words does he tell this? 2. What does the writer tell us in lines 4-10? Why does he say this at the beginning rather than the end? 3. What does he tell about in lines 11-16? To what is the barometer compared? Why? 4. What is the difference between these two instruments? How are they alike? 5. What is told in lines 17-36? Could we have understood this part if it had come first? 6. Notice the words that are used. Are there any that you do not understand?

Exercise 1. — Explain to some one who is younger than you are how you can measure the height of a tree without climbing to the top of it. Before talking or writing consider carefully what you will say and in what order you will say it.

Exercise 2. — Explain how a fish can raise and lower itself in the water.

Exercise 3. — Explain how a boat can sail against the wind.

LESSON LXIII

DIRECTIONS FOR EXPLAINING

In order to explain anything we must first make sure that we understand it very well ourselves, for how can a writer hope to make clear to others what is not clear to himself?

When we are sure that we understand the subject, we should think of all the different things we want to say about it and set them down in their proper order.

A good way to begin an explanation is to state exactly what it is we mean to explain and how we intend to explain it. Then as we write it is well to observe these precautions:

1. Use the simplest language possible.
2. Tell one thing at a time.
3. Follow a definite plan.
4. Tell things in the order in which they are needed.
5. Compare the thing to be explained with something else which the reader already knows about as, for example, a barometer with a thermometer.

Exercise 1. — An old-fashioned remedy for nose-bleed is to put a large brass door-key on the back of the neck. Another remedy is to take several long breaths one right after the other. Find why either of these remedies, or both of them, should check the bleeding. Then make a careful explanation for someone who does not understand.

Exercise 2. — Some persons after seeing a flash of lightning can tell in a little while how far away it was. Find how this is done, and explain it to some one who does not understand it.

Exercise 3. — Explain to a young friend of yours how the graphophone reproduces the sound of the voice.

Exercise 4. — Which is the brightest star in the heavens? Learn where it is. Explain to someone how to find it.

Exercise 5. — Explain how the North Star may be found by one who is lost on the plains or in the desert.

LESSON LXIV
EXPLAINING A LOOK

Notice the expression on the face of the dog. Have you ever seen a human face with the same expression? What does it mean? What would the dog say if he could talk? What words would you use to describe his character?

LESSON LXV
THE POINT OF A STORY

Read the following stories. Then state as clearly as you can the point of each story, that is, what the story means.

(a) Two men once sat in a public meeting listening to a speech. When the meeting was over, one said to the other, "What did you think of that speech?" His friend replied, "It reminded me of a poplar tree that grew in my father's orchard. It was tall and beautiful, but it bore no fruit."

(b) A farmer once came to a neighboring lawyer, expressing great concern for an accident which he said had just happened. "One of your oxen," said he, "has been gored by an unlucky bull of mine, and I should be glad to know how I am to make you reparation."

"You are a very honest fellow," replied the lawyer, "and will not think it unreasonable that I expect one of your oxen in return."

"It is no more than justice, to be sure," said the farmer. "But what did I say? I misspoke myself. It is your bull that has killed one of my oxen."

"Indeed," said the lawyer, "that alters the case. I must inquire into the affair, and if —"

"And if!" exclaimed the farmer; "the business, I find, would have been concluded without an if, had you been as ready to do justice to others as to exact it from them."

LESSON LXVI

SOME PASSAGES TO BE EXPLAINED

A young friend of yours in his reading has come upon the following lines of poetry. He does not know precisely what they mean.

Explain them to him so clearly that he cannot fail to understand them.

- (a) The key of yesterday I threw away,
And now to-day,
Before to-morrow's fast closed gate
Hopeless I wait,
In vain to pray, in vain to sorrow;
Only the key of yesterday unlocks to-morrow.

- (b) We know not fully what we are Still less what we might be;
But hear faint voices from the far
Dim lands beyond the sea.
- (c) You're always sure to detect
A sham in the things folks most affect;
Bean-pods are noisiest when dry,
And you always wink with your weakest eye.

LESSON LXVII

A POEM TO LEARN

James Whitcomb Riley, popularly known as "The Hoosier Poet," was born in Greenfield, Indiana, in 1853. Most of his verses are in the Hoosier dialect, and are distinguished by their homely humor and pathos, and their musical rhythm. His first book of poems "The Old Swimmin' Hole," was published in 1883.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

THE PRAYER PERFECT

Dear Lord! kind Lord!
Gracious Lord! I pray
Thou wilt look on all I love,
Tenderly to-day!
Weed their hearts of weariness;
Scatter every care
Down a wake of angel-wings
Winnowing the air.

Bring unto the sorrowing
All release from pain;
Let the lips of laughter
Overflow again;
And with all the needy
O divide, I pray,
This vast treasure of content
That is mine to-day!*

Exercise.—A child to whom this poem has been read wishes to know what is meant by the last three lines of the first stanza. Explain them to him as carefully as you can. Use simple words and make the meaning perfectly plain. Explain also what is meant by “weed their hearts,” and “Let the lips of laughter overflow again.”

LESSON LXVIII

STUDY OF A POEM

ABOU BEN ADHEM

Abou Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase!)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw within the moonlight of his room,
Making it rich, and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold.
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And, to the presence in the room, he said,
“What writest thou?” The vision raised its head,
And, with a look made of all sweet accord,
Answered, “The names of those who love the Lord!”
“And is mine one?” asked Abou. “Nay, not so,”
Replied the angel. Abou spake more low,
But cheerly still; and said, “I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow-men.”

* From “Rhymes of Childhood,” copyrighted and published by the Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis. By permission.

The angel wrote and vanished. The next night
 It came again, with a great wakening light,
 And showed the names whom love of God had blest;
 And lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest!

— Leigh Hunt.

Exercise 1. — 1. Is this a true story? Give it in your own words, trying not to leave out any idea expressed in the poem. What is the lesson it teaches? 2. What does tribe mean here? Is it specially appropriate? Why? 3. Do you think the name Abou Ben Adhem adds interest to the poem more than some more familiar name would have done? 4. What three names are given to the visitor? 5. Is this better than repeating the word angel? Why it rather than he? 6. Explain like a lily in bloom; all sweet accord; exceeding peace; bold. 7. Is cheerly the usual form?

LESSON LXIX

MEANING OF A POEM

THE CHAMBERED NAUTILUS

This is the ship of pearl, which, poets feign,
 Sails the unshadowed main, —
 The venturous bark that flings
 On the sweet summer wind its purpled wings
 In gulfs enchanted, where the Siren sings,
 And coral reefs lie bare,
 Where the cold sea-maids rise to sun their streaming hair.

Its webs of living gauze no more unfurl;
 Wrecked is the ship of pearl!
 And every chambered cell,
 Where its dim dreaming life was wont to dwell,
 As the frail tenant shaped his growing shell,
 Before thee lies revealed, —
 Its irised ceiling rent, its sunless crypt unsealed!

Year after year beheld the silent toil
That spread his lustrous coil;
Still, as the spiral grew,
He left the past year's dwelling for the new,
Stole with soft step its shining archway through,
Built up its idle door,
Stretched in his last-found home, and knew the old no more.

Thanks for the heavenly message brought by thee,
Child of the wandering sea,
Cast from her lap, forlorn!
From thy dead lips a clearer note is born
Than ever Triton blew from wreathèd horn!
While on mine ear it rings,
Through the deep caves of thought I hear a voice that sings:—

Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low-vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length art free,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!

— O. W. Holmes.

Read a description of the nautilus. Try to find a picture, or a shell, if you are near a museum of natural history. Nobody knew much about it before 1830. Not long after this Dr. Holmes wrote the poem. The old Greek name is nautilus, meaning a sailor.

Exercise. — 1. Is it meant that the nautilus toils like the ant or the bee? 2. What is meant by stole with soft step? 3. Does the nautilus sail on the surface all the time? 4. Is it known how long each chamber serves as its home? 5. Explain or define, giving synonyms when you can; poets feign, unshadowed main, purpled wings, irised, rent, sunless, crypt, lustrous, Siren, Triton, low-vaulted, unresting, wandering sea, on mine ear it rings, heavenly message. 6. What is the connection between ven- turous, Siren sings, and coral reefs? 7. Express the chief thought of the first stanza simply in your own language, in two prose sentences. 8. Explain in a similar way the chief thought in each of the following stanzas. 9. Do you discover any plan in the poem as a whole? 10. What is the appropriateness of the last line, fourth stanza? 11. Commit the whole poem to memory. 12. Study the author and some of his other poems.

LESSON LXX

ANCIENT WEAPONS AND TOOLS

Exercise. — In this picture you see some of the weapons and tools used by the ancient cliff-dwellers of Arizona. See whether by studying them you can tell how each was made and what it was used for.

LESSON LXXI

AN OLD MILL

Exercise. — These pictures show the kind of mill with which the old Romans ground their wheat. The picture on the left shows the mill itself. The picture on the right is an old piece of sculpture showing how the mill was used. Write an explanation of the pictures, entitling it "How wheat was ground 2000 years ago."

LESSON LXXII

SOME INTERESTING WORDS

bedlam cynosure sincere sycophant porcelain

Exercise. — These words have a curious and interesting history. Look them up in the dictionary and find in any other way all you can about them. Then explain how each one came to mean what it does. The following outline may be used:

1. The derivation of the word.
2. Its earliest use.
3. The changes it has gone through.
4. Its present meaning and use.

CHAPTER VII

PARAGRAPHS

LESSON LXXIII

WHAT A PARAGRAPH IS

If we examine the language that we use in speaking or in writing, we shall find that it consists of larger and smaller groups. Groups of words join to form sentences; groups of sentences join to form paragraphs; groups of paragraphs join to form speeches or written compositions.

Further, when we consider these groups separately we see that in each case the elements of the group — the words, the sentences, and the paragraphs — have come together because they belong together. They are all needed in the group in which we find them in order to express some single, definite idea. Thus, all the words in a sentence have come together in order to express the one idea of that sentence: all of the sentences in a paragraph have come together in order to express the one idea of that paragraph; all the paragraphs of the composition have come together to express the one idea of that composition.

Read carefully the following group of sentences:

The water was full of vessels of all kinds, coming and going, or lying at anchor. These vessels were all of very peculiar forms, being built in the Dutch style, and not painted, but only varnished, so as to show beautifully the natural color of the wood of which they were made. They had what might be called fins on each side, which were made to be taken up or let down into the water, first on one side and then on the other, as the vessel was on different tacks in beating against the wind.

Notice that the sentences are all about one thing.

Sentence 1 tells us how many vessels there were.

Sentence 2 tells us what the vessels were made of.

Sentence 3 tells us how the vessels were sailed.

A group of sentences that belong together because they are all about one idea is called a paragraph.

The first word of a paragraph is begun a little to the right of the margin. This is called the indention.

The first word of every paragraph should be indented.

A good paragraph is said to have unity. This is just the same as saying that all of the sentences in it are about one thing.

A paragraph which is about two or more things, or which contains sentences that do not belong together, is said to lack unity. It is a bad paragraph.

Read this paragraph carefully:

1. At one place there was a ferry-landing. 2. The ferry-house, together with the various buildings appertaining to it, was on the top of the dike, and a large pier with a snug and pretty basin by the side of it, below. 3. There was a flight of stairs leading up from the pier to the ferry-house, and also a winding road for carriages. 4. At the time that the steamer went by this place, the ferry-boat was just coming in with a carriage on board of it.

Exercise 1. — What is the one thing the paragraph tells about?

Exercise 2. — Take a look from the window of the school-room. Then write a paragraph about something that you have seen. Be sure that the sentences are all about just one thing.

LESSON LXXIV

PARAGRAPHS TO BE SEPARATED

In the following selection three paragraphs have been run together. The first one tells about Mrs. Gray's view of the mountain, the second tells about her view of the city, the third is about her feelings in going up and down the iron stairway.

Find the places where the second and third paragraphs begin. Copy the selection, indenting at the proper points.

Mrs. Gray was very much interested in the view of the mountain, and of the column of smoke issuing from the summit. She had not seen the summit before, as all the upper part of the mountain had been enveloped in clouds during the time while they were approaching the town. She was also much pleased with the view of Naples itself, which she obtained from this platform. The hotel was built out over the water, so that from the lookout the town was spread out in full view, with all the great castles and towers which crowned the cliffs and headlands above, and the various moles, and piers, and fortresses that extended out in the water below. In coming up the iron stair, on the outside of the building, Mrs. Gray had been a little afraid; but in coming down she found the steps so firm and solid under her tread that she said she should not be afraid at all a second time.

Exercise 1. — On your way to or from school stop for a moment at a place where two streets or roads intersect. Look first to the north, then to the east, then to the west. Now write three paragraphs telling what you saw. In the first paragraph tell what you saw in front of you; in the second what you saw at the right; in the third what you saw at the left. Remember to make indentions in the proper places.

Exercise 2. — Write three paragraphs explaining how to spin a top. In the first tell how the top is wound; in the second how it is held; in the third how it is thrown. You may suppose that you are writing for a little child who has never had a top of his own before.

Exercise 3. — Give directions to an artist for drawing a picture of some wild animal. In the first paragraph tell the size, shape, and color, comparing it to some domestic animal; in the second describe the head; in the third describe the body; in the fourth describe the legs and tail. Remember to indent properly.

Exercise 4. — Examine the two paragraphs on pp. 328, 329. What is each one about?

LESSON LXXV

ORDER OF SENTENCES

In a good paragraph the thoughts march steadily from one sentence to another until the end is reached. This is because the sentences are in the right order and are connected together properly.

Notice the order of the sentences in the paragraph on p. 340.

First, we learn what the paragraph is about, that is, the ferry landing. Next, we learn what is at the landing, namely, the ferry-house, the pier, and the basin. Third, we learn about the flight of stairs and the road. Fourth, we learn about the approach of the ferry-boat.

Now put sentence 3 in the place of sentence 2. The order is then wrong. You cannot understand sentence 3 until you have been told about the landing and the ferry-house.

In every good paragraph there is a reason why the sentences come in the order in which you find them.

Exercise 1. — Read carefully the following paragraph. See whether you can explain why the sentences come in just this order. Try putting sentence 1 in the place of sentence 2. Why cannot this be done? Why should sentence 4 not stand at the beginning? Could sentence 6 come before sentence 5? Why? Could the second and third sentences change places? At first thought it would seem that the last sentence might come directly after sentence 4. But would this give a true picture of the scene? Why not?

1. The carriage was entirely open, and the party, as they drove along, enjoyed an uninterrupted view of everything around them. 2. They passed through one or two beautiful public squares, with palaces and churches on either hand, and lines of troops parading before them. 3. Then they came to a long and exceedingly busy street, with the port and the shipping on one side, and stores, shops, hotels, and establishments of every kind, on the other. 4. The street was crowded with people going to and fro, some on foot and some in carriages. 5. A great many persons were carrying burdens on their heads. 6. Some had jars, or pails, or little tubs of water; some had baskets heaped up with oranges, or other fruit. 7. Some had long boards with a row of loaves of dough upon them, which they were taking to the bakers to be baked.

Exercise 2. — Examine in the same way the paragraphs on pp. 27, 71, 312, 328, 329, 339.

LESSON LXXVI

STUDY OF POEMS

Exercise 1. — Make a study of "The Water Fowl," p. 142.

1. Can you tell what species of bird is meant? 2. Is it one of a flock? 3. What is the time of day? Of the year? 4. Would the bird probably be in sight of the poet all day? 5. In the sixth stanza why did the poet write scream instead of sing? 6. Can you see any reason why the poet says abyss of heaven? What does it mean? 7. Why capital in Power? 8. What is the force of zone to zone? 9. Show the close connection between stanzas 5 and 6. 10. Should there be a period after near? 11. Would the arrangement be improved by putting the fourth stanza next to the last? 12. Make a list of all the words in the poem that would probably not be used in prose. 13. Tell what you can of the author.

Exercise 2. — Make a study of "The Concord Hymn," p. 105.

1. What event is here commemorated? 2. One line of the poem is very often quoted; which is it? 3. What does this line mean? 4. What is the name of the dark stream that seaward creeps? 5. Does creeps quite harmonize with the flood of the first line? What does flood mean here? 6. Explain the use of soft. 7. With what meaning is redeem used? 8. What examples of personification does the poem contain? 9. What is the meaning of embattled, votive, redeemed, shaft? 10. Why use semicolons in second stanza instead of periods or commas? Explain the meaning of the last stanza.

APPENDIX II

I. CAPITALS, PUNCTUATION, ETC.

A capital letter should be used to begin —

1. Every independent sentence, and generally every phrase or clause separately numbered.

2. Every line of poetry.

3. Every direct quotation.

4. All words used as proper nouns; words made from proper nouns; and abbreviations of them.

5. Names and titles applied to the Deity, to the Savior, to the Trinity, to the Virgin Mary, and to the Bible.

NOTE. — Pronouns standing for the Deity should begin with capitals when necessary to make their antecedent clear.

6. Titles of honor, respect, and affection, and official titles applied to a particular person or used with a name.

7. The principal words in the title of books, pictures, periodicals, or in the headings of chapters, etc.

8. The names of political parties, religious denominations, races of men, words used to name certain regions or sections of a country, and names of special importance.

9. The words I and O should always be capitals.

NOTE. — Important words may be capitalized for emphasis, but capitals should be used sparingly for this purpose. The present tendency is to use capitals much less than formerly.

Exercise 1. — Justify the use of capitals in the following words and expressions:

Parent of Good, the Almighty, the Son of man, the Gospel, the Atlantic Ocean, New York City, Tuesday, March, African, Penn., his Honor, the Duke of Portland, General Miles, the Mayor of Duluth, Admiral Sampson, the North, Hoosier, the Baptists, the North of Europe, Whigs and Tories, Come, gentle Spring, the Declaration of Independence, Prescott's Conquest of Peru, The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table.

Italic letters are used in printing —

1. To indicate emphatic words.
2. For short titles of books, pictures, etc., and names of ships.
3. For foreign words introduced into an English sentence.
4. For words mentioned by name; as the adverb quickly.

One line under a word in manuscript shows that it is to be printed in italics; two lines, in SMALL CAPITALS; three, in CAPITALS.

PUNCTUATION

If we carefully observe the marks used by the best writers and publishers, we shall find that there is great diversity among them.

Some discard the use of the colon entirely. Many prefer as few capitals, italics, and punctuation marks as possible.

Some books have the period after the headings of chapters and pages, others do not.

This is a matter of taste and prevailing custom. Sometimes, however, the simple omission of a comma in a personal letter may decide an important case in law; and a bill before the Massachusetts legislature was known as the "Semicolon Bill," because its meaning depended entirely upon the placing of a semicolon.

We shall not find good writers careless or inconsistent. When we write, we want to leave no chance of being misunderstood. When we speak, the tones of the voice and expression of the face help to make our meaning clear. If we are writing we need the help that punctuation marks can give us.

The rules for their use which are given below, have been agreed upon by the majority of our most careful writers. In many cases each mark has its own use, and no other can fill its place as well; in other cases we have to use our own judgment.

It is well for us to understand as many proper uses of punctuation marks as possible.

FOR REFERENCE. — Hill's "General Rules for Punctuation," Bigelow's "Handbook of Punctuation," and Wilson's "Treatise on Punctuation."

I. The Period (.) is used after —

1. A complete expression that is not interrogative or explanatory;
2. Abbreviations, initial letters, and Roman letters used as numerals;

Example: Sept., W. B. Richards, VII.

3. A heading, title, or signature, when it stands alone.

II. The Comma (,) —

Separates from the rest of the sentence —

1. The name of the person or thing addressed;
Examples: Richard, did you hear the alarm?
My country, 'tis of thee.

NOTE. — Sometimes we find an exclamation point in such examples.

See § 238.

2. A direct quotation, or the parts of one if it is divided;

Example: "Sir," replied I, "you do not know the cause of my grief."

Sets off —

3. Appositive words and phrases;

Example: Robinson, the best player of the eleven, has broken his leg. See Exercise 100.

4. Adjective clauses, when non-restrictive or explanatory; also adverb phrases and clauses which are separated from the words they modify; and, often, conditional and concessive clauses.

NOTE. — Single noun clauses are not usually set off by commas.

Examples: "The gray squirrels are fond of the high-bush blue-berries, which grow in abundance on the margin of the pond."
— F. Bolles.

The rain having ceased, we went for Mayflowers.

"The Speedwell is noticeable during June and July, when clusters of these tiny flowers brighten many a waste spot along the sunny roadsides."

— Mrs. Dana: "How to Know the Wild Flowers."

"As I pick my way through marshy inland woods, its bright fronds, standing nearly three feet high, crowd about me."

— "The Marsh Fern": Mrs. Dana.

"If a man is slovenly in his ninety-nine cases of talking, he can seldom pull himself up to strength and exactitude in the hundredth case of writing."

— G. H. Palmer.

"Though old the thought and oft expressed,
'Tis his at last who says it best."
— Lowell.

5. The Comma is used to separate the parts of a series of co-ordinate words or expressions when there are no connecting words; and sometimes, when there are such connecting words, for the sake of emphasis or distinctness.

Example: Franklin, Washington, Webster, and Lincoln, have been called the four greatest Americans.

NOTE. — Here the comma is used before "and"; it also sets off the long subject.

6. It shows that words are omitted.

Example: John was short of stature; Henry, tall.

7. It is used, in general, whenever a short pause is desired for a clearer understanding of the sentence.

"Obviously, good English is exact English."

— Palmer's "Self Cultivation in English."

III. The Semicolon (;) —

1. Separates long clauses, and sometimes sentences which are themselves divided by commas. Its use after the sentences forming a paragraph, instead of the period, is to keep a closer connection of thought.

Example: "Sometimes we leave an idea to be inferred from the context; sometimes we have more than one way of expressing the same idea; and sometimes we can express an idea only imperfectly; or not at all."

— Henry Sweet: "English Grammar."

2. Has the same uses as the comma when a longer pause is desired.

The wind is chill;
But let it whistle as it will,
We'll keep our Christmas merry still.

— Marmion.

3. Is sometimes used instead of the colon, as a mark of specification; and, like the colon in such cases, is often followed by a dash.

IV. The Colon (:). Although some writers discard the colon altogether, it has a distinct use —

1. As a mark of specification; as in introducing a formal statement or definition.
2. After the address in formal letters.
3. It is also used to separate the parts of a sentence which are themselves divided by semicolons. Such sentences may, however, be punctuated by commas and semicolons.

V. The Interrogation Point (?) is used after every direct question.VI. The Exclamation Point (!) is used after any expression that is highly exclamatory.

NOTE. — Every interjection was formerly followed by the exclamation point. Now it is used only at the end of an exclamatory expression, unless there are certain words distinctly requiring it. The interjection O never has it unless standing alone, when it is written Oh!

VII. The Dash (—) is properly used —

1. When there is a sudden break in the sentence.
2. To show omissions,

As— vs. 32–40. b. 1840, d. —

3. Instead of parentheses two dashes inclose something which is necessary to the meaning, yet is an interruption.
4. After other marks, to add to their force, or to introduce illustrations or several dependent expressions. In the latter case it follows a colon or semicolon.

NOTE. — The dash is perhaps more carelessly used than any other mark. The more closely we can keep each mark to a definite use the better for the reader.

VIII. The Hyphen (-) —

1. Joins the parts of some compound words.

Example: Anglo-Saxon, great-grandfather, olive-green, but not New York, fisherman, etc.

NOTE. — Observation will teach us when to use the hyphen in compound words. Some of the examples given above are sometimes written without the hyphen. Like other marks, it should be used only when needed.

2. It is used between the syllables of a word on different lines.

IX. Quotation Marks (" ")

1. Always inclose a direct quotation, or the parts of such a quotation if it is divided by words not belonging to it.

Example: "Yes, sir," said the messenger, "I will attend to it."

But an indirect quotation requires no marks.

Example: The messenger said that he would attend to it.

2. When a quotation consists of several paragraphs or stanzas, the marks are used only at the beginning of each, and at the close of the last.
3. The titles of books, magazines, etc., are sometimes inclosed in quotation-marks, and sometimes printed in italics.

NOTE.— If a writer uses the double marks for quotation, single marks inclose an inner quotation, and vice versa.

X. The Apostrophe (') is used

1. To form the plurals of letters, figures, and other marks, as —
Dot your i's, and cross your t's; 3's and 4's, + 's, etc.
2. To show possession, with or without s. (See §222.)
3. To show the omission of one or more letters.

Can't, isn't, e'er, o'clock.

XI. The Parenthesis and Bracket, (), [],

Inclose the expressions which do not strictly belong to the sentence. The parenthesis is the more common form.

The bracket is generally used by editors in supplying missing words, dates, and the like, and for corrections, additions, or explanations.

XII. Asterisks (), or (. . .),

Show that omissions are made in what is copied or quoted.

Single asterisks and other marks, used for footnotes or references, explain themselves.

XIII. For the use of marks in letter-writing see pp. 273-277.

II. THE DEVELOPMENT OF OUR LANGUAGE

No language ever came into being ready-made. A language, like a plant, is always a growth. It has its period of development from small beginnings, its time of vigorous maturity, and, it may be, of decline. The history of a tongue, or even of a dialect, is of necessity closely connected with that of the people using it. As a nation grows in power, the influence of its language must also spread; so, too, must that influence share in the decline of the people to which it belongs. The literature may indeed remain, but even that cannot grow. The splendid literatures of Greece and Rome are no richer today than they were when the Greeks succumbed to the Roman power, and the Romans to the barbarous hordes from Central Europe in the fifth century. Our own language is now a great power in the world because the tremendous activity of the English-speaking race has carried it to every quarter of the globe.

The history of the English tongue is most interesting, bound up as it is in that of the English people — sharing in, and by its very form recording, the changes that have marked the wonderful development of the race. Fully to understand the language as we use it today, one should trace this history from the earliest time when English is recognizable as a distinct tongue. This is a long task; yet a few of the most important changes should be familiar to every one who wishes to read intelligently its literature.

The Britons. — The earliest race contributing definitely to make English history and the English language, which is known to have inhabited the island of Great Britain, was that of the fierce and hardy Britons. Attacked by Julius Cæsar, who led his Roman legions across the British Channel in the year B.C. 55, they were overpowered or driven into the fastnesses of Wales and Scotland by the close of the first century after Christ. Since the Britons never became thoroughly united with their conquerors, few of their customs, or their words, remain. Yet, in the proper names Avon, Exeter, Oxford, Thames, and in such familiar words as cradle, glen, havoc, pool, and mug, we have relics of the language that was spoken in England before the Christian Era.

The Romans. — For four centuries, or thereabouts, the Romans held sway over the greater portion of the island. Their dominion is marked in our vocabulary by the presence of wall, from the Latin vallum, and of street, from strata (via), a paved (road or way). For, to hold their possessions, it was necessary that the conquerors should establish many camps, or castra as they called them, and that these camps should be surrounded by walls, and connected by military roads, or streets. The word castra is seen also in the names of many of the towns where these camps were planted, as, Lancaster, Gloucester, Chester, and Manchester, and testifies to the Roman occupation just as those names in the United States do to the English settlement of this country.

Angles, Saxons, and Jutes. — Soon after the withdrawal of the Roman forces the land was invaded anew by a race distinct from Britons and Romans. They came from the lowlands of Europe that skirt the German Ocean and the lower Baltic, and spoke a language closely akin to that now in use there. Three divisions of this new Teutonic race came over at various times, in the latter part of the fifth century — Angles, Saxons, and Jutes.

For a hundred years and more the struggle lasted between the Britons and their foes. Finally, however, the land came into the possession of the Angles and the Saxons, who, as well as the Jutes, ultimately united to form the Aenglisc or English people, and who gave its name and its character to the English language. They, in their turn, it is true, were assailed by invaders — the fiery Norsemen from Denmark and Norway; but the new invaders were originally of the same blood, and in a measure mingled with, rather than absolutely over-powered, the English race, now fairly established in Britain. The influence, therefore, of this Norse invasion upon the language is not to be readily distinguished.

It is this Anglo-Saxon tongue, then, that forms, as it were, the framework of the English language as used by Alfred the Great ten centuries ago, and as we use it today. For more than five hundred years this was the speech of England.

The Normans. — While, like any other language, English suffered many modifications, there was no radical change till there came a new conquest of the island in A.D. 1066. In that year the Normans crossed from Northern France, and, after years of hard and bitter fighting, conquered the mingled Angles, Saxons, and Danes, and established a new rule, new manners, and, in part, a new language in the land. This new language, the Norman-French, was in reality but a modified form of the Latin, which the Romans, under Julius Cæsar, had introduced into France more than a thousand years before. The new customs brought by the invaders planted, of course, a large number of new words in the language of England, but its structure remained substantially Anglo-Saxon as before. Forms, however, were gradually becoming simpler. While the foreigners readily contributed new words and new ideas, they were impatient of adopting the forms of speech of their subjects; and the very shape of the words of English origin, as well as that of the borrowed terms, was modified in the course of the centuries required to unite the two races into one people. Palace, castle, language, people, fashion are examples of Norman-French words brought into our language through the Latin.

The Revival of Learning. — Another era that marks a comparatively sudden change in the language is that of the centuries which gave us the invention of printing and the discovery of America. One of the results of the great quickening of thought that distinguishes this period was the awakening of an interest in the ancient classics. A knowledge of the literature and the language of Greece and of Rome came to be regarded as an absolute essential in the training of every educated person. This era, known as "The Revival of Learning," is responsible for the introduction of great numbers of Latin and Greek words.

Modern Additions. — In more recent times there has been a somewhat steady growth in the vocabulary, as inventions and scientific discoveries have made necessary the creation of new terms. Latin, and especially Greek, have furnished a multitude of words in science, and indeed for household use. Telegraph, telephone, bicycle, geography, automobile, multiplication, invention, are familiar words drawn into common service from these sources. Commerce and travel have supplied large numbers of words from almost every civilized language on the earth. From the French, for example, we have borrowed apartment, cadet, burlesque; from the Italians, pilgrim, cupola, lava; from the Spanish, indigo, vanilla, cork; from Persia, candy, chess, caravan; from Africa, oasis, guinea, canary; from Arabia, admiral, coffee, lemon, etc. The Philippines, Cuba, and Porto Rico are likely to furnish many more terms through the channels of trade and social intercourse.

Losses. — In this way a wonderfully rich and varied vocabulary has been built up in the English language, which is equalled by that of no other tongue. It must not be supposed, however, that the process of change has been wholly one of addition — that there have been no losses. If one tries to read for the first time a page of Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales," however familiar he may be with the English of today, he will seem to be trying to read a new language. Many of the words will be entirely strange, and even words that he recognizes will be oddly spelled. Yet Chaucer has been called "a well of English undefiled." Words once in common use have disappeared, and the spelling of those still remaining has been greatly modified.

A clerk ther was of Oxenford also,
That un-to logik hadde longe y-go.
As lene was his hors as is a rake,
And he was not right fat, I undertake;
But loked holwe, and ther-to soberly,
Ful thredbar was his overest courtepy;
For he had geten him yet no benefyce,
Ne was so worldly for to have offyce.

A clerk there was of Oxford also,
That unto logic had long gone,
As lean was his horse as is a rake,
And he was not right fat, I undertake;
But looked hollow, and likewise soberly,
Full threadbare was his uppermost short cloak;
For he had gotten him yet no benefice,
Nor was so worldly for to have office.

— From Skeat's "The Works of Geoffrey Chaucer."

The English language, or rather the Anglo-Saxon, like the ancient Latin and Greek, and the modern French and German, had a great many inflected forms. Where now a noun has two case-forms, it once had five; an adjective had at least nine different case-forms, for an adjective was made to agree with its noun in gender, number, and case; and the forms of the verb were much more numerous than at present. That is, English as first spoken, was rich in inflected forms for showing the relations of words to one another in the sentence. As such forms are most often made by attaching endings to the stems of nouns, pronouns, adjectives, and verbs, languages abounding in inflections are called synthetic languages. (Synthesis means putting together.) In the English of today these relations in the case of nouns and pronouns are expressed mainly by prepositions, and in the case of verbs many of the modifications in meaning are expressed by the use of auxiliaries. A language that is so constructed is called analytical. (Analysis means taking apart, or separating.)

Hardly less wonderful, perhaps, than the extraordinary development of its vocabulary, is the slow process by which English has changed from a synthetic to an analytical language. It has in this way gained greatly in simplicity, though it must be granted that there has been in some degree a loss in precision and in delicacy of expression. The pronunciation and the uncouth spelling of many English words bears curious and sometimes most perplexing witness to the vicissitudes through which our language has passed.

Present Changes. — The process of dropping inflections seems nearly to have reached a limit, yet there are two forms of the verb which we may even now see undergoing the process of reduction. The distinction in the use of shall and will in forming the Future Tense is less carefully observed by intelligent writers and speakers of today than it was by those of the middle of the nineteenth century, or earlier. This is true also of should and would. Again, the subjunctive mood as a distinct form has almost disappeared from common speech, though it is sparingly employed in literature. In discarding the subjunctive the language seems to be losing something of the delicacy of expression it once had. English, however, is at the opening of the twentieth century the greatest language power in existence, and bids fair to become ultimately the universal tongue.

III. DERIVATION AND WORD-BUILDING

How Words are Formed. — Most words have been made from older ones by adding something at the beginning or at the end, or by some other change which gives a slightly different meaning. Often one word is made by putting two others together.

Thus from numb we have benumb and numbness. From drip we have drop and droop. Rail and road make railroad.

A Word made from an Older One is a Derivative.

What has been put before a word to make a derivative is called a Prefix.

LIST OF PREFIXES FOR REFERENCE*

A or ab, abs, away from; abhor, abscond.

A, an (G) not, without; atheist, anonymous.

Ad, to, toward; adjoin, admix, adapt, adverb.

For ease of speaking, the d of ad is usually changed to match a following consonant, and so we often have with the same meaning ac, af, ag, al, an, ap, ar, as, or at; accost, affix, aggressive, alluring, annex, approach, arrange (set to rights), assist (give help to), attach.

Amb, am, all round; ambiguous (not direct).

Amphi (G) on both sides; amphitheater.

Ana (G) up, back again; analysis (taking to pieces).

Ante, before; anteroom.

Anti, ant (G) against, opposite; antidote, antartic.

Apo (G) away from; apostle (one sent out).

Bene, well; benefactor.

Bis, bi, twice, two; biped.

Cata (G) down; cataract.

Circum, around, also circu; circumnavigates, circuitous.

Con, with, together; also col, com, cor, co; convention, collision, combine, correspond, coöperate.

Contra, against, also counter (F) contradict, counter-balance.

De, down, from; depress, deliver.

Dia (G) through, across; diameter.

Dis, di, in two, apart, also dif; disband, divorce, different.

Duo, du, two; duodecimo, duet.

Epi (G) upon, to; epitaph (upon a tomb).

Eu (G) well; eulogy.

Ex, e, out, from, also ef; exhale, erase, efface.

Extra, beyond; extravagant.

Hemi, half; hemisphere.

In, into, upon, also il, im, ir, en, em; intrude, illumine, implant, irrigate, enlighten, embalm.

In, not, also il, im, ir; infirm, illegal, imprudent, irregular.

Inter, between; interrupt.

Ob, against, also of, op; obstruct, offend, opponent.

Pen, almost; peninsular.

Per, through, thoroughly; perforate, perfect.

Post, after; postscript.

Pre, before; predict.

Pro (L G) before; programme.

Re, back, again, also red; reform, redeem.

Semi, half; semicircle.

Sub, under, also for ease of speaking as before, suc, suf, sup, sur, sus, su; subscribe, succumb, suffix, support, surreptitious (creeping under), suspend.

Super, above, over, also sur (F) superintend, surpass.

Trans, tra, across, beyond; transport, traverse.

* The abbreviation (L) stands for Latin, (G) for Greek, (F) for French, (E) for English: but all listed forms are Latin unless otherwise marked.

SUFFIXES

What is added at the end of a word to make a derivative is a Suffix.

LIST OF SUFFIXES

Able (E) and ible (E) form adjectives meaning that may be; readable, perceptible.

Aceous or acious means containing something, or rather so and so; herbaceous, loquacious.

Age denotes a collection or sum total; also a state or a process; herbage, leakage, marriage, tillage.

Some (E) and y (E) form descriptive adjectives; winsome, rusty.

Ty makes an abstract noun; purity, cruelty.

Ward (E) makes an adjective or an adverb to show direction; seaward.

STEMS

Often from a single old form many new words have been made by varying the prefixes and suffixes, or by combining one word with another.

We do not always see an older word in each of these new ones, for the form of a word changes by use. But we commonly find some syllable, or group of letters, called the Stem, which shows from what the word was first made.

When two or more words have the same stem, they must have been derived from the same original source. We shall, therefore, find some connection in meaning among them, though they may look and sound very unlike.

LIST OF STEMS

Ag, do, act; agile, agitate, agent, transact.

Alt, high; altitude, altar, exalted, (very high), alto (a high part).

Anim, life, mind; animal, animated, unanimous, magnanimous.

Exercise. — 1. Define any of the words in the Selections for Study by giving (a) the meaning of the stem, (b) of prefix or suffix.

2. Arrange several groups of words having (1) the same stem, (2) the same prefix, (3) the same suffix, and give the meaning of each word.

3. Make a list of words that are compounded of two or more simple words. Discriminate carefully in the use of the hyphen.
